TEMPEST.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

ALONSO, king of Naples.
SEBASTIAN, his brother.
PROSPERO, the rightful duke of Milan.
ANTONIO, his brother, the usurping duke of Milan.
FERDINAND, son to the king of Naples.
GONZALO, an honest old counsellor of Naples.
ADRIAN, } lords.
FRANCISCO, }
CALIBAN, a savage and deformed slave.
TRINCULO, a jester.

STEPHANO, a drunken butler.
Master of a ship, Boatswain, and Mariners.
MIRANDA, daughter to Prospero.

ARIEL, an airy spirit.
IRIS, CERES,
JUNO, } spirits.
Nymphs, Reapers,

Other spirits attending on Prospero.

Scene,—The sea, with a ship; afterwards an uninhabited island.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

On a ship at sea.

A storm with thunder and lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain,—

Boats.—Here, master: What cheer?

Master. Good: Speak to the mariners: fall to't yarely, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

[Exit.]

Enter Mariners.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts; cheerly, cheerly, my hearts; yare, yare: Take in the top-sail; Tend to the master's whistle.—Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, FERDINAND, GONZALO, and others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, Boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour; Keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence: trouble us not.

Gon. Good; yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts.—Oat of our way, I say. [Exit.]

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks, he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hang'd, our case is miserable. [Exit.]

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the top-mast; yare; lover, lower; bring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.—

Re-enter SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, and GONZALO.

Yet again? what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat! you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him from drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nut-shell, and as leaky as an unstaunch'd wench.

Boats. Lay her a-board, a-board; set her two courses; off to sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

[Exeunt.]

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers! let us assist them,

For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.—

This wide-chopp'd rascal;—'Would, thou might'st lie drowning,

The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hanged yet;

Though every drop of water swear against it,

And gape at wid'st to glut him.

[A confused noise within.] Mercy on us!—We split, we split!—Farewell, my wife and children!

—Farewell, brother!—We split, we split, we split!

Ant. Let's all sink with the king. [Exit.]

Seb. Let's take leave of him. [Exit.]

Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, any thing: The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The island: before the cell of Prospero.

Enter PROSPERO and MIRANDA.

Mira. If by your art, my dearest father, you have put the wild waters in this roar, allay them:

The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,

But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek,

Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd

With those that I saw suffer! a brave vessel,

Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her,

Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart! Poor souls! they perish'd.

Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er

It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and

The freighting souls within her.

A

Pro. Be collected ;
No more amazement : tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day !

Pro. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee,
(Of thee, my dear one ! thee, my daughter !) who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am ; nor that I am more better Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Mira. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. 'Tis time
I should inform thee further. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magick garment from me.—So ;
[Lays down his mantle.]
Lie there my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes ; have comfort.

The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order'd, that there is no soul—
No, not so much perdition as an hair,
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink.
Sit down ;

For thou must now know further.

Mira. You have often Begun to tell me what I am ; but stopp'd,
And left me to a bootless inquisition ;
Concluding, Stay, not yet.—

Pro. The hour's now come ;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear ;
Obey, and be attentive. Can'st thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell ?
I do not think thou can'st ; for then thou wast not Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pro. By what ? by any other house, or person ?
Of any thing the image, tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'Tis far off ;
And rather like a dream, than an assurance That my remembrance warrants : Had I not Four or five women once, that tendered me ?

Pro. Thou had'st, and more, Miranda : But how is it,

That this lives in thy mind ? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time ?
If thou remember'st aught, ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here, thou may'st.

Mira. But that I do not Pro. Twelve years since, Miranda, twelve years since,

Thy father was the duke of Milan, and
A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father ?
Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and She said—thou wast my daughter ; and thy father Was duke of Milan ; and his only heir
A princess ;—no worse issued.

Mira. O, the heavens !
What foul play had we, that we came from thence ?
Or blessed was't, we did ?

Pro. Both, both, my girl :
By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heav'd thence ;
But blessedly help hither.

Mira. O, my heart bleeds
To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance ! Please you, further.

Pro. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd Antonio,—
I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should Be so perfidious !—he, whom next thyself
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The manage of my state ; as, at that time,
Through all the signiories it was the first,
And Prospero the prime duke ; being so reputed
In dignity, and for the liberal arts,
Without a parallel ; those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported,
And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me ?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.

Pro. Being once perfected how to grant suits,

How to deny them ; whom to advance, and whom
To trash for over-topping ; new created
The creatures that were mine ; I say, or chang'd them
Or else new form'd them : having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts
To what tune pleas'd his ear ; that now he was
The ivy, which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck'd my verdure out on't.—Thou attend'st not
I pray thee, mark me.

Mira. O good sir, I do,
Pro. I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicat
To closeness, and the bettering of my mind
With that, which, but by being so retir'd,
O'er-priz'd all popular rate, in my false brother
Awak'd an evil nature : and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falshood, in its contrary as great
As my trust was ; which had, indeed, no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He, being thus lorded,
Not only with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact,—like one,
Who, having, unto truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie,—he did believe
He was the duke ; out of the substitution,
And executing the outward face of royalty,
With all prerogative :—Hence his ambition Growing,—Dost hear ?

Mira. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

Pro. To have no screen between this part he play'd
And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan : Me, poor man !—my library
Was dukedom large enough ; of temporal royalties
He thinks me now incapable : confederates
(So dry he was for sway) with the king of Naples,
To give him annual tribute, do him homage ;
Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
The dukedom, yet unbow'd, (alas, poor Milan !)
To most ignoble stooping.

Mira. O the heavens !

Pro. Mark his condition, and the event ; then tell me,
If this might be a brother.

Mira. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother :
Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Pro. Now the condition.

This king of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearsken my brother's suit ;
Which was, that he in lieu o' the premises,—
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,—
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom ; and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother : Whereon,
A treacherous army levy'd, one midnight
Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan ; and, i' the dead of darkness,
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity !

I, not rememb'ring how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again ; it is a hint,
That wrings mine eyes.

Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business,
Which now's upon us ; without the which, this story
Were most impertinent.

Mira. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us ?

Pro. Well demanded, wench ;
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not ;
(So dear the love my people bore me) nor set A mark so bloody on the business ; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.

In few, they hurried us aboard a bark ;
Bore us some leagues to sea ; where they prepar'd
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast ; the very rats
Instinctively had quit it : there they hoist us,
To cry to the sea, that roar'd to us ; to sigh
To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wring.

Mira. Alack ! what trouble

Was I then to you !

Pro. O ! a cherubim
Thou wast, that did preserve me ! Thou didst smile, Infused with a fortitude from heaven,

When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt;
Under my burden groan'd; which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?

Pro. By Providence divine.
Some food we had, and some fresh water, that A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, (who being then appointed Faster of this design,) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessities,
Which since have steaded much; so, of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me,
From my own library, with volumes that prize above my dukedom.

Mira. 'Would I might
But ever see that man!

Pro. Now I arise:—
Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy school-master, made thee more profit
Than other princes can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now, I pray
you, sir,

For still 'tis beating in my mind,) your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.—
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: and by my prescience
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star; whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop.—Here cease more questions;
Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way;—I know thou can'st not choose.—
[Miranda sleeps.]

Come away, servant, come: I am ready now; Approach, my Ariel; come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail! I come
To answer thy best pleasure; he't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds; to thy strong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?
Ari. To every article.

I boarded the king's ship; now on the beach,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement: Sometimes, I'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the top-mast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet and join: Jove's lightnings, the precursors
O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-out-running were not: The fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune Seem'd to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble, Yea, his dread trident shake.

Pro. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation: All, but mariners, Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a-fire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-starting (then like reeds, not hair,)
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, *Hell is empty,
And all the devils are here.*

Pro. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before: and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle:
The king's son have I landed by himself;
Whom I left, cooling of the air with sighs,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the king's ship,
The mariners, say, how thou hast dispos'd,

And all the rest o' the fleet?

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vev'd Bermoothes, there she's hid:
The mariners all under hatches stow'd;
Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep; and for the rest o' the fleet,
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again;
And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples;
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wreck'd,
And his great person perish.

Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work:
What is the time o' the day?

Ari. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two glasses: The time 'twixt six and now,

Must by us both be spent most precious.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now? moody?
What is't thou can'st demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be out? no more.

Ari. I pray thee
Remember, I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumbings: thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.

Pro. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pro. Thou dost; and think'st
It much, to tread the ooze of the salt deep;
To run upon the sharp wind of the north;
To do me business in the veins o' the earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir.

Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age, and envy,
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pro. Thou hast: Where was she born? speak; tell me.

Ari. Sir, in Argier.

Pro. O, was she so? I must,
Once in a month, recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st, was banish'd; for one thing she did,
They would not take her life: Is not this true?

Ari. Ay, sir.

Pro. This blue-ey'd hag was hither brought with child,

And here was left by the sailors: Thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant:
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine: within which rift
Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died,
And left thee there; where thou didst vent thy groans,
As fast as mill-wheels strike: Was this island, (Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with A human shape.

Ari. Yes; Caliban her son.

Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban, Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in: thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears; it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo; it was mine art,
When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.

Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,

And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master :
I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so ; and after two days
I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master !
What shall I do ? say what ? what shall I do ?

Pro. Go make thyself like to a nymph o' the sea ;
Be subject to no sight but mine ; invisible
To every eye-ball else. Go, take this shape,
And hither come in't : hence, with diligence.

[Exit Ariel.]
Awake, dear heart, awake ! thou hast slept well ;
Awake !

Mira. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Pro. Shake it off : Come on ;
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mira. 'Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.

Pro. But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him : he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood ; and serves in offices
That profit us. What ho ! slave ! Caliban !
Thou earth, thou ! speak.

Cal. [Within] There's wood enough within.
Pro. Come forth, I say ; there's other business for thee :
Come forth, thou tortoise ! when ?

Re-enter ARIEL, like a water-nymph.
Fine apparition ! My quaint Ariel, Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.]
Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself Upon thy wicked dam, come forth !

Enter CALIBAN.

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen,
Drop on you both ! a south-west blow on ye,
And blister you all o'er !

Pro. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up ; urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee : thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honey-combs, each pinch more stinging Than bees that made them.

Cal. I must eat my dinner.
This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me. When thou earnest first, Thou strok'dst me, and mad'st much of me ; would'st give me

Water with berries in't ; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night ; and then I lov'd thee,
And shew'd thee all the qualities o' the isle,
The fresh springs, brine pits, barren place, and fertile ;
Cursed be I that did so !—All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you !
For I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king : and here you sty me
In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest of the island.

Pro. Thou most lying slave, Whom stripes may move, not kindness : I have us'd
thee,

Filth as thou art, with human care ; and lodg'd thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cal. O ho, O ho !—'wou'd it had been done !
Thou didst prevent me ; I had peopled else
This isle with Calibans.

Pro. Abhorred slave ;
Which any print of goodness will not take ;
Being capable of all ill ! I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other : when thou didst not, savage, Know thine own meaning, but would'st gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known : But thy vile race,

Though thou didst learn, had that in't, which good natures

Could not abide to be with ; therefore wast thou Deserv'dly confin'd into this rock,
Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.

Cal. You taught me language ; and my profit on'
Is, I know how to curse : The red plague rid you,
For learning me your language !

Pro. Hag-seed, hence
Fetch us in fuel ; and be quick, thou wert best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice ?
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps :
Fill all thy bones with aches ; make thee roar,
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee !—
I must obey : his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave ; hence !
[Exit Caliban.]

Re-enter ARIEL invisible, playing and singing ;
FERDINAND following him.

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands :
Court'sied when you have, and kiss'd,
(The wild waves whist)
Foot it feathery here and there ;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.
Hark, hark !
Burden. Bough, wowgh. [dispersedly.]
The watch-dogs bark :
Bar. Bough, wowgh. [dispersedly.]
Hark, hark ! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticlere
Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

Fer. Where should this music be ? 't the air, or the earth ?

It sounds no more :—and sure, it waits upon
Some god of the island. Sitting on a bank, Weeping again the king my father's wreck,
This music crept by me upon the waters ;
Allaying both their fury, and my passion,
With its sweet air : thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather :—But 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

ARIEL sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies ;
Of his bones are coral made ;
Those are pearls, that were his eyes :
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell :
Hark ! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.
[Burden. Ding-dong.]

Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd father :—
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes :—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,
And say, what thou seest yond'.

Mira. What is't ? a spirit ?
Lord, how it looks about ! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form :—But 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No, wench ; it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses

As we have, such : This gallant, which thou seest,
Was in the wreck ; and, but he's something stain'd With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st
call him

A goodly person : he hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find them.

Mira. I might call him
A thing divine ; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pro. It goes on, [Aside.]
As my soul prompts it :—Spirit, fine spirit ! I'll free thee

Within two days for this.
Fer. Most sure, the goddess, to whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer

I may know, if you remain upon this island;
and that you will some good instruction give,
how I may bear me here: My prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
If you be made, or no?

Mira. No wonder, sir;
but, certainly a maid.

Fer. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. How! the best?
What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard thee?

Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders to hear thee speak of Naples: He does hear me;
and that he does, I weep: myself am Naples;
Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wreck'd.

Mira. Alack, for mercy!
Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the duke of Milan, and his brave son, being twain.

Pro. The duke of Milan, and his more braver daughter, could control thee, if now 'twere fit to do't:—At the first sight [Aside.]
They have chang'd eyes:—Delicate Ariel,
'll set thee free for this!—A word, good sir;
if fear, you have done yourself some wrong: a word.

Mira. Why speaks my father so ungently? This is the third man, that e'er I saw; the first, that e'er I sigh'd for: pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O, if a virgin, and your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The queen of Naples.

Pro. Soft, sir: one word more.—
They are both in either's powers: but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning [Aside.]
Make the prize light.—One word more; I charge thee,
That thou attend me: thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple:
If the ill spirit have so fair an house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. Follow me.— [To Ferd.]
Speak not you for him; he's a traitor.—Come.
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together:
Sea-water shalt thou drink, thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and husks, Wherein the acorn cradled: Follow.

Fer. No;
I will resist such entertainment, till Mine enemy has more power. [He draws.]

Mira. O, dear father, Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle, and not fearful.

Pro. What, I say,
My foot my tutor!—Put thy sword up, traitor;
Who mak'st a shew, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience

Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward;
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mira. Beseech you, father!

Pro. Hence; hang not on my garments.

Mira. Sir, have pity;
I'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence: one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What!
An advocate for an impostor? hush!
Thou think'st, there are no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban: Foolish wench!
To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Mira. My affections
Are then most humble; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pro. Come on; obey: [To Ferd.]
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, or this man's threats,
To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pro. It works:—Come on.—

Thou hast done well, fine Ariel!—Follow me.— Hark, what thou else shalt do me. [To Ferd. and Mir.]

Mira. Be of comfort;

My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech; this is unwonted,
Which now came from him.

Pro. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds: but then, exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To the syllable.

Pro. Come, follow: speak not for him. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Another part of the island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GON-ZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

Gon. 'Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have cause (So have we all) of joy; for our escape is much beyond our loss: Our hint of woe is common; every day, some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe: but for the miracle,
I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Pr'ythee, peace.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.

Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit;
by and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir,——

Seb. One:———Tell.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd, that's offer'd, comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed; you have spoken truer than you purpos'd.

Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord,—

Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!

Alon. I pr'ythee, spare.

Gon. Well, I have done: But yet—

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which of them, he, or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockrel.

Seb. Done: The wager?

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match.

Adr. Though this island seem to be desert,—

Seb. Ha, ha, ha!

Ant. So, you've pay'd.

Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible,—

Seb. Yet,

Adr. Yet—

Ant. He could not miss it.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered.

Adr. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Seb. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a fen.

Gon. Here is every thing advantageous to life.

Ant. True; save means to live.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!
Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny.
Seb. With an eye of green in't.
Ant. He misses not much.
Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth totally.
Gon. But the rarity of it is (which is indeed almost beyond credit)— Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.
Gon. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold, notwithstanding, their freshness, and glosses; being rather new dy'd, than stain'd with salt water.
Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say, he lies?
Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.
Gon. Methinks, our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Africk, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.
Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.
Adr. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.
Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.
Ant. Widow? a pox o'that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!
Seb. What if he had said, widower Æneas too? good lord, how you take it!
Adr. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.
Gon. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.
Adr. Carthage?
Gon. I assure you, Carthage.
Ant. His word is more than the miraculous harp.
Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houses too.
Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?
Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.
Ant. And sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.
Gon. Ay?
Ant. Why, in good time.
Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh, as when we were at Tunis, at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.
Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there.
Seb. 'Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.
Ant. O, widow Dido; ay, widow Dido.
Gon. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.
Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.
Gon. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?
Alon. You cram these words into mine ears, against The stomach of my sense: 'Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rate, she too, Who is so far from Italy remov'd, I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?
Fran. Sir, he may live; I saw him beat the surges under him, And ride upon their backs; he trod the water, Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted The surge most swollen that met him: his bold head Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd, As stooping to relieve him: I not doubt, He came alive to land.
Alon. No, no, he's gone.
Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss; That would not bless our Europe with your daughter, But rather lose her to an African; Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.
Alon. Pr'ythee, peace.
Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwise By all of us; and the fair soul herself Weigh'd, between lothness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she'd bow. We have lost your son,

I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have More widows in them of this business' making, Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's Your own.
Alon. So is the dearest of the loss.
Gon. My lord Sebastian, The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness, And time to speak it in: you rub the sore, When you should bring the plaster.
Seb. Very well.
Alon. And most chirurgeonly.
Gon. It is foul weather with us all, good sir, When you are cloudy.
Seb. Foul weather?
Ant. Very foul.
Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—
Ant. He'd sow it with nettle-seed.
Seb. Or docks, or mallows.
Gon. And were the king of it, what would I do?
Seb. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.
Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries Execute all things: for no kind of traffick Would I admit; no name of magistrate; Letters should not be known; no use of service, Of riches or of poverty; no contracts, Successions; bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none: No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil; No occupation; all men idle, all; And women too; but innocent and pure: No sovereignty:—
Seb. And yet he would be king on't.
Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.
Gon. All things in common nature should produce Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony, Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine, Would I not have; but nature should bring forth, Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance, To feed my innocent people.
Seb. No marrying among his subjects?
Ant. None, man: all idle; whores, and knaves.
Gon. I would with such perfection govern, sir, To excel the golden age.
Seb. 'Save his majesty!
Ant. Long live Gonzalo!
Gon. And, do you mark me, sir?—
Alon. Pr'ythee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.
Gon. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs, that they always use to laugh at nothing.
Ant. 'Twas you this laugh'd at.
Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.
Ant. What a blow was there given!
Seb. An it had not fallen flat-long.
Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.
Enter ARIEL invisible, playing solemn musick.
Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.
Ant. Nay, good my lord, he not angry.
Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?
Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.
[All sleep but Alon. Seb. and Ant.]
Alon. What, all so soon asleep! I wish mine eyes Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts: I find They are inclin'd to do so.
Seb. Please you, sir, Do not omit the heavy offer of it: It seldom visits sorrow: when it doth, It is a comforter.
Ant. We two, my lord, Will guard your person, while you take your rest, And watch your safety.
Alon. Thank you: Wond'rous heavy.— [Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.]
Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!
Ant. It is the quality o' the climate.
Seb. Why Doth it not then our eye-lids sink? I find not Myself disposed to sleep.

Ant. Nor I; my spirits are nimble. They fell together all, as by consent; they dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might, worthy Sebastian!—O, what might!—No more:—And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face, what thou should'st be: the occasion speaks thee; and my strong imagination sees a crown dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not hear me speak?

Seb. I do; and, surely, 't is a sleepy language; and thou speak'st out of thy sleep: What is it thou didst say? This is a strange repose, to be asleep with eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving, And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian, Thou let'st thy fortune sleep—die rather; wink'st Whiles thou art waking.

Seb. Thou dost snore distinctly: There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do, Trebles thee o'er.

Seb. Well; I am standing water.
Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so: to ebb, Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O, If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish, Whiles thus you mock it! how, in stripping it, You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed, Most often do so near the bottom run, By their own fear, or sloth.

Seb. Pr'ythee, say on: The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed, Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir: Although this lord of weak remembrance, this (Who shall be of as little memory, When he is earth'd,) hath here almost persuaded (For he's a spirit of persuasion only,) The king, his son's alive; 'tis as impossible That he's undrown'd, as he, that sleeps here, swims.

Seb. I have no hope, That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope, What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high an hope, that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond, But doubts discovery there. Will you grant, with me, That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then, tell me,

Who's the next heir of Naples?
Seb. Claribel.
Ant. She, that is queen of Tunis; she, that dwells Ten leagues beyond man's life; she, that from Naples Can have no note, unless the sun were post, (The man i' the moon's too slow,) till new-born chins Be rough and razorable: she, from whom We were all sea-swallow'd, though some cast again; And by that destin'd to perform an act, Whereof what's past is prologue; what to come, In yours and my discharge.

Seb. What stuff is this?—How say you?
Ant. 'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis; So is she heir of Naples; twixt which regions There is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit Seems to cry out, How shall that Claribel Measure us back to Naples?—Keep in Tunis, And let Sebastian wake!—Say, this were death, That now hath seiz'd them; why, they were no worse Than now they are: There be, that can rule Naples, As well as he that sleeps; lords, that can prate As amply, and unnecessarily, As this Gonzalo; I myself could make A chough of as deep chat. O, that you bore The mind that I do! what a sleep were this For your advancement! Do you understand me?

Seb. Methinks, I do.
Ant. And how does your content Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember, You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True: And, look, how well my garments sit upon me; Much feater than before: My brother's servants Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Seb. But, for your conscience—
Ant. Ay, sir; where lies that? if it were a kybe, 'T would put me to my slipper; But I feel not This deity in my bosom; twenty consciences, That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candy'd be they, And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your brother, No better than the earth he lies upon, If he were that, which now he's like; whom I With this obedient steel, three inches of it, Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you, doing thus, To the perpetual wink for aye might put This ancient morsel, this sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest, They'll take suggestion, as a cat laps milk; They'll tell the clock to any business, that We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend, Shall be my precedent; as thou got'st Milan, I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay'st; And I the king shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together: And when I rear my hand, do you the like, To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word.
[They converse apart.]

Musick. Re-enter ARIEL invisible.

Ant. My master through his art foresees the danger, That these, his friends, are in; and sends me forth, (For else his project dies,) to keep them living.

[Sings in Gonzalo's ear.]

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey'd conspiracy
His time doth take:
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware:
Awake! Awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.
Gon. Now, good angels, preserve the king!
[They wake.]

Alon. Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking?
Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose, Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing Like bulls, or rather lions; did it not wake you? It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.
Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear; To make an earthquake! sure it was the roar Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?
Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming, And that a strange one too, which did awake me: I shak'd you, sir, and cry'd; as mine eyes open'd, I saw their weapons drawn:—there was a noise, That's verity: Best stand upon our guard; Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alon. Lead off this ground; and let's make further search For my poor son.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts! For he is, sure, i' the island.

Alon. Lead away.
Ant. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done: [Aside.]

So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exit.

SCENE II.

Another part of the island.

Enter CALIBAN, with a burden of wood.

A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections, that the sun sucks up From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,

And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin shows, pitch me i' the mire,
Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark,
Out of my way, unless he bid them; but
For every trifle are they set upon me:
Sometimes like apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after, bite me; then like hedge-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my bare-foot way, and moult
Their prickles at my face-fall; sometime am I
All wound with adders, who, with cloven tongues,
Do hiss me into madness:—Lo! now! lo!

Enter TRINCULO.

Here comes a spirit of his; and to torment me,
For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat;
Perchance, he will not mind me.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' the wind: yond' same black cloud, yond' huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head:
yond' same cloud cannot choose but fall by pauls.
—What have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, (as once I was,) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth!
I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer;
this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter hereabout:
Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows.
I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter STEPHANO, singing; a bottle in his hand.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea,
Here shall I die a-shore;—

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral.
Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,

The gunner, and his mate,

Low'd Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,

But none of us car'd for Kate:

For she had a tongue with a tang,

Would cry to a sailor, Go, hang!

She lov'd not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch:

Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too: But here's my comfort.
[Drinks.]

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here?
Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of Inde? Ha! I have not 'scap'd drowning, to be afear'd now of your four legs; for it hath been said,
As proper a man as ever went on four legs, cannot make him give ground: and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs; who hath got, as I take it, an ague: Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that: If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, pr'ythee;
I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drank wine afore, it will go sweet to remove his fit: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt Anon, I know it by thy trembling:
Now Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways; open your mouth: he is that which will give language to you, cat; open your mouth: this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who your friend; open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: It should be—
But he is drowned; and these are devils! O! defend me!

Ste. Four legs, and two voices: a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague: Come,
—Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano,—

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy! mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou beest Stephano, touch me, and speak to me; for I am Trinculo;—be not afear'd;—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth; I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed:
How cam'st thou to be the siege of this moon-calf?
Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke:—But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine, for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scap'd!

Ste. Pr'ythee, do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, an if they be not sprites.
That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor:
I will kneel to him.

Ste. How did'st thou 'scape? how cam'st thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved over-board, by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was east a-shore.

Cal. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy True subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear then how thou escap'd'st.

Trin. Swam a-shore, man, like a duck; I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book: Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole butt, man; my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf? how does thine ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee;
My mistress shewed me thee, thy dog, and bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book: I will furnish it anon with new contents: swear!

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster:—I afear'd of him?—a very weak monster:
—the man i' the moon?—a most poor credulous monster:—Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I'll shew thee every fertile inch o' the island;
And kiss thy foot: I pr'ythee, be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster; when his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Cal. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on then; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster: A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin. —but that the poor monster's in drink:
An abominable monster!

Cal. I'll shew thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries;

I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!

I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee,

Thou wond'rous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster; to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

Cal. I pr'ythee, let me bring thee where crabs grow;

And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts;
 And see thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how
 To snare the nimble marmozet; I'll bring thee
 Clust'ring filberds, and sometimes I'll get thee
 Young sea-mells from the rock: Wilt thou go with me?
Ste. I pry thee now, lead the way, without any more talking.—Trinculo, the king and all our comany else being drowned, we will inherit here.— ere; bear my bottle. Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill my by and by again.

Cal. Farewell master; farewell, farewell.
[Sings drunkenly.]

Trin. A howling monster; a drunken monster.

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish;
 Nor fetch in firing
 At requiring,
 Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish;
 'Ban 'Ban, Ca—Caliban,
 Has a new master—Get a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom, hey-day, freedom!

Ste. O brave monster! lead the way. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Before Prospero's cell.

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful; but their labour alight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness are nobly undergone; and most poor matters oint to rich ends. This my mean task would be so heavy to me, as 'tis odious; but he mistress, which I serve, quickens what's dead, and makes my labours pleasures: O, she is ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed; and he's composed of harshness. I must remove some thousand of these logs, and pile them up, upon a sore injunction: My sweet mistress weeps, when she sees me work; and says, such baseness had ne'er like executor. I forget:
 'tut these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours;
 'most busy-less, when I do it.

Enter MIRANDA; and PROSPERO at a distance.

Mira. Alas, now! pray you, Work not so hard: I would, the lightning had burnt up those logs, that you are enjoind' to pile!
 'ray, set it down, and rest you: when this burns, I'll weep for having wearied you: My father is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself;
 't is safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress,
 'he sun will set, before I shall discharge
 What I must strive to do.

Mira. If you'll sit down,
 'll bear your logs the while: Pray give me that;
 'll carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious creature: had rather crack my sinews, break my back, than you should such dishonour undergo,
 While I sit lazy by.

Mira. It would become me
 As well as it does you: and I should do it With much more ease; for my good will is to it, and yours against.

Pro. Poor worm! thou art infected;
 This visitation shews it.

Mira. You look wearily.
Fer. No, noble mistress; 'tis fresh morning with me,
 When you are by at night. I do beseech you, Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers.)

What is your name?
Mira. Miranda:—O my father,
 I have broke your hest to say so!

Fer. Admir'd Miranda!
 Indeed, the top of admiration; worth
 What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
 I have ey'd with best regard; and many a time
 The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues
 Have I lik'd several women; never any
 With so full soul, but some defect in her
 Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd,
 And put it to the foil: But you, O you,
 So perfect, and so peerless, are created
 Of every creature's best.

Mira. I do not know
 One of my sex; no woman's face remember,
 Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen
 More that I may call men, than you, good friend,

And my dear father: how features are abroad,
 I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty,
 (The jewel in my dower,) I would not wish
 Any companion in the world but you;
 Nor can imagination form a shape,
 Besides yourself, to like of: But I prattle Something too wildly, and my father's precepts Therein forget.

Fer. I am, in my condition,
 A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king;
 (I would, not so!) and would no more endure
 This wooden slavery, than I would suffer
 The flesh-fly blow my mouth.—Hear my soul speak;—

The very instant that I saw you, did
 My heart fly to your service; there resides,
 To make me slave to it; and for your sake,
 Am I this patient log-man.

Mira. Do you love me?
Fer. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,

And crown what I profess with kind event,
 If I speak true; if hollowly, invert
 What best is bodied to me, to mischief! I,
 Beyond all limit of what else i' the world,
 Do love, prize, honour you.

Mira. I am a fool,
 To weep at what I am glad of.

Pro. Fair encounter
 Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
 On that which breeds between them!

Fer. Wherefore weep you?

Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
 What I desire to give; and much less take
 What I shall die to want: But this is trifling;
 And all the more it seeks to hide itself,
 The bigger bulk it shews. Hence, bashful cunning!
 And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
 I am your wife, if you will marry me;
 If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow
 You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
 Whether you will or no.

Fer. My mistress, dearest,
 And I thus humble ever.

Mira. My husband then?

Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing
 As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.
Mira. And mine, with my heart in't: And now
 farewell,

Till half an hour hence.

Fer. A thousand! thousand!
[Exeunt Fer. and Mira.]

Pro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be,
 Who are surpris'd withal; but my rejoicing
 At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
 For yet, ere supper time, must I perform Much business appertaining. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Another part of the island.

Enter STEPHANO and TRINCULO; CALIBAN following with a bottle.

Ste. Tell not me;—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em: Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster? the folly of this island!
 They say, there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee; thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster, indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me: I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light.—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs; and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe: I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster; I am in case to juggle a constable: Why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever a man a coward, that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo again! bite him to death, I pr'ythee. Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head; if you prove a mutineer, the next tree.—The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd To hearken once again the suit I made thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee Before, I am subject to a tyrant; A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath Cheated me of this island.

Ari. Thou liest. Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou; I would, my valiant master would destroy thee: I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more.—

Proceeded. [To Caliban.]

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle; From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him—for, I know, thou dar'st; But this thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compassed? Can'st thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my lord; I'll yield him these asleep,

Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest, thou canst not.

Cal. What a pied ninny's this! Thou scurvy patch!

I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows, And take his bottle from him: when that's gone, He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not shew him Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing; I'll go further off.

Ste. Didst thou not say, he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that. [Strikes him.] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie:—Out o' your wits, and hearing too?—A pox o' your bottle! this can sack, and drinking do.—A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Cal. Ha, ha, ha!

Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Pr'ythee stand further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time, I'll beat him too.

Ste. Stand further.—Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him

I' the afternoon to sleep: there thou may'st brain him

Having first seiz'd his books: or with a log

Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,

Or cut his wezand with thy knife: Remember,

First to possess his books: for, without them,

He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not

One spirit to command: They all do hate him,

As rootedly as I: Burn but his books;

He has brave utensils, (for so he calls them,) Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal.

And that most deeply to consider, is

The beauty of his daughter; he himself

Calls her a non-pareil; I ne'er saw woman,

But only Sycorax my dam, and she;

But she as far surpasses Sycorax,

As greatest does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a lass?

Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant

And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will be king and queen; (save our graces!

and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys.—Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand; I am sorry I beat thee

but, while thou livest keep a good tongue in thy head

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep

Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure

Let us be jocund: Will you troll the catch

You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason: Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings.]

Flout 'em, and skout 'em; and skout 'em, and flout 'em;

Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

[Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.]

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, shew thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins!

Ste. He that dies, pays all debts: I defy thee:—

Mercy upon us!

Cal. Art thou afraid?

Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afraid; the isle is full of noises;

Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments

Will hum about mine ears; and sometime voices,

That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,

Will make me sleep again: and then, in dreaming,

The clouds, methought, would open, and shew riches

Ready to drop upon me; that, when I wak'd,

I cry'd to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where

I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away: let's follow it, and after, do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster; we'll follow.—I would I could see this taborer: he lays it on.

Trin. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another part of the island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir;

My old bones ache: here's a maze trod, indeed,

Through forth-rights, and meanders! by your patience,

I needs must rest me.

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,

Who am myself attach'd with weariness
 o the dulling of my spirits : sit down and rest.
 ven here I will put off my hope, and keep it o longer for my flatterer : he is drown'd, whom thus we stray to find ; and the sea mocks
 ur frustrate search on land : Well, let him go.
Ant. I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

[Aside to Sebastian.

o not, for one repulse, forego the purpose hat you resolv'd to effect.

Seb. The next advantage ill we take thoroughly.

Ant. Let it be to-night ;
 or, now they are oppress'd with travel, they ill not, nor cannot use such vigilance, s when they are fresh.

Seb. I say, to-night : no more.

*Nemo and strange musick ; and Prospero above, invisible. Enter several strange shapes, bringing in a banquet ; they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation ; and, inviting the king, &c.
 to eat, they depart.*

Alon. What harmony is this ? my good friends, hark !

Gon. Marvellous sweet musick !

Alon. Give us kind keeps, heavens ! What were these ?

Seb. A living drollery : Now I will believe, hat there are unicorns ; that, in Arabia here, is one tree, the phoenix' throne ; one phoenix t this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'll helieve both ;
 nd what does else want credit, come to me, nd I'll be sworn 'tis true : Travellers ne'er did lie, hough fools at home condemn them.

Gon. If in Naples should report this now, would they believe me ?
 I should say, I saw such islanders, or certes, these are people of the island,
 who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note, heir manners are more gentle-kind, than of ur human generation you shall find lany, nay, almost any.

Pro. Honest lord,
 hou hast said well ; for some of you there present,
 re worse than devils. [Aside.

Alon. I cannot too much muse, uch shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing Although they want the use of tongue, a kind of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing. [Aside.
Fran. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since hey have left their viands behind ; for we have stomachs.—

Will't please you taste of what is here ?

Alon. Not I.

Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear : When we were boys,

Who would believe that there were mountaineers, ew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at them

Vallets of flesh ? or that there were such men, whose heads stood in their breasts ? which now we find,

Each putter-out on five for one, will bring us
 ood warrant of.

Alon. I will stand to, and feed, Although my last : no matter, since I feel he best is past :—Brother, my lord the duke, tand too, and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL like a harpy ; claps his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom destiny (That hath to instrument this lower world,
 And what is in't,) the never-surfeited sea
 Hath caused to belch up ; and on this island
 Where man doth not inhabit ; you 'mongst men
 Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad ;

[Seeing Alon. Seb. &c. draw their swords.

And even with such like valour, men hang and drown
 Their proper selves. You fools ! I and my fellows
 Are ministers of fate ; the elements,
 Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
 Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs
 Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
 One dowe that's in my plume ; my fellow-ministers
 Are like invulnerable : if you could hurt,
 Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,
 And will not be uplifted : But, remember,
 (For that's my business to you,) that you three
 From Milan did supplant good Prospero :
 Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,
 Him, and his innocent child ; for which foul deed
 The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures, Against your peace : Thee of thy son, Alonso,
 They have bereft ; and do pronounce by me,
 Ling'ring perdition (worse than any death
 Can be at once,) shall step by step attend
 You, and your ways ; whose wraths to guard you from (Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls Upon your heads,) is nothing, hut heart's sorrow,

 And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder : then, to soft musick, enter the Shapes again, and dance with mops and moves, and carry out the table.

Pro. [Aside.] Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou

Perform'd, my Ariel ; a grace it had, devouring :
 Of my instruction hast thou nothing 'bated,
 In what thou hadst to say : so, with good life,
 And observation strange, my meaner ministers
 Their several kinds have done : my high charms work,

 And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
 In their distractions : they now are in my power ;
 And in these fits I leave them, whilst I visit
 Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is drown'd,)
 And his and my loved darling.

Gon. I' the name of something holy, sir, why stand you

In this strange stare ?

Alon. O, it is monstrous ! monstrous !
 Methought, the hillows spoke, and told me of it ;
 The winds did sing it to me ; and the thunder,
 That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd
 The name of Prosper ; it did hiss my trespass.
 Therefore my son i' the ooze is bedded ; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,
 And with him there lie mudded. [Exit.

Seb. But one fiend at a time,
 I'll fight their legions o'er.

Ant. I'll be thy second.

[Exeunt Seb. and Ant.
Gon. All three of them are desperate ; their great guilt,

Like poison given to work a great time after,
 Now 'gins to bite the spirits :—I do beseech you,
 That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly,
 And hinder them from what this ecstasy
 May now provoke them to.

Adr.

Follow, I pray you.

[Exeunt.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Before Prospero's cell.Enter PROSPERO, FERDINAND, and MIRANDA.

Pro. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends; for I Have given you here a thread of mine own life,
Or that, for which I live; whom once again
I tender to thy hand: all thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me, that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise,
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it,
Against an oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: But If thou dost break her virgin knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barren hate,
Sour-eyed disdain, and discord, shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly,
That you shall hate it both: therefore, take heed,
As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 'tis now; the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion
Our worsor genius can, shall never melt Mine honour into lust; to take away
The edge of that day's celebration,
When I shall think, or Phœbus' steeds are founder'd,
Or night kept chain'd below.

Pro. Fairly spoke:
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own.—
What, Ariel; my industrious servant Ariel!

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am.
Pro. Thou and thy meane fellows your last service
Did worthily perform; and I must use you
In such another trick: go, bring the rabble,
O'er whom I give thee power, here, to this place:
Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art; it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twink.
Ari. Before you can say, Come, and go,
And breathe twice; and cry, so, so;
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow:
Do you love me, master? no.

Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel: Do not approach,
Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well I conceive. [Exit.

Pro. Look, thou be true; do not give dalliance Too much the rein; the strongest oaths are straw
To the fire i' the blood: be more abstemious,
Or else, good night, your vow!

Fer. I warrant you, sir;
The white-cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my liver.

Pro. Well.—
Now come, my Ariel; bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit; appear, and perty.—
No tongue; all eyes; be silent. [Soft musick.

A Masque. Enter IRIS.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas
Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease;
Thy turf mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep;
Thy banks with peonied and lillied brims,

Which spongy April at thy hest betrimms,
To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and th'
broom groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn; thy pole clipt vineyard;
And thy sea-marge, steril, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air: The queen o' the sky
Whose watery arch, and messenger, am I,
Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign grace
Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport: thy peacocks fly amain;
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

Cer. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth; Why hath thy queen
Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd-green?
Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate;
And some donation freely to estate.
On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen? since they did plot
The means, that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company
I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid: I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos; and her son Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have done

Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-rite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted: but in vain;
Mars's hot minion is return'd again;
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrows,
And be a boy right out.

Cer. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

Enter JUNO.

Jun. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue.

SONG.

Juno. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Cer. Earth's increase, and foison plenty,
Barns, and garners never empty;
Vines, with clust'ring branches growing;
Plants, with goodly burden bowing;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity, and want, shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly: May I be bold
To think these spirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd, to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever;
So rare a wonder'd father, and a wife,
Make this place Paradise.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.]

Pro. Sweet now, silence;
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously;
There's something else to do: hush, and be mute,
Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the wand'ring brooks,

With your sedg'd crowns, and ever harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons; Juno does command:
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love; be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sun-burn'd sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry;
Make holy-day: your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited: they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Pro. [aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates, Against my life; the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.] Well done;—
avoid;—no more.

Fer. This is most strange: your father's in some passion,
That works him strongly.

Mira. Never till this day,
Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Pro. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, sir;
Our revels now are ended: these our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabrick of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind: We are such stuff
As dreams are made of, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex'd;
Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled.
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity:
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose; a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Fer. Mira. We wish your peace. [Exeunt.]

Pro. Come with a thought:—I thank you:—
Ariel, come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to: What's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander: when I presented Ceres,
I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear'd,
Lest I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking;

So full of valour, that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet: yet always bending Towards their project: Then I beat my tabor,
At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,
Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt musick; so I charm'd their ears,
That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns,
Which enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them
I' the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake
O'erstunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird:
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpety in my house, go, bring it hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.

Ari. I go, I go. [Exit.]

Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers: I will plague them all,

Re-enter ARIEL, loaden with glittering apparel, &c.
Even to roaring:—Come, hang them on this line.

PROSPERO and ARIEL remain invisible. Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not

Hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which, you say, is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you, look you,—

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still:
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hood-wink this mischance: therefore, speak softly;

All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,—

Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Pr'ythee, my king, be quiet: Seest thou here,
This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter:
Do that good mischief, which may make this island
Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand: I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is for thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster; we know what belongs to a frippery:—O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by this hand,
I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it.

Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean
To doat thus on such luggage? Let's along,

And do the murder first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches;
Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line:
now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do: We steal by line and level, and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for't: wit shall not go unrewarded, while I am king of this country: Steal by line and level, is an excellent pass of pate; there's another garment for't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on't: we shall lose our time,
And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

Ste. Monster, lay-to your fingers; help to bear this away, where my hog'shead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom; go to, carry this.

Trin. And this.
Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about; PROSPERO and ARIEL setting them on.

Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark, hark!

[Cal. Ste. and Trin. are driven out.]

Go, charge my goblins, that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews With aged cramps; and more pinch-spotted make them,

Than pard, or cat o' mountain.

Ari. Hark, they roar.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this hour

Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou

Shalt have the air at freedom: for a little,

Follow, and do me service. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Before the cell of Prospero.

Enter PROSPERO in his magick robes; and ARIEL

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head :
My charms crack not ; my spirits obey ; and time Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day ?
Ari. On the sixth hour ; at which time, my lord,
You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so,
When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and his ?

Ari. Confin'd together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge ;
Just as you left them, sir ; all prisoners
In the lime-grove, which weather-fends your cell ;
They cannot budge, till your release. The king,
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted ;
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brim-full of sorrow, and dismay ; but chiefly Him you term'd, sir, The good old lord, Gonzalo ;
His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds : your charm so strongly works
them,
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou think so, spirit ?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pro. And mine shall.
Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions ? and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply,
Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art ?
Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick,

Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part : the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance : they being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further : Go, release them, Ariel ;
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir. [Exit.
Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves ;

And ye, that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him,
When he comes back ; you demy-puppets, that
By moon-shine do the green-sour ringlets make,
Whereof the eve not bites ; and you, whose pastime
Is to make midnight musbrooms ; that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew ; by whose aid (Weak masters though ye be,) I have be-dimm'd
The noon-tide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war ; to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt : the strong-bas'd promontory
Have I made shake ; and by the spurs pluck'd up
The pine and cedar : graves, at my command,
Have wak'd their sleepers ; oped, and let them forth
By my so potent art : But this rough magick
I here abjure : and, when I have requir'd
Some heavenly musick, (which even now I do,)
To work mine end upon their senses, that This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drown my book. [Solemn musick.]

Re-enter ARIEL : after him ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by GONZALO ; SE-BASTIAN and ANTONIO in like manner attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO : they all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand charmed ; which PROSPERO observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull ! There stand,
For you are spell-stopp'd.—

Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sociable to the shew of thine,
Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves apace ;
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason.—O my good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st ; I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed.—Most cruelly Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter :
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act ;—
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood,
You brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature ; who with Sebastian (Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,)
Would here have kill'd your king ; I do forgive thee, Unnatural though thou art !—Their understanding Begins to swell : and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores,
That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them,
That yet looks on me, or would know me.—Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell ; [Exit Ariel.
I will dis-case me, and myself present,
As I was sometime Milan :—quickly, spirit ;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

ARIEL re-enters, singing, and helps to attire
PROSPERO.

Ari. Where the bee sucks, there suck I ;
In a cowslip's bell I lie :
There I couch, when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly,
After summer, merrily ;
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now
Under the blossom, that hangs on the bough.

Pro. Why, that's my dainty Ariel : I shall miss
thee ;
But yet thou shalt have freedom : so, so, so.—
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art :
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches ; the master, and the boatswain,
Being awake, enforce them to this place ;
And presently, I pry'these.

Ari. I drink the air before me, and return
Or e'er your pulse twice beat. [Exit Ariel.
Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement Inhabits here : Some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country !

Pro. Behold, sir king,
The wronged duke of Milan, Prospero :
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body ;
And to thee, and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alon. Where's thou beest he, or no,
Or some enchanted trife to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know : thy pulse Beats, as of flesh and blood ; and, since I saw thee,
The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me : this must crave
(An if this be at all,) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign ; and do entreat Thou pardon me my wrongs :—But how should Prospero

Be living, and be here ?

Pro. First, noble friend, Let me embrace thine age ; whose honour cannot Be measur'd, or confin'd.

Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.

Pro. You do yet taste
Some subtillies o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain :—Welcome, my friends all :—
But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded, [Aside to Seb. and Ant.

I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors ; at this time
I'll tell no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him.
Pro. No:—
 For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
 Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
 Thy rankest fault; all of them; and require
 My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know, Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou beest Prospero,
 Give us particulars of thy preservation:
 How thou hast met us here, who, three hours since,
 Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have lost,
 How sharp the point of this remembrance is!
 My dear son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for't, sir.
Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and patience Says, it is past her cure.

Pro. I rather think,
 You have not sought her help; of whose soft grace,
 For the like loss, I have her sovereign aid,
 And rest myself content.

Alon. You the like loss?
Pro. As great to me, as late; and, portable
 To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker Than you may call to comfort you; for I Have lost my daughter.

Alon. A daughter?
 O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
 The king and queen there! that they were, I wish Myself were mudded in that oozy bed, Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords
 At this encounter do so much admire,
 That they devour their reason; and scarce think
 Their eyes do offices of truth, their words Are natural breath: but, howsoever you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain,
 That I am Prospero, and that very duke,
 Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely
 Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was landed,
 To be lord on't. No more yet of this;
 For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
 Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
 This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
 And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in.
 My dukedom since you have given me again,
 I will requite you with as good a thing;
 At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye,
 As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the cell opens, and discovers FERDINAND and MIRANDA, playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love,
 I would not for the world.
Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms, you should wrangle,
 And I would call it fair play.

Alon. If this prove
 A vision of the island, one dear son Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle!
Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful:
 I have curs'd them without cause.

Alon. [Ferd. kneels to Alon.]
 Now all the blessings
 Of a glad father compass thee about!
 Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mira. O! wonder!
 How many goodly creatures are there here!
 How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world,
 That has such people in't!

Pro. 'Tis new to thee.
Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?

Your eldest acquaintance cannot be three hours:
 Is she the goddess, that hath sever'd us,
 And brought us thus together?

Fer. Sir, she's mortal:
 But, by immortal providence, she's mine;
 I chose her, when I could not ask my father
 For his advice; nor thought I had one: she Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,
 Of whom so often I have heard renown,

But never saw before; of whom I have Received a second life, and second father
 This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers;
 But O, how oddly will it sound, that I Must ask my child forgiveness!

Pro. There, sir, step;
 Let us not burden our remembrances
 With a heaviness that's gone.

Gon. I have inly wept,
 Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you gods,
 And on this couple drop a blessed crown;
 For it is you, that have chalk'd forth the way
 Which brought us hither!

Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo!
Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice
 Beyond a common joy; and set it down
 With gold on lasting pillars: In one voyage
 Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis;
 And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife,
 Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom,
 In a poor isle; and all of us, ourselves,
 When no man was his own.

Alon. Give me your hands:
 [To Fer. and Mira.]
 Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart,
 That doth not wish you joy!

Gon. Be't so! Amen!

Re-enter ARIEL, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir, look, sir; here are more of us!
 I prophesied, if a gallows were on land,
 This fellow could not drown:—Now, blasphemy,
 That swear'st grace o'erheard, not an oath on shore?
 Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?
Boats. The best news is, that we have safely found
 Our king, and company: the next our ship,—
 Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split,—
 Is tight, and yare, and bravely rigg'd, as when We first put out to sea.

Ari. Sir, all this service Have I done, since I went. } Aside.

Pro. My tricksy spirit!
Alon. These are not natural events; they strengthen From strange to stranger:—Say, how came you hither?

Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
 I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
 And (how, we know not), all clapp'd under hatches,
 Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
 Of roaring, shrieking, howling, gingling chains,
 And more diversity of sounds, all horrible,
 We were awak'd; straightway, at liberty:
 Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
 Our royal good, and gallant ship; our master
 Capering to eye her: On a trice, so please you,
 Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
 And were brought moping hither.

Ari. Was't well done? } Aside.
Pro. Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt be free.

Alon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod:
 And there is in this business more than nature
 Was ever conduct of: some oracle
 Must rectify our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my liege,
 Do not infect your mind with beating on
 The strangeness of this business; at pick'd leisure,
 Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable,) of every These happen'd accidents: till when, be cheerful,
 And think of each thing well.—Come hither, spirit;
 [Aside.]

Set Caliban and his companions free: Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.] How fares my gracious sir?

There are yet missing of your company
 Some few odd lads, that you remember not.

Re-enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, in their stolen apparel.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself; for all is but fortune:—
 Coragio, bully-monster, Coragio!

Trin. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits, indeed ! How fine my master is ! I am afraid He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha ;
What things are these, my lord Antonio ? Will money buy them ?

Ant. Very like ; one of them Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable.

Pro. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say, if they be true :—This mis-shepen knave,——

His mother was a witch ; and one so strong That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs, And deal in her command, without her power : These three have robb'd me ; and this demi-devil (For he's a bastard one,) had plotted with them To take my life : two of these fellows you Must know, and own ; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.

Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler ?
Seb. He is drunk now : where had he wine ?

Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe : Where should they Find this grand liquor, that heth gilded them ?— How cam'st thou in this pickle ?

Trin. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones : I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano ?

Ste. O, touch me not ; I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pro. You'd be king of the isle, sirrah ?

Ste. I should have been a sore one then.

Alon. This is as strange a thing as e'er I look'd on [Pointing to Caliban.]

Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his manners, As in his shape :—Go, sirrah, to my cell ; Take with you your companions ; as you look To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. Ay, that I will ; and I'll be wise hereafter, And seek for grace : What a thrice-double ass Was I, to take this drunkard for a god, And worship this dull fool !

Pro. Go to ; away !

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Seb. Or stole it, rather.

[Exeunt Cal. Ste. and Trin.]

Pro. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train, To my poor cell : where you shall take your rest For this one night ; which (part of it,) I'll waste With such discourse, as, I not doubt, shall make it Go quick away : the story of my life, And the particular accidents, gone by, Since I came to this isle : And in the morn, I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples, Where I have hope to see the nuptial Of these our dear-beloved solemniz'd ; And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alon.

I long

To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Pro.

I'll deliver all ;

And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales, And sail so expeditious, that shall catch Your royal fleet far off.—My Ariel ;—chick,— That is thy charge ; theu to the elements Be free, and fare thou well !—[Aside.] Please you draw near.

[Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE,

SPOKEN BY PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own ;
Which is most faint : now, 'tis true,
I must be here confin'd by you,
Or sent to Naples : Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island, by your spell ;
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands.

Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please : Now I want Spirits to enforce, art to enchant ;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer ;
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itself, and frees all faults.

As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

An open place in Verona.

Enter VALENTINE and PROTEUS.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus;
 Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
 Wer't not, affection chains thy tender days
 To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
 I rather would entreat thy company,
 To see the wonders of the world abroad,
 Than living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
 Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
 But, since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive therein,
 Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu!
 Think on thy Proteus, when thou, haply, seest
 Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel:
 Wish me partaker in thy happiness,
 When thou dost meet good hap; and, in thy danger,
 If ever danger do environ thee,
 Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
 For I will be thy bead's-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a love-book pray for my success.
Pro. Upon some book I love, I'll pray for thee.
Val. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
 How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.
Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;
 For he was more than over shoes in love.
Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love,
 And yet you never swam the Hellespont.
Pro. Over the boots? nay, give me not the boots.
Val. No, I'll not, for it boots thee not.
Pro. What?
Val. To be

In love, where scorn is bought with groans; coy looks,
 With heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth,
 With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights;
 If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain;
 If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
 However, but a folly bought with wit,
 Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.
Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear, you'll prove.
Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at; I am not Love.
Val. Love is your master, for he masters you;
 And he, that is so yoked by a fool,
 Methinks, should not be chronicle for wise.
Pro. Yet writers say, As in the sweetest bud
 The eating canker dwells, so eating love
 Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And writers say, As the most forward bud
 Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,
 Even so by love the young and tender wit
 Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud,

Losing his verdure even in the prime,
 And all the fair effects of future hopes.
 But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,
 That art a votary to fond desire?
 Once more adieu: my father at the road
 Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.
Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.
 At Milan, let me hear from thee by letters,
 Of thy success in love, and what news else
 Betideth here in absence of thy friend;
 And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!
Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell.
[Exit Valentine.]

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love:
 He leaves his friends, to dignify them more;
 I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.
 Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;
 Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
 War with good counsel, set the world at nought;
 Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter SPEED.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you: Saw you my master?
Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Milan.
Speed. Twenty to one then, he is shipp'd already;
 And I have play'd the sheep, in losing him.
Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
 An if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd then, and I a sheep?
Pro. I do.
Speed. Why then my horns are his horns, whether
 I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.
Speed. This proves me still a sheep.
Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.
Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.
Pro. It shall go hard, but I'll prove it by another.
Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore, thou art a sheep.
Speed. Such another proof will make me cry ha.
Pro. But dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir: I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.
Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such a store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray; 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over, 'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.

Pro. But what said she? did she nod? [Speed nods.]

Speed. I.

Pro. Nod, I? why, that's noddly.

Speed. You mistook, sir; I say, she did nod: and you ask me, if she did nod; and I say, I.

Pro. And that set together, is—noddly.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive, I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word, noddly, for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief: What said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter, may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains: What said she?

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? Couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter: And being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear, she'll prove as hard to you in telling her mind. Give her no token but stones; for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What, said she nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as—take this for thy pains. To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have tern'd me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself: and so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wreck; Which cannot perish, having thee aboard, Being destin'd to a drier death on shore:—I must go send some better messenger; I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,

Receiving them from such a worthless post. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. Garden of Julia's house.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,

Wouldst thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam; so you stumble not unheedfully.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen, That every day with parle encounter me,

In thy opinion, which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you, repeat their names, I'll shew my mind

According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine;

But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercutio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so, so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 'tis a passing shame,

That I, unworthy body as I am,

Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus,—of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason; I think him so, because I think him so.

Jul. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him?

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath never mov'd me.

Luc. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire, that is closest kept, burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love, that do not show their love.

Luc. O, they love least, that let men know their love.

Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, madam.

Jul. To Julia,—Say, from whom?

Luc. That the contents will shew.

Jul. Say, say; who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think,

from Proteus:

He would have given it you, but I, being in the way,

Did in your name receive it; pardon the fault, I pray.

Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?

To whisper and conspire against my youth?

Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,

And you an officer fit for the place.

There, take the paper, see it be return'd;

Or else return no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.

Jul. Will you be gone?

Luc. That you may ruminate. [Exit.]

Jul. And yet, I would I had o'erlook'd the letter.

It were a shame to call her back again,

And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.

What fool is she, that knows I am a maid,

And would not force the letter to my view?

Since maids, in modesty, say No, to that

Which they would have the profferer construe, Ag-

Fie, fie! how wayward is this foolish love,

That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse,

And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!

How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,

When willingly I would have had her here!

How angrily I taught my brow to frown,

When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!

My penance is, to call Lucetta back,

And ask remission for my folly past:—

What ho! Lucetta!

Re-enter LUCETTA.

Luc. What would your ladyship?

Jul. Is it near dinner-time?

Luc. I would it were;

That you might kill your stomach on your meat,

And not upon your maid.

Jul. What is't you took up

So gingerly?

Luc. Nothing.

Jul. Why didst thou stoop then?

Luc. To take a paper up, that I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me.

Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.

Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,

Unless it have a false interpreter.

Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rhyme.

Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune:

Give me a note: your ladyship can set.

Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible:

Best sing it to the tune of Light o' love.

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Jul. Heavy? belike, it hath some burden then.

Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you sing it.

Jul. And why not you?

Luc. I cannot reach so high.

Jul. Let's see your song:—How now, minion?

Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out:

And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not?

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.

Luc. Nay, now you are too flat,

And mar the concord with too harsh a descant:

There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.

Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly base.

Luc. Indeed, I hid the base for Proteus.

Jul. This habble shall not henceforth trouble me.

Here is a coil with protestation!—

[Tears the letter.]

Go, get you gone; and let the papers lie:

You would be fingering them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd
 To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.]
Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!
 O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!
 O injurious wraps! to feed on such sweet honey,
 And kill the bees, that yield it, with your stings!
 O! kiss each several paper for amends.
Luc. here is writ—kind Julia:—unkind Julia!
 As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
 I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
 Frampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
Luc. here is writ—love-wounded Proteus:—
 Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed,
 Shall lodge thee, till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd;
 And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
 But twice, or thrice, was Proteus written down?
 Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
 Till I have found each letter in the letter,
 Except mine own name; that some whirlwind bear
 Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock,
 And throw it thence into the raging sea!
Luc. here in one line is his name twice writ,—
Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus,
To the sweet Julia; that I'll tear away;
 And yet I will not, sith so prettily
 He couples it to his complaining names:
 Thus will I fold them one upon another;
 Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter LUCETTA.

Luc. Madam, dinner's ready, and your father stays.
Jul. Well, let us go.
Luc. What, shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?
Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.
Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down:
 Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.
Jul. I see, you have a month's mind to them.
Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;
 I see things too, although you judge I wink.
Jul. Come, come, will't please you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A room in Antonio's house.

Enter ANTONIO and PANTHINO.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that,
 Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?
Pant. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.
Ant. Why, what of him?
Pant. He wonder'd, that your lordship
 Would suffer him to spend his youth at home;
 While other men, of slender reputation,
 Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:
 Some, to the wars, to try their fortune there;
 Some, to discover islands far away;
 Some, to the studious universities.
 For any, or for all these exercises,
 He said, that Proteus, your son, was meet;
 And did request me, to importune you,
 To let him spend his time no more at home,
 Which would be great impeachment to his age,
 In having known no travel in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that,
 Whereon this month I have been hammering.
 I have consider'd well his loss of time;
 And how he cannot be a perfect man,
 Not being try'd, and tutor'd in the world:
 Experience is by industry achiev'd,
 And perfected by the swift course of time:
 Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him?
Pant. I think, your lordship is not ignorant,

How his companion, youthful Valentine,
 Attends the emperor in his royal court.
Ant. I know it well.
Pant. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent him thither:
 There shall he practise tilts and tournaments,
 Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen;
 And be in eye of every exercise,
 Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.
Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd:
 And, that thou may'st perceive how well I like it,
 The execution of it shall make known;
 Even with the speediest expedition
 I will despatch him to the emperor's court.
Pant. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
 With other gentlemen of good esteem,
 Are journeying to salute the emperor,
 And to commend their service to his will.
Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go:
 And, in good time,—now will we break with him.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life!
 Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
 Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn:
 O, that our fathers would applaud our loves,
 To seal our happiness with their consents!
 O heavenly Julia!
Ant. How now? what letter are you reading there?
Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two Of commendation sent from Valentine,
 Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.
Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see what news.
Pro. There is no news, my lord; but that he writes
 How happily he lives, how well below'd,
 And daily graced by the emperor;
 Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.
Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will,
 And not depending on his friendly wish.
Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
 Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
 For what I will, I will, and there an end.
 I am resolv'd, that thou shalt spend some time
 With Valentinus in the emperor's court;
 What maintenance he from his friends receives,
 Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.
 To-morrow be in readiness to go:
 Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.
Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided;
 Please you, deliberate a day or two.
Ant. Look, what thou want'st, shall be sent after thee:
 No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.—
 Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd
 To hasten on his expedition. [Exeunt Ant. and Pant.]

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire, for fear of burning;
 And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd:
 I fear'd to shew my father Julia's letter,
 Lest he should take exceptions to my love;
 And with the vantage of mine own excuse
 Hath he excepted most against my love.
 O, how this spring of love resembleth
 The uncertain glory of an April day;
 Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
 And by and by a cloud takes all away!

Re-enter PANTHINO.

Pant. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you;
 He is in haste, therefore, I pray you, go.
Pro. Why, this it is! my heart accords thereto;
 And yet a thousand times it answers, no. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Milan. An apartment in the Duke's palace.

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

Speed. Sir, your glove.
Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.

Speed. Why then this may be yours, for this is but one.
Val. Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine:—
 Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine!
 Ah Silvia! Silvia!
Speed. Madam Silvia! madam Silvia!
Val. How now, sirrah!

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you'll still be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to, sir; tell me, do you know madam Silvia?

Speed. She, that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Speed. Marry, by these special marks: First, you have learned, like sir Proteus, to wreath your arms like a male-content; to relish a love-song, like a Robin-red-breast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A. B. C.; to weep, like a young weuch that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money; and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me?

Speed. They are all perceived without you.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Speed. Without you? nay, that's certain, for, without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an urinal; that not an eye, that sees you, but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia?

Speed. She, that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observed that? even she I mean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet knowest her not?

Speed. Is she not hard-favoured, sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Speed. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well favoured.

Val. I mean, that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted, to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed?

Val. How long hath she been deformed?

Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her; and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Speed. Because love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes; or your own had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at sir Proteus for going ungartered?

Val. What should I see then?

Speed. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed: I thank you, you swung me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set; so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them:—Peace, here she comes.

Enter SILVIA.

Speed. O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-morrows.

Speed. O, 'give you good even! here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. He should give her interest; and she give it him.

Val. As you enjoind me, I have writ your letter

Unto the secret nameless friend of yours;

Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,

But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant: 'tis very clerkl done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off For, being ignorant to whom it goes,

I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will write,

Please you command, a thousand times as much:

And yet,—

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel;

And yet I will not name it:—and yet I care not;—

And yet take this again;—and yet I thank you;

Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. And yet you will; and yet another yet.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it

Sil. Yes, yes; the lines are very quaintly writ:

But since unwillingly, take them again;

Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay; you writ them, sir, at my request;

But I will none of them; they are for you:

I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another

Sil. And, when it's writ, for my sake read it over:

And, if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam! what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour

And so good-morrow, servant. [Exit Silvia]

Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,

As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on steeples!

My master sues to her; and she hath taught her sutor,

He being her pupil, to become her tutor.

O excellent device! was there ever heard a better

That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

Val. How now, sir? what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was rhyming; 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman from madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself: why, she woos you by a figure

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?

Speed. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you indeed, sir: but did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.

Val. That's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:

For often you have writ to her; and she, in modesty,

Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;

Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind

discover,

Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover.—

All this I speak in print; for in print I found it.—

Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir: though the camelion ove can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished y my victuals, and would fain have meat: O, be t like your mistress; be moved, be moved.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Verona. A room in Julia's house.

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner:
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

[Giving a ring.]

Pro. Why then we'll make exchange; here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy;

and when that hour o'er-slips me in the day,

wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,

the next ensuing hour some foul mischance inherent me for my love's forgetfulness!

If thy father stays my coming; answer not;

if the tide is now: nay, not the tide of tears;

but that tide will stay me longer than I should:

farewell.—What!—gone without a word!

Why, so true love should do: it cannot speak;

or truth hath better deeds, than words, to grace it.

[Exit Julia.]

Enter PANTHINO.

Pant. Sir Proteus, you are staid for.

Pro. Go; I come:—

alas! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A street.

Enter LAUNCE, leading a dog.

Laun. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping; all the kind of the Launces have this very ult: I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with sir Proteus to the nuptial's court. I think, Crab my dog be the unrest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid wringing, our cat wringing her hands, and all our joke in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear: he is a stone, a very humble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a Jew would have wept to have seen our suffering; why, my grandam having no eyes, look up, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it: This shoe is my father's;—no, this left shoe is my father's;—no, no, this left shoe is my mother's;—nay, that cannot be neither;—yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole: This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother's,
and this my father's; A vengeance on't! there 'tis:
Now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this it is Nan, our maid; I am the dog:—no, the dog himself, and I am the dog,—O, the dog is me, and I am myself; ay, so, so. Now come I to my father; Father, your blessing; now should not the dog speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on:—now come I to my other, (O, that she could speak now!) like a wood oman;—well, I kiss her;—why there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down: now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes: now the dog
I this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word;
and see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pant. Launce, away, away, aboard; thy master shipped, and thou art to post after with oars.
What's the matter? why weep'st thou, man?
way, ass; you will lose the tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter, if the ty'd were lost; for is the unkindest ty'd, that ever any man ty'd.

Pant. What's the unkindest tide?

Laun. Why, he that's ty'd here; Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut, man, I mean thou'lt lose the flood;

and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For fear thou should'st lose thy tongue?

Pant. Where should I lose my tongue?

Laun. In thy tale.

Pant. In thy tail?

Laun. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service? The tide!—Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call
thee.

Laun. Sir, call me what thou darest.

Pant. Wilt thou go?

Laun. Well, I will go.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Milan. An apartment in the Duke's palace.

Enter VALENTINE, SILVIA, THURIO, and SPEED.

Sil. Servant—

Val. Mistress?

Speed. Master, sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress then.

Speed. 'Twere good, you knock'd him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Haply, I do.

Thu. So do counterfeiters.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I, that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, sir Thurio? do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, madam; he is a kind of cameleon.

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, sir; you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire:

sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows, kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me,
I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes my father.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.

Sir Valentine, your father's in good health:

What say you to a letter from your friends

Of such good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful

To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?

Val. Ay, my good lord, I know the gentleman

To be of worth, and worthy estimation,

And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Val. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I knew him, as myself; for from our infancy We have convers'd, and spent our hours together: And though myself have been an idle truant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time, To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection; Yet hath sir Proteus, for that's his name, Made use and fair advantage of his days; His years but young, but his experience old; His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe; And, in a word, (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow,) He is complete in feature, and in mind, With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but, if he make this good, He is as worthy for an empress' love, As meet to be an emperor's counsellor. Well, sir; this gentleman is come to me, With commendation from great potentates; And here he means to spend his time awhile: I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth; Silvia, I speak to you; and you, sir Thurio:— For Valentine, I need not 'cite him to it: I'll send him hither to you presently. [Exit Duke.]

Val. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship, Had come along with me, but that his mistress Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike, that now she hath enfranchis'd them Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Val. Nay, sure, I think, she holds them prisoners still. Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind, How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Thu. They say, that love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself; Upon a homely object love can wink.

Enter PROTEUS.

Sil. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech you, Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither, If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, entertain him To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability:—

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his need: Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. No; that you are worthless.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.

Sil. I'll wait upon his pleasure. [Exit Servant.]

Come, sir Thurio,

Go with me:—Once more, new servant, welcome:

I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs;

When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.

[Exeunt Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.]

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much commended.

Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you; I know you joy not in a love-discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now:

I have done penance for contemning love;

Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me

With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,

With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;

For, in revenge of my contempt of love, Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eye: And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow: O, gentle Proteus, Love's a mighty lord; And hath so humbled me, as, I confess, There is no woe to his correction, Nor, to his service, no such joy on earth! Now, no discourse, except it be of love; Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep, Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye: Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praise.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills

And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine

Yet let her be a principality,

Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too:

She shall be dignified with this high honour,—

To bear my lady's train; lest the base earth

Should from her venture chance to steal a kiss,

And, of so great a favour growing proud,

Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,

And make rough winter everlastingly.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?

Val. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can, is nothing

To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing

She is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world: why, man, she is mine own

And I as rich in having such a jewel,

As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,

The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.

Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,

Because thou seemest me dote upon my love.

My foolish rival, that her father likes,

Only for his possessions are so huge,

Is gone with her along; and I must after,

For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd

Nay, more, our marriage hour,

With all the cunning manner of our flight,

Determin'd of: how I must climb her window;

The ladder made of cords; and all the means

Plotted, and 'greed on, for my happiness.

Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,

In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth:

I must unto the road, to disembark

Some necessaries that I needs must use;

And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will.— [Exit Pro.]

Even as one heat another heat expels,

Or as one nail by strength drives out another,

So the remembrance of my former love

Is by a newer object quite forgotten.

Is it mine eye, or Valentinus' praise,

Her true perfection, or my false transgression,

That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?

She's fair; and so is Julia, that I love,—

That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd;

Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,

Bears no impression of the thing it was.

Methinks, my zeal to Valentine is cold;

And that I love him not, as I was wont:

O! but I love his lady too, too much;

And that's the reason I love him so little.

How shall I dote on her with more advice,

That thus without advice begin to love her?

'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,

And that hath dazzled my reason's light;

But when I look on her perfections,

There is no reason but I shall be blind.

If I can check my erring love, I will;

If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

The same. A street.

Enter SPEED and LAUNCE.

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.
 Laun. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth; for I a not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man never undone, till he be hanged; nor never welme to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and e hostess say, welcome.

Speed. Come on, you mad-cap, I'll to the aleuse with you presently; where, for one shot of e pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes.
 at, sirrah, how did thy master part with madam lia?

Laun. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they ured very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Laun. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Laun. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Laun. Marry, thus; when it stands well with m, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou? I understand thee not.

Laun. What a block art thou, that thou canst not y staff understands me.

Speed. What thou say'st?

Laun. Ay, and what I do too: look thee, I'll but an, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Laun. Why, stand under and understand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Laun. Ask my dog: if he say, ay, it will; if he y, no, it will; if he shake his tail, and say no-ing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou shalt never get such a secret from e, but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, w say'st thou, that my master is become a noble lover?

Laun. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how?

Laun. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou wherson ass, thou mistakest me.

Laun. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy uester.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Laun. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he urn himself in love. If thou wilt go with me to e ale-house, so; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a w, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why?

Laun. Because thou hast not so much charity in ee, as to go to the ale with a Christian: Wilt ou go?

Speed. At thy service.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The same. An apartment in the palace.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
 love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
 wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn; id even that power, which gave me first my oath,
 vokes me to this threefold perjury.

ve bade me swear, and love bids me forswear:
 sweet-suggesting love, if thou hast sinn'd,
 ach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it.

first I did adore a twinkling star,
 at now I worship a celestial sun.

heedful vows may heedfully be broken;
 id he wants wit, that wants resolved will learn his wit to exchange the bad for better,—
 e, fie, unreverend tongue; to call her bad, hose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferr'd ith twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.

 cannot leave to love, and yet I do;

at there I leave to love, where I should love.
 lia I lose, and Valentine I lose:

I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
 I lose them, thus find I by their loss,

For Valentine, myself; for Julia, Silvia.
 I to myself am dearer than a friend;
 For love is still more precious in itself:
 And Silvia, witness heaven, that made her fair!
 Shews Julia but a swarthy Ethiopie.
 I will forget that Julia is alive,
 Rememb'ring that my love to her is dead;
 And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
 Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
 I cannot now prove constant to myself,
 Without some treachery used to Valentine:—
 This night, he meaneth with a corded ladder
 To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window;
 Myself in counsel, his competitor:
 Now presently I'll give her father notice
 Of their disguising, and pretended flight;
 Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine;
 For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter:
 But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross,
 By some sly trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
 Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
 As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! [Exit.]

SCENE VII.

Verona. A room in Julia's house.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me!
 And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,—
 Who art the talbe, wherein all my thoughts
 Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,—
 To lesson me; and tell me some good mean,
 How, with my honour, I may undertake
 A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long.

Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
 To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps;
 Much less shall she, that hath love's wings to fly;
 And when the flight is made to one so dear,
 Of such divine perfection, as sir Proteus.

Luc. Better forbear, till Proteus make return.

Jul. O, know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's food?
 Pity the dearth that I have pin'd in,
 By longing for that food so long a time.
 Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
 Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
 As seek to quench the fire of love with words.

Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire;
 But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
 Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns;
 The current, that with gentle murmur glides,
 Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;
 But, when his fair course is not hindered,
 He makes sweet music with the enamel'd stones,
 Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
 He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
 And so by many winding nooks he strays,
 With willing sport, to the wild ocean.

Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
 I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
 And make a pastime of each weary step,
 Till the last step have brought me to my love;
 And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
 A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?

Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
 The loose encounters of lascivious men:
 Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
 As may beseeem some well-reputed page.

Luc. Why then your ladyship must cut your hair.

Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings,
 With twenty odd-conceded true-love knots:
 To be fantastic may become a youth
 Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches?

Jul. That fits as well, as—"tell me, good my lord,
 "What compass will you wear your farthingale?"
 Why, even that fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.

Luc. You must needs have them with a codpiece, madam.

Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.
 Luc. A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin, Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.

Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have

What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly :
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me,
For undertaking so unstead a journey?
I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and go not.

Jul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.

If Proteus like your journey, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone :
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.

Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear :

A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,

And instances as infinite of love,

Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.

Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect !
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth :

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles ;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate ;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart
His heart, as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.
Luc. Pray heaven, he prove so, when you come him !

Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong
To heat a hard opinion of his truth :
Only deserve my love, by loving him ;
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation ;
Only, in lieu thereof, despatch me hence :
Come, answer not, but to it presently ;
I am impatient of my tardiance. [Exit

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Milan. An anti-room in the Duke's palace.

Enter DUKE, THURIO, and PROTEUS.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile ;
We have some secrets to confer about.—

[Exit Thurio.]

Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me ?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover,

The law of friendship bids me to conceal :

But, when I call to mind your gracious favours

Done to me, undeserving as I am,

My duty pricks me on to utter that,

Which else no worldly good should draw from me.

Know, worthy prince, sir Valentine, my friend,

This night intends to steal away your daughter ;

Myself am one made privy to the plot.

I know, you have determin'd to bestow her

On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates ;

And should she thus be stolen away from you,

It would be much vexation to your age.

Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose

To cross my friend in his intended drift,

Than, by concealing it, heap on your head

A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,

Being unprevented, to your timeless grave.

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care ;

Which to requite, commend me while I live.

This love of theirs myself have often seen,

Haply, when they have judg'd me fast asleep ;

And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid

Sir Valentine her company, and my court :

But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,

And so, unworthily, disgrace the man,

(A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,)

I gave him gentle looks ; thereby to find

That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.

And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this,

Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,

I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,

The key whereof myself have ever kept ;

And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean

How he her chamber window will ascend,

And with a corded ladder fetch her down ;

For which the youthful lover now is gone,

And this way comes he with it presently ;

Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.

But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,

That my discovery be not aimed at ;

For love of you, not hate unto my friend,

Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know

That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord ; sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.

Enter VALENTINE.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast ?

Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger

That stays to bear my letters to my friends,

And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import ?

Val. The tenor of them doth but signify

My health, and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay, then, no matter ; stay with me a while

I am to break with thee of some affairs,

That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret

'Tis not unknown to thee, that I have sought

To match my friend, sir Thurio, to thy daughter

Val. I know it well, my lord ; and, sure, the man

Were rich and honourable ; besides, the gentler

Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities

Beseeming such a wife as your fair daughter :

Cannot your grace win her to fancy him ?

Duke. No, trust me ; she is peevish, sullen, froward

Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty ;

Neither regarding that she is my child,

Nor fearing me as if I were her father :

And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,

Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her ;

And, where I thought the remnant of mine age

Should have been cherish'd by her child-like duty

I now am full resolv'd to take a wife,

And turn her out to who will take her in :

Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower ;

For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your grace have me to do in this

Duke. There is a lady, sir, in Milan, here,

Whom I affect ; but she is nice, and coy,

And nought esteems my aged eloquence :

Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,

(For long ago I have forgot to court :

Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd ;)

How, and which way, I may bestow myself,

To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not worth

Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,

More than quick words, do move a woman's mind

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents her :

Send her another ; never give her o'er ;

For scorn at first makes after-love the more.

If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,

But rather to heget more love in you :

If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,

For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.

Take no repulse, whatever she doth say ;

For, get you gone, she doth not mean, away :

Flatter, and praise, commend, extol their graces

Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces

That man, that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,

If with his tongue, he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But she I mean, is promis'd by her friend

Unto a youthful gentleman of worth ;

And kept severally from resort of men,

That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then I would resort to her by night.

Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd, and keys kept safe

That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets, but one may enter at her window

Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground

And built so shelving that one cannot climb it

Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then, a ladder, quaintly made of cord

To cast up with a pair of anchoring hooks,

Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,

So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood, advise me when I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for love is like a child, that longs for every thing that he can come by.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.

Duke. But, hark thee; I will go to her alone; how shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it under a cloak, that is of any length.

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then let me see thy cloak;

I'll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.

Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?—

pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.—

What letter is this same? What's here?—To Silvia?

And here an engine fit for my proceeding!

I'll be so bold to break the seal for once. [Reads.]

My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;

And slaves they are to me, that send them flying;

Could their master come and go as lightly,

Himself would lodge, where senseless they are lying.

My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them;

While I, their king, that thither them importune,

Do curse the grace, that with such grace hath bless'd them,

Because myself do want my servants' fortune:

Curse myself, for they are sent by me,

That they should harbour where their lord should be.

What's here?

Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee:

Is so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.—

Why, Phaeton, (for thou art Merops' son,)

Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car, and with thy daring folly burn the world?

Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?

Go, base intruder! over-weening slave!

Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates;

and think, my patience, more than thy desert,

a privilege for thy departure hence:

Thank me for this, more than for all the favours,

Which, all too much, I have bestow'd on thee.

But if thou linger in my territories,

longer than swiftest expedition

Will give thee time to leave our royal court,

by heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love ever bore my daughter, or thyself.

Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,

but, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence.

[Exit Duke.]

Val. And why not death, rather than living torment?

To die, is to be banish'd from myself;

and Silvia is myself: banish'd from her,

is self from self; a deadly banishment!

What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?

What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?

Unless it be, to think that she is by,

and feed upon the shadow of perfection.

Except I be by Silvia in the night,

here is no music in the nightingale;

unless I look on Silvia in the day,

here is no day for me to look upon:

she is my essence; and I leave to be,

I be not by her fair influence oster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.

fly not death, to fly his deadly doom:

arry I here, I but attend on death;

but, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter PROTEUS and LAUNCE.

Pro. Run, boy, run, run, and seek him out.

Laun. So-ho! so-ho!

Pro. What seest thou?

Laun. Him we go to find: there's not a hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Val. No.

Pro. Who then? his spirit?

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Val. Nothing.

Laun. Can nothing speak? master, shall I strike?

Pro. Whom would'st thou strike?

Laun. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

Laun. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you,—

Pro. Sirrah, Isay, forbear: Friend Valentine, a word.

Val. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news,

So much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,

For they are harsh, untunable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!

Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!

What is your news?

Loun. Sir, there's a proclamation, that you are vanish'd.

Pro. That thou art banish'd, O, that's the news;

From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already,

And now excess of it will make me surfeit.

Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?

Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom,

(Which, unrevolv'd, stands in effectual force,)

A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears:

Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;

With them, upon her knees, her humble self;

Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became

them,

As if but now they waxed pale for woe:

But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,

Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,

Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;

But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.

Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,

When she for thy repeal was suppliant,

That to close prison he commanded her,

With many bitter threats of 'biding there.

Val. No more; unless the next word, that thou speak'st,

Have some malignant power upon my life:

If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,

As ending anthem of my endless dolour.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,

And study help for that, which thou lament'st.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.

Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;

Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.

Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,

And manage it against despairing thoughts.

Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;

Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd

Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.

The time now serves not to expostulate:

Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate;

And, ere I part with thee, confer at large

Of all that may concern thy love-affairs:

As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,

Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,

Bid him make haste, and meet me at the north-gate.

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentine.

Val. O my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine!

[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.]

Loun. I am but a fool, look you; and yet I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now, that knows me to be in love: yet I am in love;

but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me;

nor who 'tis I love, and yet 'tis a woman: but that woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milk-maid: yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had gossips:

yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,—which is much in a bare christian.

Here is the cat-log [Pulling out a paper] of her conditions. Imprimis, She can fetch and carry.

Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore, is she better than a jade. Item, She can milk; look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter SPEED.

Speed. How now, signior Launce? what news with your mastership?

Loun. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.

Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word: What means then in your paper?

Loun. The blackest news that ever thou heard'st.

Speed. Why, man, how black?

Loun. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them.

Loun. Fie on thee, jolt-head; thou canst not read.

Speed. Thou liest, I can.

Loun. I will try thee: Tell me this: Who begot thee?

Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.

Loun. O illiterate loverer! it was the son of thy grandmother: this proves, that thou canst not read.

Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.

Loun. There; and saint Nicholas be thy speed!

Speed. Imprimis, She can milk.

Loun. Ay, that she can.

Speed. Item, She brews good ale.

Loun. And thereof comes the proverb,—Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.

Speed. Item, She can sew.

Loun. That's as much as to say, Can she so?

Speed. Item, She can knit.

Loun. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?

Speed. Item, She can wash and scour.

Loun. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured.

Speed. Item, She can spin.

Loun. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. Item, She hath many nameless virtues.

Loun. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Speed. Here follow her vices.

Loun. Close at the heels of her virtues.

Speed. Item, She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath.

Loun. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast: Read on.

Speed. Item, She hath a sweet mouth.

Loun. That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed. Item, She doth talk in her sleep.

Loun. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.

Speed. Item, She is slow in words.

Loun. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words, is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't; and place it for her chief virtue.

Speed. Item, She is proud.

Loun. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. Item, She hath no teeth.

Loun. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.

Speed. Item, She is curst.

Loun. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Speed. Item, She will often praise her liquor.

Loun. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. Item, She is too liberal.

Loun. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not; for that I'll keep shut: now, of another thing she may; and that I cannot help. Well, proceed.

Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.

Loun. Stop there; I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article: Rehearse that once more.

Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit,—

Loun. More hair than wit,—it may be; I'll prove it: The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit, is more than the wit; for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed. —And more faults than hairs,—

Loun. That's monstrous: O, that that were out!

Speed. —And more wealth than faults.

Loun. Why, that word makes the faults gracious: Well, I'll have her: And if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,— Speed. What then?

Loun. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the north gate.

Speed. For me?

Loun. For thee? ay; who art thou? he hath staid for a better man than thee.

Speed. And must I go to him?

Loun. Thou must run to him, for thou hast staid so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.

Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'twas your love-letters!

Loun. Now will he be swung for reading my letter: An unmanly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets!—I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction.

SCENE II.

The same. A room in the Duke's palace.

Enter DUKE and THURIO; PROTEUS behind

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that she will love you,

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thu. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most forsworn my company, and rail'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure Trenched in ice; which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form.

A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.— How now, sir Proteus? Is your countryman, According to our proclamation, gone?

Pro. Gone, my good lord.

Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.—

Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou hast shown some sign of good desert,) Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace, Let me not live to look upon your grace.

Duke. Thou know'st, how willingly I would effect The match between sir Thurio and my daughter.

Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant, How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here

Duke. Ay, and perversely she persists so.

What might we do, to make the girl forget

The love of Valentine, and love sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent;

Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Duke. Ay, but she'll think, that it is spoke in hate

Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it:

Therefore it must, with circumstance, be spoken

By one, whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him

Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loth to do:

'Tis an ill office for a gentleman;

Especially, against his very friend.

Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage

him,

Your slander never can endamage him;

Therefore the office is indifferent,

Being entreated to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord: if I can do it,

By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,

She shall not long continue love to him.

But say, this weed her love from Valentine,

It follows not, that she will love sir Thurio.

Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him,

Lest it should ravel, and be good to none,

You must provide to bottom it on me:

Which must be done, by praising me as much

As you in worth dispraise sir Valentine.

Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind;

Because we know, on Valentine's report,

You are already love's firm votary,

And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.

Upon this warrant shall you have access,

Where you with Silvia may confer at large;

For she is lumpsich, heavy, melancholy,

And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you;

Where you may temper her, by your persuasion,

To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect:—
at you, sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;
ou must lay lime, to tangle her desires, y wailful sonnets, whose composed rhymes
ould be full fraught with serviceable vows.

Duke. Ay, much the force of heaven-bred poesy.

Pro. So, that upon the altar of her beauty ou sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears
oist it again; and frame some feeling line, hat may discover such integrity:—
or Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews; Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones, fake tigers tame, and huge leviathans orsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.
fter your dire lamenting elegies,
isit by night your lady's chamber-window

With some sweet concert: to their instruments
Tune a deploring dump; the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grievance.
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.

Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.

Thu. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice:
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently

To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in musick:
I have a sonnet, that will serve the turn,
To give the onset to thy good advice.

Duke. About it, gentlemen.

Pro. We'll wait upon your grace till after supper:
And afterward determine our proceedings.

Duke. Even now about it; I will pardon you.
[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

A forest, near Mantua.

Enter certain Outlaws.

1 Out. Fellows, stand fast; I see a passenger.
2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em!

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

3 Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you;

If not, we'll make you sit, and rifle you.

Speed. Sir, we are undone! these are the villains hat all the travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends,—

1 Out. That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.

2 Out. Peace; we'll hear him.

3 Out. Ay, by my beard, will we;

or he's a proper man.

Val. Then know, that I have little wealth to lose;

man I am, cross'd with adversity:

My riches are these poor habiliments;

If which if you should here disfigure me,

on take the sum and substance that I have.

2 Out. Whether travel you?

Val. To Verona.

1 Out. Whence came you?

Val. From Milan.

3 Out. Have you long sojourn'd there?

Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have staid,

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1 Out. What, were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2 Out. For what offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse:

I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;

But yet I slew him manfully in fight,

Without false vantage, or base treachery.

1 Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so:

But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

1 Out. Have you the tongues?

Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy;

Or else I often had been miserable.

3 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,

This fellow were a king for our wild faction.

1 Out. We'll have him: Sirs, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them;

It is an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain!

2 Out. Tell us this: Have you any thing to take to?

Val. Nothing, but my fortune.

3 Out. Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,

Such as the fury of un govern'd youth

Thrust from the company of awful men:

Myself was from Verona banished,

For practising to steal away a lady,

An heir, and near allied unto the duke.

2 Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,

Whom, in my mood, I stabb'd to the heart.

1 Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose,—(for we cite our faults,

That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives,)

And, partly, seeing you are beautified

With goodly shape; and by your own report

A linguist; and a man of such perfection,

As we do in our quality much want:—

2 Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,

Therefore, above the rest, we parcelly to you:

Are you content to be our general?

To make a virtue of necessity,

And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

3 Out. What say'st thou? wilt thou be of our consort?

Say, ay, and be the captain of us all:

We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,

Love thee as our commander, and our king.

1 Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest.

2 Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Val. I take your offer, and will live with you;

Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women, or poor passengers.

3 Out. No, we detest such vile base practices.

Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crews,

And shew thee all the treasure we have got;

Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Milan. Court of the palace.

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,

And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.

Under the colour of commending him

I have access my own love to prefer;

But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,

To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.

When I protest true loyalty to her,

She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;

When to her beauty I commend my vows,

She bids me think, how I have been forsworn

In breaking faith with Julia, whom I lov'd:

And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,

The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,

Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.

But here comes Thurio: now must we to her window,

And give some evening musick to her ear.

Enter THURIO, and Musicians.

Thu. How now, sir Proteus? are you crept before us?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for, you know, that love
Will creep in service where it cannot go.

Thu. Ay, but, I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.

Thu. Whom? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen,

Let's tune, and to it lustily a while.

Enter Host, at a distance; and JULIA in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest! methinks you're allycholly; I pray you, why is it?

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.

Host. Come, we'll have you merry: I'll bring you where you shall hear musick, and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall.

Jul. That will be musick. [Musick plays.]

Host. Hark! hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay: but peace! let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she;
The heavens such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.

Is she kind, as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excellent;
She excels each mortal thing,
Upon the dull earth dwelling:
To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now? are you sadder than you were before?

How do you, man? the musick likes you not.

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.

Host. Why, my pretty youth?

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How? out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet so false, that he grieves my very heart-strings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay, I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.

Host. I perceive, you delight not in musick.

Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the musick!

Jul. Ay; that change is the spite.

Host. You would have them always play but one thing?

Jul. I would always have one play but one thing. But, host, doth this sir Proteus that we talk on, often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me, he loved her out of all nick.

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Jul. Peace! stand aside! the company parts.

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you! I will so plead, that you shall say, my cunning drift excels.

Thu. Where meet we?

Pro. At saint Gregory's well.

Thu. Farewell. [Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.]

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you for your musick, gentlemen: Who is that, that spake?

Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth, you'd quickly learn to know him by his voice.

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.

Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.

Sil. What is your will?

Pro. That I may compass yours.

Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this,—

That presently you hie you home to bed.

Thou subtle, perjurd, false, disloyal man!

Think'st thou, I am so shallow, so conceited,

To be seduced by thy flattery,

That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?

Return, return, and make thy love amends.

For me,—by this pale queen of night I swear,

I am so far from granting thy request,

That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;

And by and by intend to chide myself,

Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;

But she is dead.

Jul. 'Twere false, if I should speak it;

For, I am sure, she is not buried.

Sil. Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend

Survives; to whom, thyself art witness,

I am betroth'd: And art thou not asham'd

To wrong him with thy importunacy?

Pro. I likewise hear, that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave,

Assure thyself, my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call hers thence;

Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

Jul. He heard not that.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,

Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,

The picture that is hanging in your chamber;

To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:

For, since the substance of your perfect self

Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;

And to your shadow will I make true love.

Jul. If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it

And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loth to be your idol, sir;

But, since your falsehood shall become you well

To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,

Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:

And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o'ernight,

That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt Proteus; and Silvia, from above.]

Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my hallidom, I was fast asleep.

Jul. Pray you, where lies sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house: Trust me, I think,

'tis almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night,

That e'er I watch'd, and the most heaviest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. This is the hour that madam Silvia Entreated me to call, and know her mind;
There's some great matter she'd employ me in.—
Madam, madam!

SILVIA appears above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant, and your friend;

One, that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times goodmorrow.

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.

According to your ladyship's impose,

I am thus early come, to know what service

It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,

(Think not I flatter, for, I swear, I do not),

Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd.

Thou art not ignorant, what dear good will

I bear unto the banish'd Valentine;

Nor how my father would enforce me marry

Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhorr'd.

Thyself hast loved; and I have heard thee say,

No grief did ever come so near thy heart,

As when thy lady and thy true love died,

Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.

Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,

To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode;

And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,

I do desire thy worthy company,

Upon whose faith and honour I repose.

Urged not my father's anger, Eglamour,

But think upon my grief, a lady's grief;

And on the justice of my flying hence,

To keep me from a most unholy match,

Which heaven and fortune still reward with plagues.

I do desire thee, even from a heart

As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,

To hear me company, and go with me:

If not, to hide what I have said to thee,

That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;

Which since I know thy virtuously are plac'd,

I give consent to go along with you;

Recking as little what becometh me, as much I wish all good befurtime you.

When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At friar Patrick's cell, Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. I will not fail your ladyship:

Good-morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good-morrow, kind sir Eglamour. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same.

Enter LAUNCE with his dog.

When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up for a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went for't! I have taught him—even as one would say precisely, Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him, as a present to mistress Silvia, from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher, and zeals her capon's leg. O, 'tis a foul thing, when our cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all times. If I had not had more wit than he, to take fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hanged for't; sure as I live, he had suffered for't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentlemen-like dogs, under the duke's table: he had not been there less the mark) a pissing while; but all the chamber melt him. Out with the dog, says one; What cur's that? says another; Whip him out, says the third; Hang him up, says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was rab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: Friend, quoth I, you mean to whip the dog? No, marry, do I, quoth he. You do him the more wrong, quoth I; 'twas I did the thing you wot of. He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this to their servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for these he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for't: 'hon think'st not of this now?—Nay, I remember the trick you served me, when I took my leave of madam Silvia; did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentleman's farthingale? didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well, and will employ thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please;—I will do what I can.

Pro. I hope, thou wilt.—How now, you whorson peasant?

[To Launce.]

Where have you been these two days loitering?

Laun. Marry, sir, I carried mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Laun. Marry, she says, your dog was a cur;

and tells you, curish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Laun. No, indeed, she did not: here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, didst thou offer her this from me?

Laun. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman's boys in the market-place:

and then I offered her mine own; who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again, or ne'er return again into my sight.

Laun. Away, I say: Stay'st thou to vex me here?

A slave that, still an end, turns me to shame.

[Exit Launce.]

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,

Partly, that I have need of such a youth,

That can with some discretion do my business,

For 'tis no trusting to you foolish lowt;

But, chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour;

Which (if my augury deceive me not)

Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:

Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee.

Go presently, and take this ring with thee,

Deliver it to madam Silvia:

She loved me well, deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems, you loved her not, to leave her token:

She's dead, belike.

Pro. Not so; I think, she lives.

Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry, alas?

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks, that she loved you as well

As you do love your lady Silvia:

She dreams on him, that has forgot her love;

You dote on her, that cares not for your love.

'Tis pity, love should be so contrary;

And thinking on it makes me cry, alas!

Pro. Well, give her that ring, and therewithal

This letter;—that's her chamber.—Tell my lady,

I claim the promise for her heavenly picture.

Your message done, hie home unto my chamber,

Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary.

[Exit Proteus.]

Jul. How many women would do such a message?

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox, to be the shepherd of thy lambs;

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him

That with his very heart despiseth me?

Because he loves her, he despiseth me;

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him, when he parted from me,

To bind him to remember my good will:

And now am I (unhappy messenger)

To plead for that, which I would not obtain;

To carry that which I would have refus'd;

To praise his faith, which I would have disprais'd.

I am my master's true confirmed love;

But cannot be true servant to my master,

Unless I prove false traitor to myself.

Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly

As, heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter SILVIA, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean

To bring me where to speak with madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?

Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience

To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, sir Proteus, madam.

Sil. O!—he sends you for a picture?

Jul. Ay, madam.

Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there.

[Picture brought.]

Go, give your master this: tell him from me,

One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,

Would better fit his chamber, than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—

Pardon me, madam; I have unadvis'd

Delivered you a paper that I should not;

This is the letter to your ladyship.

Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.

Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon me.

Sil. There, hold.

I will not look upon your master's lines:

I know, they are stuff'd with protestations,

And full of new-found oaths; which he will break,

As easily as I do tear this paper.

Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.

Sil. The more shame for him, that he sends it me;

For I have heard him say a thousand times,

His Julia gave it him at his departure:

Though his false finger hath profan'd the ring,

Mine shall not do it him at his departure.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou?

Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her;

Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.

Sil. Dost thou know her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself:

To think upon her woes, I do protest,

That I have wept an hundred several times.

Sil. Believe, she thinks that Proteus hath forsok her.

Jul. I think she doth, and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is: When she did think my master lov'd her well, She, in my judgment, was as fair as you; But since she did neglect her looking-glass, And threw her sun-expelling mask away, The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks, And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face, That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature: for, at Pentecost, When all our pageants of delight were play'd, Our youth got me to play the woman's part, And I was trimm'd in madam Julia's gown; Which served me as fit, by all men's judgment, As if the garment had been made for me: Therefore, I know she is about my height.

And, at that time, I made her weep a good,

For I did play a lamentable part:

Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passioning

For Theseus' perjury, and unjust flight;

Which I so lively acted with my tears,

That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,

Wept bitterly; and, would I might be dead,

If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!

Sil. She is beholden to thee, gentle youth!—

Alas, poor lady! desolate and left!—

I weep myself, to think upon thy words.

Here, youth, there is my purse; I give thee this For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her Farewell. [Exit Silvia]

Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if e'er you know her.—

A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful.

I hope my master's suit will be but cold,

Since she respects my mistress' love so much.

Alas, how love can trifle with itself!

Here is her picture: Let me see; I think,

If I had such attire, this face of mine

Were full as lovely as is this of hers:

And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,

Unless I flatter with myself too much.

Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:

If that be all the difference in his love,

I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.

Her eyes are grey as glass; and so are mine:

Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.

What should it be, that he respects in her,

But I can make respective in myself,

If this fond love were not a blinded god?

Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,

For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form,

Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd!

And, were there sense in his idolatry,

My substance should be statue in thy stead.

I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,

That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,

I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,

To make my master out of love with thee. [Exit]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The same. An abbey.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky; And now, it is about the very hour That Silvia, at Patrick's cell, should meet me. She will not fail; for lovers break not hours, Unless it be to come before their time; So much they spur their expedition.

Enter SILVIA.

See, where she comes: Lady, a happy evening!

Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour!

Out at the postern by the abbey-wall;

I fear I am attended by some spies.

Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues off; If we recover that, we are sure enough. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.

The same. A apartment in the Duke's palace.

Enter THURIO, PROTEUS, and JULIA.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?

Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;

And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thu. What, that my leg is too long?

Pro. No; that it is too little.

Thu. I'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat rounder.

Pro. But love will not be spur'd to what it loaths.

Thu. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says, it is a fair one.

Thu. Nay, then the wanton lies; my face is black.

Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,

Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.

Jul. 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;

For I had rather wink than look on them. [Aside]

Thu. How likes she my discourse?

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.

Thu. But well, when I discourse of love, and peace?

Jul. But better, indeed, when you hold your peace. [Aside]

Thu. What says she to my valour?

Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.

Jul. She needs not, when she knows it cowardice. [Aside]

Thu. What says she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv'd.

Jul. True; from a gentleman to a fool. [Aside]

Thu. Considers she my possessions?

Pro. O, ay; and pities them.

Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. That such an ass should owe them. [Aside]

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. How now, sir Proteus? how now, Thurio? Which of you saw sir Eglamour of late?

Thu. Not I.

Pro. Nor I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Yes, my lord.

Duke. Why, then she's fled unto that peasant Valentine;

And Eglamour is in her company.

'Tis true; for friar Laurence met them both,

As he in penance wander'd through the forest:

Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she;

But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it:

Besides, she did intend confession

At Patrick's cell this even; and there she was not

These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence.

Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse,

But mount you presently; and meet with me

Upon the rising of the mountain-foot,

That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled

Despatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit]

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl,

That flies her fortune when it follows her:

I'll after; more to be reveng'd on Eglamour,

Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit]

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love,

Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her. [Exit]

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love,

Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit]

SCENE III.

Frontiers of Mantua. The forest.

Enter SILVIA, and Outlaws.

Out. Come, come;

Be patient, we must bring you to our captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischances than this one

Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.

2 Out. Come, bring her away.

1 Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her?

3 Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us,

But Moyses, and Valerius, follow him.
So thou with her to the west end of the wood,
There is our captain: we'll follow him that's fled;
The thicket is beset, he cannot 'scape.

I Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave:
Fear not; he bears an honourable mind,
And will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine, this I endure for thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Another part of the forest.

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man!
This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods,
I better brook than flourishing peopled towns:
Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
And, to the nightingale's complaining notes,
Tune my distresses, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,
Leave not the mansion so long tenantless;
Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was!
Repair me with thy presence, Silvia;
Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!—
What halloing, and what stir, is this to-day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their law,
Have some unhappy passenger in chase:
I hey love me well; yet I have much to do,
To keep them from uncivil outrages.
Withdraw thee, Valentine; who's this comes here?

[Steps aside.]

Enter PROTEUS, SILVIA, and JULIA.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you,
Though you respect not aught your servant doth,
To hazard life, and rescue you from him
[That would have forc'd your honour and your love.
Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look;
A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Val. How like a dream is this I see and hear!
Love, lend me patience to forbear a while. [Aside.]

Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am!
Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came;
But, by my coming, I have made you happy.

Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.
Jul. And me, when he approacheth to your presence. [Aside.]

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the beast,
Rather than have false Proteus rescue me.
O, heaven be judge, how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul;
And full as much, (for more there cannot be,)
I do detest false perjur'd Proteus:
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,

Would I not undergo for one calm look?
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love where they're belov'd.

Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's belov'd.
Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
To a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury, to love me.

Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou hadst two,
And that's far worse than none; better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one:
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Pro. In love
Who respects friend?

Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words Can no way change you to a milder form,
'Till woo you like a soldier, at arms' end;
And love you 'gainst the nature of love, force you.

Sil. O heaven!
Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch;
Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Pro. Valentine!
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love;

For such is a friend now, treacherous man!

Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have persuaded me: Now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou wouldst disprove me.
Who should be trusted now, when one's right hand
Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry, I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.
The private wound is deepest: O time, most curst!
'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst!

Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me.—
Forgive me, Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender it here; I do as truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest:—
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd;
By penitence the Eternal wrath's appeas'd:—
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia, I give thee.

Jul. O me, unhappy! [Faints.]

Pro. Look to the boy.
Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now? what is the matter?

Look up; speak.
Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me
To deliver a ring to madam Silvia;
Which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Jul. Here 'tis: this is it.
[Gives a ring.]

Pro. How! let me see:
Why this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir, I have mistook;
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
[Shows another ring.]

Pro. But, how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart,

I gave this unto Julia.
Jul. And Julia herself did give it me;
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How! Julia!
Jul. Behold her, that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root?
O Proteus, let this habit make thee blush!

Be thou asham'd, that I have took upon me
Such an immodest raiment; if shame live
In a disguise of love:

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds! 'Tis true: O heaven!
were men

But constant, he were perfect; that one error Fills him with faults; makes him run through all sins:

Inconstancy falls off, ere it begins:
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?

Val. Come, come, a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close;
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I have mine.

Enter Outlaws, with DUKE, and THURIO.

Out. A prize, a prize, a prize!

Val. Forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thu. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.

Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death;
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Milan shall not behold thee. Here she stands,
Take but possession of her with a touch;—

I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.—
Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I;
I hold him but a fool, that will endanger
His body for a girl, that loves him not:

I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,

And leave her on such slight conditions...
 Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
 I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
 And think thee worthy of an empress' love.
 Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
 Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again.—
 Plead a new state in thy unrivall'd merit,
 To which I thus subscribe,—sir Valentine,
 Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd;
 Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.
Val. I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy.
 I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
 To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.
Duke. I grant it for thine own, whate'er it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withal,
 Are men endued with worthy qualities;
 Forgive them what they have committed here,
 And let them be recall'd from their exile:
 They are reformed, civil, full of good,

And fit for great employment, worthy lord.
Duke. Thou hast prevail'd: I pardon them, and
 thee;
 Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts.
 Come, let us go; we will include all jars
 With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.
Val. And, as we walk along, I dare be bold
 With our discourse to make your grace to smile:
 What think you of this page, my lord?
Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; he blushes.
Val. I warrant you, my lord; more grace than boy.
Duke. What mean you by that saying?
Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along,
 That you will wonder what hath fortun'd...
 Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance, but to hear
 The story of your loves discovered:
 That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
 One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

ACT I. SCENE I.

Athens. A room in the palace of Theseus.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, and Attendants.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace; four happy days bring in Another moon: but, oh, methinks, how slow
 This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires,
 Like to a step-dame, or a dowager,
 Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hip. Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights;

Four nights will quickly dream away the time;
 And then the moon, like to a silver bow
 New bent in heaven, shall behold the night
 Of our solemnities.

The. Go, Philostrate,
 Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
 Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
 Turn melancholy forth to funerals,
 The pale companion is not for our pomp.—
 [Exit Philostrate.]

Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword,
 And won thy love, doing thee injuries;
 But I will wed thee in another key,
 With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter EGEUS, HERMIA, LYSANDER, and DEMETRIUS.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!
The. Thanks, good Egeus: What's the news with thee?

Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.—
 Stand forth, Demetrius:—My noble lord,
 This man hath my consent to marry her:—
 Stand forth, Lysander;—and, my gracious duke,
 This hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child:
 Thou, then, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
 And interchange'd love-tokens with my child:
 Thou hast by moon-light at her window sung,
 With feigning voice, verses of feigning love;
 And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
 With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits, Knacks, trifles, nose-gays, sweet-meats; messengers
 Of strong prevailment in unhardened youth:
 With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart;
 Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,

To stubborn harshness:—And, my gracious duke,
 Be it so she will not here before your grace
 Consent to marry with Demetrius,
 I beg the ancient privilege of Athens;
 As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
 Which shall be either to this gentleman,
 Or to her death; according to our law,
 Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair maid:
 To you your father should be as a god;
 One, that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
 To whom you are but as a form in wax,
 By him imprinted, and within his power
 To leave the figure, or to disfigure it.
 Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himself he is:
 But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
 The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.

Her. I do entreat your grace to pardon me.
 I know not by what power I am made bold;
 Nor how it may concern my modesty
 In such a presence here to plead my thoughts:
 But I beseech your grace, that I may know
 The worst, that may befall me in this case,
 If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
 For ever the society of men.

Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires,
 Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
 Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
 You can endure the livery of a nun;
 For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
 To live a barren sister all your life,
 Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
 Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
 To undergo such maiden pilgrimage:
 But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
 Than that, which, withering on the virgin thorn,
 Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
 Ere I will yield my virgin patent up Unto his lordship, whose unwish'd yoke
 My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The. Take time to pause: and, by the next new moon,
 (The sealing-day betwixt my love and me,

For everlasting bond of fellowship,
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your father's will:
Or else, to wed Demetrius, as he would:
Or on Diana's altar to protest,
For aye, austerity and single life.

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia;—And, Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.

Ege. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love;
And what is mine my love shall render him;
And she is mine; and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd; my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius';
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia:
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

The. I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.—
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will;
Or else the law of Athens yields you up (Which by no means we may extenuate,
To death, or to a vow of single life.—
Come, my Hippolyta; What cheer, my love?—
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along.
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial; and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Ege. With duty and desire we follow you.

[Exeunt The. Hip. Ege. Dem. and train.]

Lys. How now, my love? Why is your cheek so pale?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast?

Her. Belike, for want of rain; which I could well
Beteem them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Ah me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth:
But, either it was different in blood;

Her. O cross! too high to be enthrall'd to low!

Lys. Or else misgraffed, in respect of years;

Her. O spite! too old to be engag'd to young!

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends:

Her. O hell! to choose love by another's eye!

Lys. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it;

Making it momentary as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream;

Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,

And ere a man hath power to say,—Behold!
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:

So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true lovers have been ever cross'd,
It stands as an edict in destiny:

Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross;

As due to love, as thoughts, and dreams, and sighs,
Wishes and tears, poor fancy's followers.

Lys. A good persuasion; therefore hear me, Hermia.

I have a widow aunt, a dowager
Of great revenue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven leagues;
And she respects me as her only son.

There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee;
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us: If thou lov'st me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night;

And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander!

I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow;
By his best arrow with the golden head;
By the simplicity of Venus' doves;
By that which knitteth souls, and prospers loves
And by that fire, which burn'd the Carthage queen
When the false Trojan under sail was seen;
By all the vows, that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke;—
In that same place, thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love: Look, here comes Helena.

Enter HELENA.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither away?

Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unsay.
Demetrius loves you fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lodestars; and your tongue's sweet a
More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear,
Sickness is catching; O, were favour so!
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go;
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye.
My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody:
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'll give to be to you translated.
O, teach me how you look; and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O, that your frowns would teach my skill such skill!

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.

Hel. O, that my prayers could such affection move

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.

Hel. None, but your beauty; 'Would that fate were mine!

Her. Take comfort; he no more shall see face;

Lysander and myself will fly this place.—
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me:
O then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven unto hell!

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold.

To-morrow-night, when Phoebe doth behold
Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,
(A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal),
Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I Upon faint primrose-beds were wont to lie,
Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet:
There my Lysander and myself shall meet:
And thence, from Athens, turn away our eyes,
To seek new friends and stranger companies.

Farewell, sweet playfellow; pray thou for us,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!—
Keep word, Lysander: we must starve our sight
From lovers' food, till morrow deep midnight.

[Exit Her.]

Lys. I will, my Hermia.—Helena, adieu:
As you on him, Demetrius dote on you!

[Exit L.]

Hel. How happy some, o'er other some can be Through Athens I am thought as fair as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so;
He will not know what all but he do know.
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities,
Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpore to form and dignity.
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;
And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind:
Nor hath love's mind of any judgment taste;
Wings, and no eyes, figure unheedy haste:
And therefore is love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.
As waggish boys in game themselves forswear,
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eye,
He hail'd down oaths, that he was only mine;
And when this hall some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight:

en to the wood will he, to-morrow night,
resue her; and for this intelligence
I have thanks, it is a dear expense:
I herein mean I to enrich my pain, have his sight thither, and back again. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room in a cottage.

Enter SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOOT, QUINCE, and STARVELING.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play our interlude before the duke and duchess, on wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play acts on; then read the names of the actors; and grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is—The most lamentable tragedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your ors by the scroll: Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the lover.

Bot. Ready: Name what part I am for, and I'll be there.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in measure. To the rest:—Yet my chief humour for a tyrant: I could play Hercules rarely, or a tr to tear a cat in, to make all split.

“The raging rocks,
“With shivering shocks, “Shall break the locks
“Of prison-gates:
“And Phibbus' car “Shall shine from far,
“And make and mar
“The foolish fates.”

is was lofty!—Now name the rest of the play-—This is Hercules' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus most love.

Flu. Nay, faith, let me not play a woman; I ve a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice;—Thisbe, Thisbe,—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisbe
dear! and lady dear!

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus, and,
Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus's father; myself, Thisby's father;—Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part:— and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too: I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, Let him roar again, Let him roar again.

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus: for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What heard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-coloured beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.—But, masters, here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight; there will we rehearse: for if we meet in the city, we shall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely, and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; Hold, or cut bow-strings. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A wood near Athens.

Enter a Fairy at one door, and PUCK at another.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,

Thorough bush, thorough briar,

Over park, over pale,

Thorough flood, thorough fire,

I do wander every where,

Swifter than the moon's sphere;

And I serve the fairy queen,

To dew her orbs upon the green:

The cowslips tall her pensioners be;

In their gold coats spots you see;

Those be rubies, fairy favours,

In those freckles live their savours:

Must go seek some dew-drops here,

And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

Farewell, thou lob of spirits, I'll be gone;

Oar queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to-night,

Take heed, the queen come not within his sight.

For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,

Because that she, as her attendant, hath

A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;

She never had so sweet a changeling;

And jealous Oberon would have the child

Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild;

But she, perforce, withholdeth the loved boy,

Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy:

And now they never meet in grove, or green,

By fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen,

But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,

Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,

Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite, Call'd Robin Good-fellow: are you not he,
That fright the maidens of the villagery;
Skim milk; and sometimes labour in the quern,
And bootless make the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime make the drink to bear no barm;
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good luck:
Are not you he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a silly foal:
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither'd dew-lap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And tailor cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe;
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.—
But room, Faery, here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress:—'Would that he were gone!

SCENE II.

Enter OBERON, at one door, with his train, and TITANIA, at another, with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moon-light, proud Titania!

Tita. What, jealous Oberon? Fairy, skip hence;
I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton; Am not I thy lord?

Tita. Then I must be thy lady: But I know,
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love,
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here,
Come from the farthest steep of India?
But that, forsooth, the bouncing Amazon,
Your buskia'd mistress, and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded; and you come
To give their bed joy and prosperity.

Obe. How caust thou thus, for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Perigene, whom he ravished?
And make him with fair Aegle break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiope?

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy:
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or on the beached margin of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawls thou hast disturb'd our sport:
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs; which falling in the land,
Have every pelting river made so proud,
That they have overborne their continents:
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweat; and the green corn
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrain flog;
The nine men's morris is fill'd up with mud;
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread, are undistinguishable:
The human mortals want their winter here;
No night is now with hymn or carol blest:—
Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatic diseases do abound:
And thorough this distemperature, we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose;
And on old Hyems' chin, and icy crown,
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set: The spring, the summer,

The chilling autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liveries; and the 'mazed world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which:
And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissension;
We are their parents and original.

Obe. Do you amend it then; it lies in you:
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.

Tita. Set your heart at rest,
The fairy land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a votress of my order:
And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
Full often hath she gessid' by my side;
And sat with me on Neptune's-yellow sands,
Marking the embarked traders on the flood;
When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive
And grow big-bellied with the wanton wind:
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait (Following her womb, then rich with my y 'quire,)

Would imitate; and sail upon the land,
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And, for her sake, I do rear up her boy;
And, for her sake, I will not part with him.
Obe. How long within this wood intend you st

Tita. Perchance, till after Theseus' wedding—
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with t Tita. Not for thy kingdom.—Fairies, away:
We shall hide downright, if I longer stay.

[Exeunt Titania, and her train.
Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from grove,

Till I torment thee for this injury.—
My gentle Puck, come hither: Thou remember
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song;
And certain stars shot madly from their sphere
To hear the sea maid's music.

Puck. I remember.
Obe. That very time I saw, (but thou could'st not Flying between the cold moon and the earth, Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal, throned by the west;
And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon;
And the imperial votress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,—
Before, milk-white; now purple with love's wound
And maidens call it love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee c
The juice of it on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb: and be thou here again,
Ere the Leviathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes. [Exit P.
Obe. Having once this juice,
I'll watch Titania, when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
(Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,)
She shall pursue it with the soul of love.
And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
(As I can take it, with another herb,)
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible;
And I will overhear their conference.

Enter DEMETRIUS, HELENA following I
Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me n
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia?

The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me.
Thou told'st me, they were stol'n into this wood,
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet with Hermia.

Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.
Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant;
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Nay, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you—I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more,
Am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Love me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.

What worse place can I beg in your love,
And yet a place of high respect with me,
Than to be used as you use your dog?
Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit;
Or I am sick, when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am sick, when I look not on you.
Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,
To leave the city, and commit yourself
To the hands of one, that loves you not;
Or trust the opportunity of night,
And the ill counsel of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my privilege for that.
Is not night, when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night:
Or doth this wood lack worlds of company;
Or you, in my respect, are all the world:
Then how can it be said, I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd;
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind Makes speed to catch the tiger: Bootless speed!
Then cowardice pursues, and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go:
Nay, if thou follow me, do not believe
That I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
Or do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!
Thou wrongs do set a scandal on my sex:
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo.
I follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.

[Exeunt Dem. and Hel.] Obc. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove,
Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.—

Re-enter PUCK.

Is't not the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.
Puck. Ay, there it is.
Obc. I pray thee, give it me.
Crown ox-lips and the nodding violet grows;
Under the canopy with lush woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine:
Where sleeps Titania, some time of the night,
I'll d in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
And eed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:
The sweet Athenian lady is in love
With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
If it do it, when the next thing he espies
Shall be the lady: Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care; that he may prove
More fond on her, than she upon her love:
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another part of the wood.

Enter TITANIA, with her train.

Tit. Come, now a roundel, and a fairy song;
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds;
Some, war with rear-mice for their leathern wings,
To make my small elves coats; and some, keep back
The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders
At our quaint spirits: Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices; and let me rest.

SONG.

I Fai. You spotted snakes, with double tongue,
Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Newts, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen:

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby:
Never harm, nor spell nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.

II.

2 Fai. Weaving spiders, come not here:
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence:
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm, nor snail, do no offence.

CHORUS.

Philomel with melody, &c.

I Fai. Hence, away; now all is well:
One, aloof, stand sentinel.

[Exeunt Fairies. Titania sleeps.]

Enter OBERON.

Obc. What thou seest, when thou dost wake, [Squeezes the flower on Titania's eyelids.]
Do it for thy true love take;
Love, and languish for his sake:
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear;
Wake, when some vile thing is near. } [Exit.]

Enter LYSANDER and HERMIA.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood;
And to speak troth, I have forgot our way;
We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so, Lysander: find you out a bed,
For I upon this bank will rest my head.

Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;
One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.

Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my sake, my dear, Lie further off yet, do not lie so near.

Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocence;
Love takes the meaning, in love's conference.
I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit;
So that but one heart we can make of it:
Two bosoms interchain'd with an oath;
So then, two bosoms, and a single troth.
Then, by your side no bed-room me deny;
For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:—
Now much beshrew my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied.

But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy Lie further off; in human modesty
Such separation, as, may well be said,
Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid:
So far be distant; and good night, sweet friend:
Thy love ne'er alter, till thy sweet life end!

Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;
And then end life, when I find loyalty!
Here is my bed: Sleep give thee all his rest!

Her. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be press'd! } [They sleep.]

D

Enter PUCK.

Puck. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eye-lid.
So awake, when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon.

[Exit.]

Enter DEMETRIUS and HELENA, running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.

Hel. O, wilt thou darkest leave me? do not so.
Dem. Stay on thy peril; I alone will go.

[Exit Demetrius.]

Hel. O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears;

If so, my eyes are oftener washed than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me, run away for fear:
Therefore, no marvel, though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dessembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's spherish eye?—
But who is here?—Lysander! on the ground!
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound:—
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so:

What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.

Lys. Content with Hermia? No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.

Not Hermia, but Helena I love:

Who will not change a raven for a dove?

The will of man is by his reason sway'd;

And reason says, you are the worthier maid.

Things growing are not ripe until their season:

So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;

And touching now the point of human skill,

Reason becomes the marshal to my will,

And leads me to your eyes: where I o'erlook
Love's stories, written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?

When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?

Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,

That I did never, no, nor never can,

Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,

But you must frown my insufficiency?

Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do

In such disdainful manner me to woo.

But fare you well: perforce I must confess,

I thought you lord of more true gentleness.

O, that a lady, of one man refused,

Should, of another, therefore be abus'd!

[Exit.]

Lys. She sees not Hermia:—Hermia, sleep thou
there;

And never may'st thou come Lysander near!

For, as a surfeit, of the sweetest things

The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;

Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,

Are hated most of those they did deceive;

So thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,

Of all be hated; but the most of me!

And all my powers, address your love and might

To honour Helen, and to be her knight!

[Exit.]

Her. [Starting.] Help me, Lysander, help me do thy best,

To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!

Ah me, for pity!—what a dream was here!

Lysander, look, how I do quake with fear:

Methought a serpent eat my heart away,

And you sat smiling at his cruel prey:—

Lysander! what, remov'd? Lysander! lord!

What, out of hearing? gone! no sound, no word!

Alack, where are you? speak, an if you hear;

Speak, of all loves; I swoon almost with fear.

No?—then I will perceive you are not high:

Either death, or you, I'll find immediately.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. The Queen of Fairies lying asleep.

Enter QUINCE, SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal: This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,—

Quin. What say'st thou, bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby, that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'r-lakin, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe, we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit; I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue: and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords; and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and, for the more better assurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is no more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell, is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and himself must speak through, saying thus, or to some defect,—Ladies, or fair ladies, I would wish you, or, I would request you, or, I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for you! If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: No, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are:—and there, indeed, let him name his name; and tell them plainly, he is Snug the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is hard things; that is, to bring the moon-light in a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Both the moon shine, that night we play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moon-shine, find out moon-shine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then you may leave a casement of great chamber window, where we play, open; let the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush thorns and a lantern, and say, he comes to figure, or to present, the person of Moonshine. On, there is another thing: we must have a wall the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, 's the story, did talk through the chink of a ll.

Saug. You never can bring in a wall.—What 's you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present Wall: and him have some plaster, or some lome, or some high-cast about him, to signify wall; or let him d his fingers thus, and through that cranny ll Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, down, every mother's son, and rehearse your ts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken ur speech, enter into that brake; and so every 's according to his cue.

Enter PUCK behind.

Puck. What hempen home-spuns have we swag-gering here, near the cradle of the fairy queen? hat, a play toward? I'll be an auditor; actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus.—Thisby, stand forth.

Py. Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweet,—

Quin. Odours, odours.

Py. — odours savours sweet:

So doth thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.—

It, hark, a voice! stay thou but here a while,

And by and by I will to thee appear. [Exit.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus than e'er played here!

[Aside.—Exit.

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you: for you must un-stand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, d is to come again.

This. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue,

Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,

With brisly juvenal, and eke most lovely Jew,

As true as trust horse, that yet would never tire,

I meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb.

Quin. Ninus' tomb, man! Why you must not sak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you sak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus er; your cue is past: it is, never tire.

Enter PUCK, and BOTTOM with an ass's head.

This. O,—As true as trust horse, that yet would never tire.

Py. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine:—

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.

ay, masters! fly, masters! help! [Exit Clowns.

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round, through bog, through bush, through brake,

through brier;

metime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,

A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire;

d neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,

ke horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn.

[Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery them, to make me afeard.

Re-enter SNOUT.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass's head of ur own; do you?

Re-enter QUINCE.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art unslated. [Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an ass me; to fright me, if they could. But I will not r from this place, do what they can: I will walk and down here, and I will sing, that they shall ar I am not afraid. [Sings.

The onsel-cock, so black of hne,

With orange tawny bill,

The throistle with his note so true,

The wren with little quill;

Tita. What angel wakes me from my flowery bed?

[Waking.

Bot. The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,

The plain-song cuckoo gray,

Whose note full many a man doth mark,

And dares not answer nay;—

for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry, cuckoo, never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again: Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note, So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape; And thy fair virtue's force perforce doth move me, On the first view, to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: And yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days: The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not so, neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go! Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no. I am a spirit, of no common rate; The summer still doth tend upon my state, And I do love thee: therefore, go with me; I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee; And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep, And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep; And I will purge thy mortal grossness so, That thou shalt live an airy spirit go.— Peas-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-seed!

Enter four Fairies.

1 Fai. Ready.

2 Fai. And I.

3 Fai. And I.

4 Fai. Where shall we go?

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman:

Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes;

Feed him with apricocks, and dewberries,

With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries;

The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees,

And, for night tapers, crop their waxen thighs,

And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,

To have my love to bed, and to arise;

And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,

To fan the moon-beams from his sleeping eyes:

Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

1 Fai. Hail, mortal!

2 Fai. Hail!

3 Fai. Hail!

4 Fai. Hail!

Bot. I cry your worship's mercy, heartily.—I beseech, your worship's name?

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master Cobweb: If I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman?

Pecs. Peas-blossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mrs. Squash, your mother, and to master Peascod, your father.

Good master Peas-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.—Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well: that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house: I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.

The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye;

And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,

Lamenting some enforced chastity.

Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

Another part of the wood.Enter OBERON.

Obc. I wonder, if Titania be awak'd ;
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter PUCK.

Here comes my messenger.—How now, mad spirit ?
What night-rule now about this haunted grove ?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love.
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play,
Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day.
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport
Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake :
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass's howl I fixed on his head ;
Anon, his Thisbe must be answered,
And forth my mimic comes : When they him spy,
As well geese that the creeping fowler eye,
Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun's report,
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky ;
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly :
And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls ;
He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense, thus weak, lost with their fears, thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong :
For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch ;
Some, sleeves ; some, hats : from yielders all things catch.

I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there :
When in that moment (so it came to pass),
Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.
Obc. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do ?
Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd too,—
And the Athenian woman by his side ;
That, when he wak'd, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter DEMETRIUS and HERMIA.

Obc. Stand close ; this is the same Athenian.
Puck. This is the woman, but not this the man.
Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so ?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.
Her. Now I but chide, but I should use thee worse ;
For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.
The sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me : Would he have stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia ? I'll believe as soon,
This whole earth may be hor'd ; and that the moon
May through the centre creep, and so displease
Her brother's noon-tide with the Antipodes.
It cannot be, but thou hast murder'd him ;
So should a murderer look ; so dead, so grim.
Dem. So should the murder'd look ; and so should I,
Pierc'd through the heart with your stern cruelty :
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.
Her. What's this to my Lysander ? Where is he ?
Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me ?
Dem. I had rather give his carcase to my hounds.
Her. Out, dog ! out, cur ! thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then ?
Henceforth be never number'd among men !
O ! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake ;
Durst thou have look'd upon him, being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping ? O brave touch !
Could not a worm, an adder, do so much ?
An adder did it ; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.
Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood :
I am not guilty of Lysander's blood ;

Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me then, that he is well.
Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefor

Her. A privilege, never to see me more.—
And from thy hated presence part I so :
See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit
Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein
Here, therefore, for a while I will remain.
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt, that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe ;
Which now, in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.

Obc. What hast thou done ? thou hast mistake
quite,

And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight
Of thy misprision must perforce ensue
Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true

Puck. Then fate o'er-rules ; that, one man holdin
troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.

Obc. About the wood go swifter than the wind
And Helena of Athens look thou find :
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer
With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear
By some illusion see thou bring her here :
I'll charm his eyes, against she does appear.

Puck. I go, I go ; look, how I go ;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit

Obc. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye !
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.—
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter PUCK.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand ;
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee ;
Shall we their fond pageant see ?
Lord, what fools these mortals be !
Obc. Stand aside : the noise they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once woo one ;
That must needs be sport alone ;
And those things do best please me,
That befall preposterously.

Enter LYSANDER and HELENA.

Lys. Why should you think, that I should w in scorn ?
Scorn and derision never come in tears :
Look, when I vow, I weep ; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true ?
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and mo
When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray !
These vows are Hermia's : Will you give her o'e Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh ; and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no judgment, when to her I swore.
Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'e
Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you Dem. [Awaking.] O Helen, goddess, nym perfect, divine !
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne ?
Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow ?
That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow.
When thou hold'st up thy hand ; O let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss !
Hel. O spite ! O hell ! I see you all are bent
To set against me, for your merriment.
If you were civil, and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls, to mock me too ?
If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so ;

o vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When, I am sure, you hate me with your hearts.
You both are rivals, and love Hermia;
And now both rivals, to mock Helena:
Trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
O conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes,
With your derision! none, of noble sort,
Would so offend a virgin; and extort
Poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.

Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so;
or you love Hermia; this, you know, I know:
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
And Hermia's love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.
Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will none:
e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart with her but, as guest-wise, sojourn'd;
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
Here to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.
Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know.
Est, to thy peril, thou abyt it dear.—
Look, where thy love comes; yonder is thy dear.

Enter HERMIA.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
He ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
Pays the hearing double recompense:—
How art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
In ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
O why unkindly didst thou leave me so?
Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go?

Her. What love could press Lysander from my side?

Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,
Nor Helena; who more egg'ds the night
Than all you fiery ones and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know,
I hate I bare thee made me leave thee so?

Her. You speak not as you think; it cannot be.
Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacy!
How I perceive they have conjoin'd, all three,
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Jurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid!
I have you with this foul derision?

All the counsel, that we two have shar'd,
In sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us,—O, and is all forgot?
I school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?
O, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
You have with our needs created both one flower,
And on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
And warbling of one song, both in one key;
And if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together:
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;
But yet a union in partition,

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem:
Or, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Or, of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Yet but to one, and crown'd with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
And join with men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it;
Nough I alone do feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words:
Scorn you not; it seems, that you scorn me.
Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?
And made you other love, Demetrius,
Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,
To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander
Scorn your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection;
And by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,

So hung upon with love, so fortunate;
But miserable most, to love unlov'd?
This you should pity, rather than despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Hel. Ay, do, persevere, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mows upon me, when I turn my back;
Wink at each other; hold the sweet jest up:
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault;
Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse;
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!

Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.

Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.

Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat; Thy threats have no more strength, than her weak prayers.—

Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do;
I swear by that, which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false, that says, I love thee not.

Dem. I say, I love thee more than he can do.

Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.

Dem. Quick, come,—

Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Æthiop!

Dem. No, no, sir:—he will

Seem to break loose; take on, as you would follow;

But yet come not: You are a tame man, go!

Lys. Hang off, thou cat, thou burr: vile thing, let loose;

Or I will shake thee from me, like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude? what change is this,

Sweet love?

Lys. Thy love? out, tawny Tartar, out!

Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!

Her. Do you not jest?

Hel. Yes, 'sooth; and so do you.

Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond; for, I perceive,
A weak bond holds you; I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?

Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.

Her. What, can you do me greater harm, than hate?

Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love?

Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?

I am as fair now, as I was erewhile.

Since night, you lov'd me; yet, since night you left me,
Why, then you left me,—O, the gods forbid!
In earnest, shall I say?

Lys. Ay, by my life;
And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore, be out of hope, of question, doubt,
Be certain, nothing truer; 'tis no jest,
That I do hate thee, and love Helena.

Her. O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom!
You thief of love! what, have you come by night,
And stol'n my love's heart from him?

Hel. Fine, if' faith!

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?

Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet you!

Her. Puppet! why so? Ay, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive, that she hath made compare Between our statures, she hath urg'd her height;
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.—
And are you grown so high in his esteem,
Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?
How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak;
How low am I? I am not yet so low,
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me: I was never curst;
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my covardice;
Let her not strike me: Yon, perhaps, may think,
Because she's something lower than myself,
That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark, again.

Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.

D 2

I evermore did love you, Hermia,
Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you ;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood :
He follow'd you ; for love, I follow'd him.
But he hath chid me hence ; and threaten'd me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too :
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further : Let me go :
You see how simple and how fond I am.

Her. Why, get you gone : Who is't, that hinders you ?

Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander ?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid : she shall not harm thee, Helena.

Dem. No, sir ; she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O, when she's angry, she is keen and shrewd :
She was a vixen, when she went to school ;
And, though she be but little, she is fierce.

Her. Little again ? nothing but low and little ?—
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus ?
Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf ;
You minimus, of hind'ring knot-grass made ;
You bead, you acorn !

Dem. You are too officious
In her behalf, that scorns your services.
Let her alone ; speak not of Helena ;
Take not her part : for, if thou dost intend Never so little show of love to her,
Thou shalt abyt it.

Lys. Now she holds me not ;
Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Or thine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow ? nay, I'll go with thee, cheek by jole. [Exeunt Lys. and Dem.]

Her. You, mistress, all this coil is 'long of you :
Nay, go not back.

Hel. I will not trust you, I ;
Nor longer stay in your curst company.

Your hands, than mine, are quicker for a fray ;
My legs are longer, though, to run away. [Exit.]

Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say. [Exit, pursuing Helena.]

Ob. This is thy negligence : still thou mistak'st,
Or else commit'st thy knaveries wiffully.

Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me, I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on ?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes :
And so far am I glad it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Ob. Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to fight :
Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night ;
The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog, as black as Acheron ;
And lead these testy rivals so astray,
As one come not within another's way.

Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong ;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius ;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep :
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye ;
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eye-balls roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seem a dream, and fruitless vision ;
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,
With league, whose date till death shall never end.
Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,
I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy ;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste ;
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger ;
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and
there,

Troop home to church-yards : damned spirits all
That in cross-ways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone ;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wiffully themselves exile from light,
And must for aye consort with black-brow'd night.

Ob. But we are spirits of another sort :
I with the morning's love have oft made sport ;
And, like a forester, the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt-grew streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste ; make no delay :
We may effect this business yet ere day.

[Exit Oberon]

Puck. Up and down, up and down ;

I will lead them up and down ;

I am fear'd in field and town ;

Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one.

Enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius ? speak thou now.

Puck. Here villain ; drawn, and ready. Wh art thou ?

Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Puck. Follow me th
To plainer ground. [Exit Lys. as following the voice]

Enter DEMETRIUS.

Dem. Lysander ! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled ?
Speak. In some bush ? Where dost thou hide head ?

Puck. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the st Telling the hushes, that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come ? Come, recreant ; come, thou ch
I'll whip thee with a rod : He is devil'd,
That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea ; art thou the Puck. Follow my voice ; we'll try no man's here. [Exit]

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me c
When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter heel'd than I :

I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly ;
That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day

For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite. [Sle]

Re-enter PUCK and DEMETRIUS.

Puck. Ho, ho ! ho, ho ! Coward, why co thou not ?

Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st ; for well I w
Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place ;
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou ?

Puck. Come hither ; I am here.

Dem. Nay, then thou mock'st me. Thou s buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by day-light see :
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
To measure out my length on this cold bed.—
By day's approach look to be visited.

[Lies down and sl]

Enter HELENA.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious nig Abate thy hours ; shine, comforts, from the
That I may back to Athens, by day-light,

From these, that my poor company detest
And, sleep, that sometime shuts up sorrow's e Steal me a while from mine own company. [Sl]

Puck. Yet but three ? Come one more ;

Two of both kinds make up four.

Here she comes, curst and sad :

Cupid is a knavish lad,
That to make poor females mad.

Enter HERMIA.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with briars;
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
I will I rest me, till the break of day.
The heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!

[Lies down.]

Puck. On the ground

Sleep sound:

I'll apply

To your eye,

Gentle lover, remedy.

[Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eye.]

When thou wak'st,

Thou tak'st

True delight

In the sight

Of thy former lady's eye:

And the country proverb known,

That every man should take his own,

In your waking shall be shown:

Jack shall have Jill;

Nought shall go ill;

The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well.

[Exit Puck.—Dem. Hel. &c. sleep.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same.

Enter TITANIA and BOTTOM, Fairies attending;
OBERON behind unseen.

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,

While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,

And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,

And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

Bot. Where's Peas-blossom?

Peas. Ready.

Bot. Scratch my head, Peas-blossom.—Where's onsieur Cobweb?

Cob. Ready.

Bot. Monsieur Cobweb; good monsieur, get your sapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped amble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good mon-sur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not; I would be loath to have you over-flown with a honey-g, signior.—Where's monsieur Mustard-seed?

Must. Ready.

Bot. Give me your niece, monsieur Mustard-seed.

Pray you, leave your courtesy, good monsieur.

Must. What's your will?

Bot. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help cavalero web to scratch. I must to the barber's, mon-sur; for, methinks, I am marvellous hairy about my face: and I am such a tender ass, if my hair

but tickle me, I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou hear some musick, my sweet love?

Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in musick:

we have the tongs and the bones.

Tita. Or, say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.

Bot. Truly, a peck of provender; I could munch up good dry oats. Methinks, I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath fellow.

Tita. I have a venturous fairy, that shall seek the squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.

Bot. I had rather have a handful, or two, of dried peas. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir up; I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.

Thou shalt be gone, and he all ways away.

Bot. Doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle entwist, —the female ivy so enwrings the barked fingers of the elm.

How I love thee! how I dote on thee! [They sleep.]

OBERON advances. Enter PUCK.

Obe. Welcome, good Robin. See'st thou this sweet sight?

How dotage now I do begin to pity.

How meeting her of late, behind the wood,

Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool,

Did upbraid her, and fall out with her:

How she his hairy temples then had rounded

With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;

And that same dew, which sometime on the buds

Was wont to swell, like round and orient pearls,

Is now within the pretty florets' eyes,

Like tears, that did their own disgrace bewail.

When I had, at my pleasure, taunted her,

And she, in mild terms, begg'd my patience,

I then did ask of her her changing child;

Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent

To bear him to my bower in fairy land.

And now I have the boy, I will undo

This hateful imperfection of her eyes.

And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp

From off the head of this Athenian swain;

That he, awaking, when the others do,

May all to Athens back again repair;

And think no more of this night's accidents,

But as the fierce vexation of a dream.

But first I will release the fairy queen.

Be, as thou wast wont to be;

See, as thou wast wont to see:

Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower

Hath such force and blessed power.

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.

Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!

Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.

Obe. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass?

O, how mine eyes do loath this visage now!

Obe. Silence, a while.—Robin, take off this head.—

Titania, musick call; and strike more dead

Than common sleep, of all these five the sense.

Tita. Musick, ho! musick; such as charmeth sleep.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, musick. [Still musick.] Come, my queen, take hands with me,

And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.

Now thou and I are new in amity;

And will, to-morrow midnight, solemnly,

Dance in duke Theseus' house triumphantly,

And bless it to all fair posterity:

There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be

Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark;

I do hear the morning lark.

Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad,

Trip we after the night's shade:

We the globe can compass soon,

Swifter than the wandering moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight,

Tell me how it came this night,

That I sleeping here was found,

With these mortals, on the ground. [Exeunt.]

[Horns sound within.]

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS, and train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester:—

For now our observation is perform'd:

And since we have the vaward of the day,

My love shall hear the musick of my hounds.—

Uncouple in the western valley; go:—

Despatch, I say, and find the forester.—

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,

And mark the musical confusion

Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules, and Cadmus, once,

When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear

With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear

Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,

The skies, the fountains, every region near

Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard

So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-knee'd, and dew-lap'd like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:
Judge, when you hear.—But, soft; what nymphs are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep;
And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena:
I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt, they rose up early, to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent, Came here in grace of our solemnity.—
But, speak, Egeus; is not this the day,
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

Horns, and shout within. DEMETRIUS, LYSAN-SANDER, HERMIA, and HELENA, wake and start up.

The. Good-morrow, friends. St. Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now!

Lys. Pardon, my lord.

[He and the rest kneel to Theseus.

The. I pray you all, stand up.

I know, you two are rival enemies;
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half 'sleep, half waking: But as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here:
But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,— And now I do bethink me, so it is;) I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was, to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough:
I beg the law, the law, upon his head.—
They would have stol'n away; they would, Demetrius, Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You, of your wife; and me, of my consent;
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood;
And I in fury hither follow'd them;
Fair Helena in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melted as doth the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd,
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loath this food:
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will, for evermore, be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.—
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.—
Away, with us, to Athens: Three and three, We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.—
Come, Hippolyta.

[Exeunt Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.
Dem. These things seem small, and undistinguishable,

Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks, I see these things with parted eye,
When every thing seems double.

Hel. So methinks:

And I have found Demetrius like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem.

It seems to me,
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do not you think
The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea; and my father.

Hel.

And Hippolyta.

Lys. And he did bid us follow to the temple.

Dem. Why then, we are awake: let's follow him
And, by the way, let us recount our dreams.

[Exeunt.

As they go out, BOTTOM awakes.

Bot. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer:—my next is, Most fair Pyramus.—He ho!—Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-mende Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had most rare vision. I have had a dream,—past the wit of man to say what dream it was: Man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream Methought I was—there is no man can tell what Methought I was, and methought I had,—But my is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard the ear of man hath not seen; man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his be to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. [Exit.

SCENE II.

Athens. A room in Quince's house.

Enter QUINCE, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? Is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is transported.

Flu. If he come not, then the play is marred;
goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man all Athens, able to discharge Pyramus, but he.

Flu. No; he hath simply the best wit of any handycraft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too: and he is very paramour, for a sweet voice.

Flu. You must say, paragon: a paramour is God bless us, a thing of nought.

Enter SNUG.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flu. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a-day during his life; he could not have 'scape sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a-day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter BOTTOM.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are their hearts?

Quin. Bottom!—O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders: but ask me not what; for, if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined: Get your apparel together; good strings to your beads, new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace; ever man look o'er his part; for, the short and the long is, our play is preferred. In any case, let Thisbe have clean linen; and let not him, that plays the lion, pare his nails, for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onion:
nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath; an
I do not doubt, but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words; away; go, away.

[Exeunt.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

e same. An apartment in the palace of Theseus.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, lords, and attendants.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

Ths. More strange than true. I never may believe these antique fables, nor these fairy toys.

vers, and madmen, have such seething brains, such shaping fantasies, that apprehend more than cool reason ever comprehends.

such lunatick, the lover, and the poet, of imagination all compact:

such sees more devils than vast hell can hold; and it is, the madman: the lover, all as frantic, such Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt:

such poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven;

such as imagination bodies forth forms of things unknown, the poet's pen presents them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing a local habitation, and a name.

such tricks hath strong imagination; and it, if it would but apprehend some joy, so comprehends some bringer of that joy;

such in the night, imagining some fear, how easy is a hush suppos'd a bear?

Hip. But all the story of the night told over, and all their minds transfigur'd so together, more witnesseth than fancy's images, grows to something of great constancy; howsoever, strange, and admirable.

Enter LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS, HERMIA, and HELENA.

Ths. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth,— gentle friends! joy, and fresh days of love, accompany your hearts!

Hip. More than to us it on your royal walks, your board, your bed!

Ths. Come now; what masks, what dances, shall we have, we wear away this long age of three hours, between our after-supper, and bed-time?

ere is our usual manager of mirth? at revels are in hand? Is there no play, to ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

Philost. Here, mighty Theseus.

Ths. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?

at mask? what music? How shall we beguile away time, if not with some delight?

Philost. There is a brief, how many sports are ripe; a choice of which your highness will see first.

[Giving a paper.] Ths. reads.] The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung, by an Athenian eunuch to the harp.

'll none of that: that have I told my love, glory of my kinsman Hercules.

he riot of the tipsy Bacchantes, singing the Thracian singer in their rage.

it is an old device; and it was play'd in us I from Thebes came last a conqueror.

we thrice three Muses mourning for the death of learning, late deceas'd in beggary.

it is some satire, keen and critical, sorting with a nuptial ceremony.

tedious brief scene of young Pyramus, and his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth.

ry and tragical? Tedious and brief?

it is, hot ice, and wondrous strange snow. shall we find the concord of this discord?

Philost. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long; which is as brief as I have known a play;

by ten words, my lord, it is too long; which makes it tedious: for in all the play there is not one word apt, one player fitted.

tragical, my noble lord, it is;

For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.

Which when I saw rehears'd, I must confess, Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears The passion of loud laughter never shed.

Ths. What are they, that do play it?

Philost. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here,

Which never labour'd in their minds till now;

And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories

With this same play, against your nuptial.

Ths. And we will hear it.

Philost. No, my noble lord,

It is not for you: I have heard it over,

And it is nothing, nothing in the world;

Unless you can find sport in their intents,

Extremely stretch'd, and cou'd with cruel pain,

To do you service.

Ths. I will hear that play:

For never any thing can be amiss,

When simpleness and duty tender it.

Go, bring them in;—and take your places, ladies.

[Exit Philostrate.]

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharg'd,

And duty in his service perishing.

Ths. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says, they can do nothing in this kind.

Ths. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.

Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake:

And what poor duty cannot do,

Noble respect takes it in might, not merit.

Where I have come, great clerks have purposed

To greet me with premeditated welcomes;

Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,

Make periods in the midst of sentences,

Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,

And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,

Not paying me a welcome: Trust me, sweet,

Out of this silence, yet I pick'd a welcome;

And in the modesty of fearful duty

I read as much, as from the rattling tongue

Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,

In least, speak most, to my capacity.

Enter PHILOSTRATE.

Philost. So please your grace, the prologue is address.

Ths. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.]

Enter Prologue.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good-will.

That you should think, we come not to offend,

But with good-will. To shew our simple skill,

That is the true beginning of our end.

Consider then, we come but in despite.

We do not come as minding to content you,

Our true intent is. All for your delight.

We are not here. That you should here repent you,

The actors are at hand; and, by their shew,

You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Ths. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt;

he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed he hath played on this prologue, like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

Ths. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disorder'd. Who is next?

Enter PYRAMUS and THISBE, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb show.

Pro. "Gentles, perchance, you wonder at this show;

"But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.

"This man is Pyramus, if you would know;

"This beauteous lady Thisbe is, certain.

"This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present

"Wall, that vile wall which did these lovers

sunder:

"And through wall's chink, poor souls, they are content

"To whisper; at the which let no man wonder.
 "This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
 "Presenteth moon-shine: for, if you will know,
 "By moon-shine did these lovers think no scorn
 "To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
 "This grisly beast, which by name lion hight,
 "The trusty Thisby, coming first by night,
 "Did scarce away, or rather did affright."
 "And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall;
 "Which lion vile with bloody mouth did stain:
 "Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth, and tall,
 "And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain:
 "Whereat with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
 "He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;
 "And, Thisby tarrying in mulberry shade,
 "His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
 "Let lion, moon-shine, wall, and lovers twain,
 "At large discourse, while here they do remain."

[Exeunt Prof. Thisbe, Lion, and Moonshine.]

The. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.
Dem. No wonder, my lord: one lion may, when many asses do.

H'all. "In this same interlude, it doth befall,
 "That I, one Snout by name, present a wall:
 "And such a wall, as I would have you think,
 "That had in it a cranny'd hole, or chink,
 "Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
 "Did whisper often very secretly.
 "This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth show
 "That I am that same wall; the truth is so:
 "And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
 "Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper."
The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition, that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. "O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!

"O night, which ever art, when day is not!
 "O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,
 "I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!—
 "And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall,
 "That stand'st betwixt her father's ground and mine;

"Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall,
 "Show me thy chink, to blink through with mine eye."
 [Wall holds up his fingers.]
 "Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this!

"But what see I? No Thisby do I see.
 "O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss;
 "Curs't be thy stones for thus deceiving me!"
The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No, in truth, sir, he should not, Deceiving me, is Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall pat as I told you:—Yonder she comes.

Enter THISBE.

This. "O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans.

"For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
 "My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones;
 "Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee."
Pyr. "I see a voice: now will I to the chink,
 "To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face.
 "Thisby!"

This. "My love! thou art my love. I think."
Pyr. "Think what thou wilt I am thy lover's grace;
 "And like Limander am I trusty still."

This. "And I like Helen, till the fates me kill."
Pyr. "Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true."
This. "As Shafalus to Procrus. I to you."

Pyr. "O, kiss me through the hole of this vile wall."
This. "I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all."
Pyr. "Wilt thou at Ninus' tomb meet me straightway?"

This. "Tide life, tide death, I come without delay."
H'all. "Thus have I, wall, my part discharged so;
 "And, being done, thus wall away doth go."

[Exeunt Wall, Pyramus, and Thisbe.]

The. Now is the mural down between the neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are wilful to hear without warning.

Hip. This is the silliest stuff, that ever I hear

The. The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them

Hip. It must be your imagination then, and theirs.

The. If we imagine no worse of them, than th of themselves, they may pass for excellent me Here come two noble beasts in, a moon and a lion

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. "You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear

"The smallest monstrous mouse, that creeps on floor,

"May now, perchance, both quake and tremble here
 "When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar."

"Then know, that I, one Snug the joiner, am
 "A lion fell, nor else no lion's dam:
 "For if I should as lion come in strife
 "Into this place, 'twere pity on my life."

The. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that I saw.

Lys. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord: for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour; for the goose carries not the fox. It well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen the moon.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present:"

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present:"

"Myself the man i' th' moon do seem to be."

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest the man should be put into the lantern: How is else the man i' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle; for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am awear of this moon: Would it would change!

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion that he is in the wane: but yet, in courtesy, in reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you, that the lantern is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern for they are in the moon. But, silence; here comes Thisbe.

Enter THISBE.

This. "This is old Ninny's tomb: Where is thy love?"

Lion. "O—." [The lion roars—Thisbe runs off]

Dem. Well roared, lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shin with a good grace.

The. Well moused, lion.

[The lion tears Thisbe's mantle, and ex

Dem. And so comes Pyramus.

Lys. And then the moon vanishes.

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. "Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunbeams;

"I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright
 "For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams
 "I trust to taste of truest Thisby's sight."

"But stay;—O spite!
 "But mark;—Poor knight,
 "What dreadful dole is here?"

"Eyes, do you see?
 "How can it be?"

"O dainty duck! O dear!

"Thy mantle good,
 "What, stain'd with blood?
 "Approach, ye furies fell!
 "O fates! I come, come;
 "Cut thread and thrum;
 "Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!"
Ac. This passion, and the death of a dear friend,
 I'd go near to make a man look sad.
Tip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.
yr. "O, wherefore, nature, didst thou lions frame?"

Since lion vile hath here deflour'd my dear:
 Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame,
 That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.

"Come, tears, confound;
 "Out, sword, and wound

"The pap of Pyramus:

"Ay, that left pap,
 "Where heart doth hop:—

"Thus die I, thus, thus, thus,
 "Now am I dead,

"Now am I fled;
 "My soul is in the sky:

"Tongue, lose thy light!
 "Moon, take thy flight!

"Now die, die, die, die, die!"

[Dies.—Exit Moonshine.

em. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.
 ys. Less than an ace, man; for he is dead; he othing.

Ac. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet ver, and prove an ass.

ip. How chance moonshine is gone, before he comes back and finds her lover?

Ac. She will find him by star-light.—Here she es; and her passion ends the play.

Enter THISBE.

ip. Methinks, she should not use a long one, such a Pyramus: I hope, she will be brief.

em. A note will turn the balance, which Pyra-mus, which Thisbe, is the better.

ys. She hath spied him already with those et eyes.

em. And thus she moans, videlicet.—

This. "Asleep, my love?

"What, dead, my dove?

"O Pyramus, arise,

"Speak, speak. Quite dumb!

"Dead, dead! A tomb

"Must cover thy sweet eyes.

"These lily brows,

"This cherry nose,

"These yellow cowslip cheeks,

"Are gone, are gone:

"Lovers, make moan!

"His eyes were green as leeks.

"O sisters three,

"Come, come, to me,

"With hands as pale as milk;

"Lay them in gore,

"Since you have shore

"With shears his thread of silk.

"Tongue, not a word:—

"Come, trusty sword;

"Come, blade, my breast imbrue:

"And farewell, friends:—

"Thus Thisbe ends:

"Adieu, adieu, adieu."

[Dies.

le. Moonshine and lion are left to bury the dead.

m. Ay, and wall too.

Ac. No, I assure you; the wall is down that ed their fathers. Will it please you to see the gue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, between of our company?

Ac. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play s no excuse. Never excuse; for when the ers are all dead, there need none to be blamed.

ry. If he, that writ it, had play'd Pyramus, hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would been a fine tragedy: and so it is, truly; and notably discharged. But come, your Bergosk: let your epilogue alone.

[Here a dance of Clowns.

iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:—

Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time.
 I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
 As much as we this night have overwatch'd.
 This palpable-gross play hath well beguil'd
 The heavy gait of night.—Sweet friends, to bed.—
 A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
 In nightly revels, and new jollity. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Enter PUCK.

Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
 And the wolf howls the moon;
 Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
 All with weary task fordone.
 Now the wasted brands do glow,
 Whilst the scritch-owl, scritch'ing loud,
 Puts the wretch, that lies in voe,
 In remembrance of a shroud.
 Now it is the time of night,
 That the graves, all gaping wide,
 Every one lets forth his sprite,
 In the church-way paths to glide:
 And we fairies that do run
 By the triple Hecat's team,
 From the presence of the sun,
 Following darkness like a dream,
 Now are frolic; not a mouse
 Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
 I am sent, with broom, before,
 To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter OBERON and TITANIA, with their train.

Obe. Through this house give glimmering light,
 By the dead and drowsy fire:
 Every elf, and fairy sprite,
 Hop as light as bird from brier;
 And this ditty, after me,
 Sing, and dance it trippingly.
Tita. First, rehearse this song by rote:
 To each word a warbling note,
 Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
 Will we sing, and bless this place.

SONG, and DANCE.

Obe. Now, until the break of day,
 Through this house each fairy stray.
 To the best bride bed will we,
 Which by us shall blessed be;
 And the issue, there create,
 Ever shall be fortunate.
 So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be:
 And the blots of nature's hand
 Shall not in their issue stand;
 Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
 Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity, Shall upon their children be.—
 With this field-dew consecrate,
 Every fairy take his gait;
 And each several chamber bless,
 Through this palace with sweet peace:
 E'er shall it in safety rest,
 And the owner of it blest.

Trip away;
 Make no stay;
 Meet me all by break of day.

[Exeunt Oberon, Titania, and train.

Puck. If we shadows have offended,
 Think but this, (and all is mended),
 That you have but slumber'd here,
 While these visions did appear.
 And this weak and idle theme,
 No more yielding but a dream,
 Gentles, do not reprehend;
 If you pardon, we will mend.
 And, as I'm an honest Puck,
 If we have unearned luck
 Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
 We will make amends, ere long:
 Else the Puck a liar call.
 So, good night unto you all.
 Give me your hands, if we be friends,
 And Robin shall restore amends. [Exit.

Mrs. ANNE PAGE, her daughter, in love with Fenton.

Mrs. QUICKLY, servant to Dr. Caius.

Servants to Page, Ford, &c.

Scene,—Windsor; and the parts adjacent.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Windsor. Before Page's house.

Enter Justice SHALLOW, SLENDER, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it: if he were twenty sir John Falstaffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and coroner.

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and Cust-alorum.

Slen. Ay, and ratolorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself armigero; in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, armigero.

Shal. Ay, that we do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors, gone before him, have done't; and all his ancestors, that come after him, may: they may give the dozen white laces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Slen. The dozen white lances do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies—love.

Shal. The lute is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slen. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Slen. It is marring, indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Slen. Yes, py'r-lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one: if sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shal. The council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Slen. It is not meet the council hear a riot; there is no fear of God in a riot: the council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of God, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Slen. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my brain, which, peradventure, prings good discretions with it: There is Anne Page, which is daughter to master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Slen. It is that very person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, and silver, is her grandsire, upon his death's bed, (Got deliver to a joyful surrections!) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old: it were a goot motion, if we leave our pribles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between master Abraham, and mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Slen. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has goot gifts.

Slen. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest master Page: Is Falstaff there?

Slen. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar, as I do despise one that is false; or, as I despise one that is not true. The knight, sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door [knocks] for master Page. What, ho! Got pless your house here!

Enter PAGE.

Slen. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and justice Shallow: and here young master Slender; that, peradventures, shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Page. I am glad to see your worships well: I thank you for my venison, master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you; Much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill kill'd:—How doth good mistress Page!—and I love you always with my heart, la; with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

Page. I am glad to see you, good master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say, he was out-run on Cotsale.

Page. It could not be judg'd, sir.

Slen. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not;—'tis your fault, 'tis your fault:—'Tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; Can there be more said? he is good, and fair.—Is sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me, master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.
Shal. If it be confess'd, it is not redress'd; is not that so, master Page? He hath wrong'd me; indeed, he hath;—at a word, he hath;—believe me;—Robert Shallow, Esquire, saith, he is wrong'd.

Page. Here comes sir John.

Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, NYM, and PISTOL.

Fal. Now, master Shallow; you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kiss'd your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it straight;—I have done all this.—That is now answer'd.

Shal. The council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you, if it were known in counsel: you'll be laugh'd at.

Eva. Pauca verba, sir John, good words.

Fal. Good words! good cabbage.—Slender, I broke your head; What matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephostophilus?

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca; slice! that's my humour.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man?—can you tell, cousin?

Eva. Peace; I pray you! Now let us understand: There is three umpires in this matter, as I understand: that is—master Page, fidelicet, master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three, to hear it, and end it between them.

Eva. Fery goot: I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause, with as great discreteness as we can.

Fal. Pistol,—

Pist. He hears with ears.

Eva. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, He hears with ear? Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick master Slender's purse?

Slen. Ay, by these gloves, did he, (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else,) of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yeard Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner!—Sir John and master mine,

I combat challenge of this latten bilbo:

Word of denial in thy labras here;

Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest.

Slen. By these gloves, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be advised, sir, and pass good humours: I will say, marry trap, with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me; that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Eva. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

Bard. And being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd the careires.

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter: I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, fer this trick:

if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Eva. So Got 'udge me, that is a virtuous mind

Fal. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Slen. O heaven! this is mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, mistress Ford?
Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are ve well met: by your leave, good mistress.

[Kissing her]

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome:—Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner: come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down: unkindness.

[Exeunt all but Shal. Slender and Eva]

Slen. I had rather than forty shillings, I had a book of Songs and Sonnets here:—

Enter SIMPLE.

How now, Simple! Where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not The Book Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend to Alice Shortcake upon Allhallowmas last, a fo'night afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you, word with you, coz: marry, this, coz; There as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, made afar by sir Hugh here;—Do you understand me?

Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable; if he be so, I shall do that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I do, sir.

Eva. Give ear to his motions, master Slender will description the matter to you, if you be cap'city of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow say I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace his country, simple though I stand here.

Eva. But that is not the question; the quest is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Eva. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to m'tress Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her, u' any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'oman? Let command to know that of your mouth, or of y' lips; for divers philosophers hold, that the lips parcel of the mouth;—Therefore precisely, can y' carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love he Slen. I hope, sir,—I will do, as it shall be one that would do reason.

Eva. Nay, God's lords and his ladies, you m'speak possitable, if you can carry her your desi towards her.

Shal. That you must: Will you, upon go dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, u' your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet c' what I do, is to pleasure you, coz; Can you l' the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request; I if there be no great love in the beginning, yet he ven may decrease it upon better acquaintan when we are married, and have more occasion know one another: I hope, upon familiarity v' grow more contempt: but if you say, marry her will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and d' solutely.

Eva. It is a fery discretion answer; save, faul' is in the 'ort dissolutely: the 'ort is, accord to our meaning, resolutely;—his meaning is goo Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged,

Re-enter ANNE PAGE.

Shal. Here comes fair mistress Anne:—Would were young, for your sake, mistress Anne!

Ann. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worships' company.

Hal. I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's plessed will! I will not be absence at grace. [Exeunt Shallow and Sir H. Evans.]

Ann. Will't please your worship to come in, sir?
Men. No; I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am y well.

Ann. The dinner attends you, sir.

Men. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth: y, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon y cousin Shallow: [Exit Simple.] A justice of ce sometime may be beholden to his friend for a n:—I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my ther be dead: But what though? yet I live like oor gentleman born.

Ann. I may not go in without your worship: y will not sit, till you come.

Men. I'faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as ch as though I did.

Ann. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Men. I had rather walk here, I thank you: I used my shin the other day with playing at sword y dagger with a master of fence, three veneys for ish of stewed prunes; and, by my troth, I can abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your gs bark so? he there bears y' the town?

Ann. I think there are, sir; I heard them sed of.

Men. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon arrel at it, as any man in England:—You are aid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Ann. Ay, indeed, sir.

Men. That's meat and drink to me now: I have n Sackerson loose, twenty times; and have taken a by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women re so cried and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd:—: women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are y ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter PAGE.

Page. Come, gentle master Slender, come; we y for you.

Men. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose, : come, come.

Men. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Page. Come on, sir.

Men. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Ann. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Men. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la: I will do you that wrong.

Ann. I pray you, sir.

Men. I'll rather be unmannerly, than trouble- ac: you do yourself wrong, indeed, la. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Eva. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' ese, which is the way: and there dwells one stress Quickly, which is in the manner of his ese, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, washer, and his wringer.

Simp. Well, sir.

Eva. Nay, it is better yet:—give her this letter; it is a 'oman, that altogether's acquaintance with stress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and ure her to solicit your master's desires to mis- as Anne Page: I pray you, be gone; I will make end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF, Host, BARDOLPH, NYM, PISTOL, and ROBIN.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter,—

Host. What says my bully-rust? Speak schol- ly, and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some y followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them g; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou 'rt an emperor, Cæsar, Keisar, and Pheezar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow: Let me see thee froth, and lime: I am at a word; follow.

[Exit Host.]

Fal. Bardolph, follow him; a tapster is a good trade: An old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered servingman, a fresh tapster: Go; adieu.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will thrive. [Exit Bard.]

Pist. O base Gongarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink: Is not the humour conceited? His mind is not heroic, and there's the humour of it.

Fal. I am glad, I am so acquit of this tinderbox; his thefts were too open: his filching was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is, to steal at a minute's rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal! foh; a fco for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why then, let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must coney-catch; I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol; Indeed I am in the waist two yards about: but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife; I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English'd rightly, is, I am sir John Falstaff's.

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well; out of honesty into English.

Nym. The anchor is deep: Will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her husband's purse; she hath legions of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain; and, To her, boy, say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife: who even now gave me good eyes too, examin'd my parts with most judicious eyelads: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dung-hill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning glass! Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me; they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford: we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour letter; I will keep the 'haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold, sirrah, [to Rob.] bear you these letters tightly;

Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores.— Rogues, hence, avaunt! vanish like hail-stones, go! Trudge, plod, away, o' the hoof; seek shelter, pack! Falstaff will learn the humour of this age.

French thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirted page. [Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.]

Pist. Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd, and fullam holds,

And high and low beguile the rich and poor:

Tester I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,

Base Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations in my head, which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin, and her star!

Pist. With wit, or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I love

I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold,

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,

And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of men is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Dr. Caius's house.

Enter Mrs. QUICKLY, SIMPLE, and RUGBY.

Quick. What; John Rugby?—I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, if faith, and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience, and the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch. [Exit Rugby.]

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way: but nobody but has his fault;—but let that pass. Peter Simple, you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And master Slender's your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a glover's paring-knife?

Sim. No, forsooth; he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard; a cane-coloured beard.

Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Sim. Ay, forsooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head; he hath fought with a warrener.

Quick. How say you?—O, I should remember him; Does he not hold up his head, as it were? and strut in his gait?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter RUGBY.

Rug. Out, alas! here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be shent: Run in here, good young man; go into this closet. [Shuts Simple in the closet.] He will not stay long.—What, John Rugby! John, what, John, I say!—Go, John, go enquire for my master; I doubt, he be not well, that he comes not home:—and down, down, a-down-a, &c. [Sings.]

Enter Doctor CAIUS.

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys; Pray you, go and vetch me in my closet un boitier verd; a box, a green-a box; Do intend vat I speak a green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth, I'll fetch it you. I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad. [Aside.]

Caius. Fe, fe, fe! na foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais a la Cour,—la grand affaire.

Quick. Is it this, sir?

Caius. Ouy; mette le au mon pocket; Depeche, quickly:—Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Quick. What, John Rugby! John!

Rug. Here, sir.

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long:—Od's me Qu'ay j'oublié? dere is some simples in my closet dat I will not for the world I shall leave behind.

Quick. Ah me! he'll find the young man there and be mad.

Caius. O diable, diable! vat is in my closet?—Villainy! larron! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby my rapier.

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caius. Veforefore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

Caius. Vat shall the honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not so flegmatick; hea the truth of it: He came of an errand to me from parson Hugh.

Caius. Vell.

Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caius. Peace-a your tongue!—Speak-a your tale. Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to mistress Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la; but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, builtez me some paper: Tarry you a little-a while. [Write.]

Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy;—But notwithstanding man, I'll do your master what good I can: and the very yea and the no is, the French Doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself;—

Sim. 'Tis a great charge, to come under our body's hand.

Quick. Are you avis'd o'that? you shall find a great charge: and to be up early and down late,—but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear; would have no words of it;) my master himself in love with mistress Anne Page; but notwithstanding that,—I know Anne's mind,—that's ne'ther here nor there.

Caius. You jack'nape; give-a dis letter to S Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge: I will cut his troin de park; and I will teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make:—you may be gone; it is not good you tarry here:—by gar, I will cut all h'two stones: by gar, he shall not have a stone-trow at his dog. [Exit Simple.]

Quick. Alas, he speaks but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter-a for dat: do not you tell a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself;—I gar, I will kill de Jack Priest; and I have appointe mine host de Jarterre to measure our weapon: by gar, I will myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: we must give folks leave to prate: What the good-fer!

Caius. Rugby, come to the court vit me;—I gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn you head out of my door:—Follow my heels, Rugby. [Exeunt Caius and Rugby.]

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of you own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mir than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, thank heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there, ho?

Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near th'house, I pray you.

Enter FENTON.

Fent. How now, good woman; how dost thou

Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, as honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, thinkest thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

uick. Troth, sir, all is in his hands above: but withstanding, master Fenton, I'll be sworn on ok, she loves you.—Have not your worship a t above your eye?
nt. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?
uick. Well, thereby hangs a tale;—good faith, such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest l as ever broke bread:—We had an hour's of that wart;—I shall never laugh but in that l's company!—But, indeed, she is given too h to allicholly and musing: But for you—ll, go to.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day: Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me—

Quick. Will I? i'faith, that we will: and I will tell your worship more of the wart, the next time we have confidence; and of other wooers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now. [Exit.

Quick. Farewell to your worship.—Truly, an honest fellow; but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does:—Ont upon't! what have I forgot? [Exit.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Before Page's house.

Enter Mistress PAGE, with a letter.

rs. Page. What! have I 'scaped love-letters in holiday time of my beauty, and am I now a ect for them? Let me see: [Rends.
sk me no reason why I love you; for though love reason for his precision, he admits him not for his seller: you ure not young, no more am I; go to there's sympathy: you are merry, so am I; Ha! then there's more sympathy: you love sack, and I; Would you desire better sympathy? Let it ce thee, mistress Page, (at the least, if the love of dier can suffice,) that I love thee. I will not say, me, 'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love
By me,

*Thine own true knight,
 By day or night,
 Or any kind of light,
 With all his might,
 For thee to fight,*

John Falstaff.

at a Herod of Jewry is this?—O wicked, ced, world!—one, that is well nigh worn to as with age, to show himself a young gallant! at an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish kard picked (with the devil's name) out of my ersion, that he dares in this manner assay me? y, he hath not been thrice in my company!— at should I say to him?—I was then frugal of mirth:—heaven forgive me!—Why, I'll exhibit l in the parliament for the putting down of men. r shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Enter Mistress FORD.

rs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going ur house.

rs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. look very ill.

rs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that; I have owe to the contrary.

rs. Page. 'Faith, but you do, in my mind.

rs. Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say, I could r you to the contrary: O, mistress Page, give ome counsel!

rs. Page. What's the matter, woman?

rs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one ng respect, I could come to such honour!

rs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the ur: What is it?—dispense with trifles?— t is it?

rs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal ent, or so, I could be knighted.

rs. Page. What?—thou liest!—Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack; and so thou shouldst alter the article of thy gentry.

rs. Ford. We burn day-light:—here, read, y—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall k the worse of fat men, as long as I have an o make difference of men's liking: And yet he ld not swear; praised women's modesty: and : such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all meliness, that I would have sworn his dison would have gone to the truth of his ls: but they do no more adhere and keep place thr, than the hundredth psalm to the tune of n steeces. What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant, he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, (sure more,) and these are of the second edition: He will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two. I had rather be a giantess, and lie under mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; and the very hand, the very words: What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: It makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one, that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding, call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I; if he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine-batted delay, till he hath parn'd his horses to mine Host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villany against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight: Come hither. [They retire.

Enter FORD, PISTOL, PAGE, and NYM.

Ford. Well, I hope, it be not so.

Pistol. Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs:

Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pistol. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor,

Both young and old, one with another, Ford; He loves thy gally-mawfry; Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife?

Pistol. With liver burning hot: Prevent, or go thou, Like sir Actæon he, with Ringwood at thy heels:—O, odious is the name!

Ford. What name, sir?

Pistol. The horn, I say: Farewell.

Take heed; have open eye; for thieves do foot by night:

Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds do sing.—

Away, sir corporal Nym.—

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit Pistol.

Ford. I will be patient; I will find out this.

Nym. And this is true; [to Page.] I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours : I should have borne the humour'd letter to her ; but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife ; there's the short and the long. My name is corporal Nym ; I speak, and I avouch. 'Tis true :—my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife.—Adieu ! I love not the humour of bread and cheese ; and there's the humour of it. Adieu. [Exit Nym.]

Page. The humour of it, quoth 'a ! here's a fellow frights humour out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

Page. I never heard such a drawling, affecting rogue.

Ford. If I do find it, well.

Page. I will not believe such a Cataian, though the priest o' the town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow : Well.

Page. How now, Meg ?

Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George ?—Hark you.

Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank ? why art thou melancholy ?

Ford. I melancholy ! I am not melancholy.—Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. 'Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now.—Will you go, mistress Page ?

Mrs. Page. Have with you.—You'll come to dinner, George ?—Look, who comes yonder : she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

[Aside to Mrs. Ford.]

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Mrs. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her : she'll fit it.

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne ?

Quick. Ay, forsooth ; And, I pray, how does good mistress Anne ?

Mrs. Page. Go in with us, and see ; we have an hour's talk with you.

[Exit Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.]

Ford. You heard what this knave told me ; did you not ?

Page. Yes ; And you heard what the other told me ?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them ?

Page. Hang 'em, slaves ; I do not think the knight would offer it : but these, that accuse him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men ; very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men ?

Page. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that.—Does he lie at the Garter ?

Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him ; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife ; but I would be loath to turn them together : A man may be too confident : I would have nothing lie on my head : I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look, where my ranting host of the Garter comes : there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily.—How now, mine host ?

Enter Host, and SHALLOW.

Host. How now, bully-rogue ? thou'rt a gentleman : cavalero-justice, I say.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good master Page ! Master Page, will you go with us ? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavalero-justice ; tell him, bully-rogue.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between sir Hugh the Welch priest, and Caius the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host o' the Garter, a word with you.

Host. What say'st thou, bully-rogue ?

[They go aside.]

Shal. Will you [to Page] go with us to behold it ? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons ; and, I think, he hath appointed them contrary places : for, believe me, I hear, the parson is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, a guest-cavalier ?

Ford. None, I protest : but I'll give you a pot of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and I him my name is Brook ; only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully : thou shalt have egg and regress ; said I well ? and thy name shall Brook : It is a merry knight.—Will you go to hearts ?

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard, the Frenchman hath got skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more : these times you stand on distance, your pass stoccadoes, and I know not what : 'tis the best master Page ; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen time, with my long sword, I would have run you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here ! shall we wag ?

Page. Have with you :—I had rather hear the scold than fight. [Exit Host, Shallow, and Pistol.]

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stand so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put my opinion so easily : She was in his company, Page's house ; and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into't : and I'll a disguise to sound Falstaff : If I find her hen I lose not my labour ; if she be otherwise, 'tis her hour well bestowed. [E]

SCENE II.

A room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and PISTOL.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open.—

I will retort the sum in equipage.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, should lay my countenance to pawn : I have got upon my good friends for three reprieves for and your coach-fellow, Nym ; or else you looked through the grate, like a geminy of babo I am damned in hell, for swearing to gentle my friends, you were good soldiers, and tall lous : and when mistress Bridget lost the hair of her fan, I took't upon mine honour, thou hit not.

Pist. Didst thou not share ? hadst thou not teen pence ?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason : Think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis ? At a word, hang more about me, I am no gibbet for you :—go—short knife and a thong ;—to your manor of Pishatch, go.—You'll not bear a letter for me, a rogue ?—you stand upon your honour !—Why, unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my cessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lunge and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of honour ! You will not do it, you ?

Pist. I do relent ; What would'st thou more of me ?

Enter ROBIN.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with Fal. Let her approach.

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Quick. Give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, an't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn ; as my mother was, first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer : What with r

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a wot two ?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman : and I'll vouch safe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir ;—I come a little nearer this ways :—I myself o with master doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears;—mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and keep them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford;—what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, did your worship's a wanton: Well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford;—come, mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of you: have brought her into such a canaries, as a wonderful. The best courtier of them all, when court lay at Windsor, could never have brought to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, after gift; smelling so sweetly, (all musk,) and rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar the best, and the fairest, that would have won woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her.—I had myself twenty gels given me this morning: but I defy all anis, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way honesty;—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest them all: and yet there has been earls, nay, such is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for which she thanks you a thousand times: and gives you to notify, that her husband will be sence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come to see the picture, she says, that you wot of;—Mistress Ford, her husband, will be from home, as! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; 's a very jealous man; she leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven: Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well: But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath hearty commendations to you too;—and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil oddest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss in morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who'er be the other: and she bade me let your worship, that her husband is seldom from me; but, she hopes, there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man; surely, think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they have not little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed! at mistress Page would desire you to send her your letter page, of all loves; her husband has a marlous infection to the little page: and, truly, Mistraster Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does; do that she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is she will; and, truly, she deserves it: for if there is a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so then: and, look you, he say come and go between you both; and, in any use, have a nay-word, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well: commend me to them both: here's my purse; I am yet thy debtor.—Boy, go along with this woman.—This news distracts me!

[Exeunt Quickly and Robin.]

Pist. This punk is one of Cupid's carriers:—Clap on more sails; pursue, up with your fights; Give fire; she is my prize, or ocean whelm them all!

[Exit Pistol.]

Fal. Say'st thou so, old Jack! go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee: Let them say, 'tis grossly done; so it be fairly done, no matter.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir John, there's one master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook, is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.

Fal. Call him in; [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah! ha! mistress Ford and mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to; via!

Re-enter BARDOLPH, with FORD disguised.

Ford. Bless you, sir.

Fal. And you, sir: Would you speak with me?

Ford. I make hold, to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome; What's your will? Give us leave, drawer. [Exit Bardolph.]

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much; my name is Brook.

Fal. Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand, I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something embolden'd me to this unseasoned intrusion; for they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me: if you will help me to bear it, sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you;—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection: but, good sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own; that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know, how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir: proceed.

Ford. There is a gentleman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion, that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given: briefly, I have pursued her, as love hath pursued me; which hath been, on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, need, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel: that I have purchased at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this:

*Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.*

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her bands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that, though she appear honest to me, yet, in other places, she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: You are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentick in your way-like and person, generally allowed for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it:—There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks, you prescribe to yourself very posterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift! she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself; she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me: What say you to't, sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. Master Brook, I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, sir John, you shall want none.

Fal. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook, you shall want none. I shall be with her, (I may tell you,) by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not:—yet I wrong him, to call him poor; they say, the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir; that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns: master Brook, thou shalt know, I will predominate o'er the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night:—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his stile; thou, master Brook, shalt know him for knave and cuckold:—come to me soon at night. [Exit.]

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!—My heart is ready to crack with impatience.—Who says, this is improvident jealousy? My wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this!—See the hell of having a false woman! my bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names!—Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but cuckold! wit cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass; he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Flew with my butter, parson Hugh the Welchman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises: and what they think their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised, my jealousy!—Eleven o'clock the hour:—I prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on my staff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; be three hours too soon, than a minute too late. fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold! [E]

SCENE III.

Windsor Park.

Enter CAIUS and RUGBY.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, sir, that sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he no come; he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is come: by gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew, your word would kill him, if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead, so; vill kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I vill you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence.

Caius. Villany, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here's company.

Enter Host, SHALLOW, SLENDER, and PAGE.

Host. 'Bless thee, Bully doctor.

Shal. 'Save you, master doctor Caius.

Page. Now, good master doctor.

Shal. Give you good-morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come!

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foine, to thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there, to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopi is he dead, my Francisco? ha, bully! What is my Æsculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder ha! is he dead, bully Stale? is he dead?

Caius. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of world; he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castilian king, Urinal! He of Greece, my boy!

Caius. I pray you, bear witness, that me I stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and is no come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, master doctor: he a curer of souls, and a curer of bodies; if should fight, you go against the hair of your fussions; is it not true, master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself be great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, master Page, though I nov old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out, finger itches to make one: though we are just and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we be some salt of our youth in us; we are the son women, master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, master Shallow.
Shal. It will be found so, master Page. Ma doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I sworn of the peace; you have showed yourself wise physician, and sir Hugh hath shown him a wise and patient churchman: you must go v me, master doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest justice:—A word, mons Muck-water.

Caius. Muck-water! vat is dat?

Host. Muck-water, in our English tongue, is lour, bully.

Caius. By gar, then I have as much muck-water as de Englishman:—Scurvey jack-dog priest! gar, me vill cut his ears.

ost. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.
caius. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?
ost. That is, he will make thee amends.
caius. By gar, we do look, he shall clapper-de-me; for, by gar, we will have it.
ost. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.
caius. Me tank you for dat.
ost. And moreover, bully.—But first, master st, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slender, ou through the town to Frogmore.
 [Aside to then.
age. Sir Hugh is there, is he?
ost. He is there: see what humour he is in,
 I will bring the doctor about by the fields:
 it do well!
al. We will do it.
age. Shal. and Sten. Adieu, good master doctor.
 [Exit Page, Shallow and Slender.

caius. By gar, we will kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die; but, first, sheath thy impatience; throw cold water on thy choler: go about the fields with me through Frogmore; I will bring thee where mistress Anne Page is, at a farm-house a feasting; and thou shall woo her: Cry'd game, said I well?

caius. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure-a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which, I will be thy adversary towards Anne Page; said I well?

caius. By gar, 'tis good; well said.

Host. Let us wag then.

caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

[Exit.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A field near Frogmore.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

eva. I pray you now, good master Slender's ing-man, and friend Simple by your name, ch way have you looked for master Caius,— calls himself Doctor of Physic?
im. Marry, sir, the city-ward, the park-ward, y way; old Windsor way, and every way but town way.
eva. I most fehemently desire you, you will also : that way.
im. I will, sir.
eva. 'Pless my soul! how full of cholers I am, trempling of mind!—I shall be glad, if he deceived me!—how melancholies I am!—I knog his urinals about his knave's costard, an I have good opportunities for the 'ork:—'pless soul!
 [Sings.

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
 Melodious birds sing madrigals;
 There will we make our peds of roses,
 And a thousand fragrant posies.

To shallow—

ry on me! I have a great dispositions to cry.

Melodious birds sing madrigals;—
 When as I sat in Pabylon,—
 And a thousand vagram posies.

To shallow—

im. Yonder he is coming, this way, sir Hugh.

eva. He's welcome:—

To shallow rivers, to whose falls—

even prosper the right!—What weapons is he?

im. No weapons, sir: There comes my master, ter Shallow, and another gentleman from Frog-e, over the stile, this way.

eva. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep your arms.

ater PAGE, SHALLOW, and SLENDER.

al. How now, master parson? good morrow,
 I sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, a good student from his book, and it is won-ul.

len. Ah, sweet Anne Page!

age. Save you, good sir Hugh!

eva. 'Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you!

al. What! the sword and the word! do you ly them both, master parson?

age. And youthful still, in your doublet and e, this raw rheumatick day?

eva. There is reasons and causes for it.

age. We are come to you, to do a good office, ster parson.

eva. Very well: What is it?

age. Yonder is a most revered gentleman, who ke, having received wrong by some person, is at it odds with his own gravity and patience, that r you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years, and upward;
 I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Eva. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; master doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Eva. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why?

Eva. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen,—and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave, as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Sten. O, sweet Anne Page!

Shal. It appears so, by his weapons:—Keep them asunder;—here comes doctor Caius.

Enter Host, CAIUS, and RUGBY.

Page. Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good master doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question; let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Caius. I pray you, let-a me speak a word vit your ear: Verefore vill you not meet-a me?

Eva. Pray you, use your patience: In good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.

Eva. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends:—I will knog your urinals about your knave's eggscomb, for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius. Diablo!—Jack Rugby,—mine Host de Jar- terre, have I not stay for him, to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Eva. As I am a christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed; I'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Guallia and Gaul, French and Welch; soul-curer and body-curer.

Caius. Ay, dat is very good! excellent!

Host. Peace, I say; hear mine host of the Garter.
 Am I politick? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel?
 Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions, and the motions. Shall I lose my parson?
 my priest? my sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs.—Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so:—Give me thy hand, celestial; so:
 —Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue.—Come, lay their swords to pawn:—
 Follow me, lad de peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad host:—Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Sten. O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exit Shal. Sten. Page, and Host.

Caius. Ha! do I perceive dat? have you make-a de sot of us? ha, ha!

Eva. This is well; he has made us his voutingstog.—I desire you, that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together, to be revenge on this same scall, scurvey, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart; he promise to bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Eva. Well, I will smite his noddles:—Pray you, follow. [Exit.

SCENE II.

The street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress PAGE and ROBIN.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader: Whether had you rather, lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O you are a flattering boy; now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Well met, mistress Page: Whither do you go? Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife: Is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company: I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of: What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on's name.—There is such a league between my good man and he!—Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir;—I am sick, till I see her. [Exit Mrs. Page and Robin.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot point blank twelve score. He pieces-out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion, and advantage; and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind!—and Falstaff's boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Actæon; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim. [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search; there I shall find Falstaff: I shall be rather praised for this, than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, SLENDER, Host, Sir HUGH EVANS, CAIUS, and RUGBY.

Shal. Page, &c. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home; and, I pray you, all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slen. And so must I, sir; we have appointed to dine with mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slen. I hope, I have your good will, father Page.

Page. You have, master Slender; I stand wholly for you:—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love-a-me; my nursh-a Quickly tell me so much.

Host. What say you to young master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May; he will carry't, he will carry't; 'tis i buttons; he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. gentleman is of no having: he kept company the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high gion, he knows too much. No, he shall not I knot in his fortunes with the finger of my subst if he take her, let him take her simply; the w I have waits on my consent, and my consent not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you home with me to dinner: besides your cheer shall have sport; I will show you a monster Master doctor, you shall go;—so shall you, n Page;—and you, sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:—we shall have freer wooing at master Page's.

[Exit Shallow and Slender.]

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

[Exit Rugby.]

Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

[Exit Host.]

Ford. [Aside.] I think, I shall drink in pipe-first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you gentles?

All. Have with you, to see this monster. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in Ford's house.

Enter Mrs. FORD and Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the buck-ba-

Enter Servants with a basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; we are brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the house; and when I suddenly call you, come and, (without any pause, or staggering,) take basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge it in all haste, and carry it among the whist in Datchet mead, and there empty it in the ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Ford. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over lack no direction: Be gone, and come when you are called. [Exit Servants.]

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

Enter ROBIN.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyes-musket? at news with you?

Rob. My master, sir John, is come in at your door, mistress Ford; and requests your comp

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, have you true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn: My master knows of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; if he swears, he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy; this secret shall be a tailor to thee, and shall make me a new doublet and hose.—I'll go hide me.

Mrs. Ford. Do so:—Go tell thy master, alone. Mistress Page, remember your own

Mrs. Ford. Go to then; we'll use this unwise humidity, this gross watry pumpon;—teach him to know turtles from jays.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly jewel? now let me die, for I have lived long enough is the period of my ambition: O this blessed

Mrs. Ford. O sweet sir John!

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot, mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wi old thy husband were dead; I'll speak it before best lord, I would make thee my lady.

frs. Ford. I your lady, sir John! alas, I should a pitiful lady.

al. Let the court of France show me such another; I see how thine eye would emulate the diadem: Thou hast the right arched bent of the brow, it becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any of Venetian admittance.

frs. Ford. A plain kerchief, sir John: my brows are nothing else; nor that well neither.

al. Thou art a traitor to say so: thou would'st see an absolute courtier; and the firm fixture of foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, fortune thy foe were not; nature is thy friend: be, thou canst not hide it.

frs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing no.

al. What made me love thee? let that persuade, there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, unnot cog, and say, thou art this and that, like any of these lispng hawthorn buds, that come women in men's apparel, and smell like Buck's-bury in simple-time; I cannot: but I love; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

frs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir; I fear, you Mrs. Page.

al. Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk the Counter-gate; which is as hateful to me as reek of a lime-kiln.

frs. Ford. Well, heaven knows, how I love you; you shall one day find it.

al. Keep in that mid; I'll deserve it.

frs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or I could not be in that mid.

ob. [Within.] Mistress Ford, mistress Ford! 's mistress Page at the door, sweating, and ring, and looking wildly, and would needs k with you presently.

al. She shall not see me; I will ensconce me in the arras.

frs. Ford. Pray you, do so; she's a very tattling nan.— [Falstaff hides himself.]

Enter Mistress PAGE and ROBIN.

What's the matter? how now?

frs. Page. O mistress Ford, what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrown, you are undone for ever.

frs. Ford. What's the matter, good mistress?

frs. Page. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having the honest man to your husband, to give him such a cause of suspicion!

frs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

frs. Page. What cause of suspicion?—Out upon you! how am I mistook in you?

frs. Ford. Why alas! what's the matter?

frs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, with all the officers in Windsor, to search a gentleman, that he says, is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of your absence: You are undone.

frs. Ford. Speak louder.—[Aside.].—'Tis not so, no.

frs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you should see such a man here; but 'tis most certain, your husband's coming with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you: you know yourself clear, why I am glad of it: if you have a friend here, convey, convey him! Be not amazed; call all your senses to you; and your reputation, or bid farewell to your life for ever.

frs. Ford. What shall I do?—There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own name, so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound, he were out of the house.

frs. Page. For shame, never stand you had rather, and you had rather; your husband's here at hand, to bethink you of some conveyance: in the house cannot hide him.—O, how have you deceived!—Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw the linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking:

Or, it is whitening-time, send him by your two men to Datchet mead.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there: what shall I do?

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't! O let me see't! I'll in, I'll in;—follow your friend's counsel;—I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What! sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here; I'll never—

[He goes into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.]

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy: Call your men, mistress Ford!—You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John, Robert, John!

[Exit Robin.]

Re-enter Servants.

Go take up these clothes here, quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble: carry them to the laundress in Datch mead; quickly, come.

Enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it.—How now? whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck? Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season too; it shall appear.—[Exeunt Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkenneled the fox:—Let me stop this way first:—So, now uncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, master Page.—Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.]

Eva. This is fery fantastical humours, and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exeunt Evans, Page, and Caius.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this? Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think, my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that: and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We'll do it; let him be sent for to-morrow eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. Ay, ay, peace:—You use me well, master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen.

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the cofers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too; dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your distemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, master Page: I suffer for it.

Eva. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'omaus, as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred ton.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well;—I promised you a dinner:—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you, why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come, mistress Page; I pray you pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush: Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If there be one or two, I shall make-a de turd.

Eva. In your teeth: for shame.

Ford. Pray you go, master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave; to have his gibes, and his mockeries. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Page's house.

Enter FENTON and Mistress ANNE PAGE.

Fent. I see, I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore, no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself. He doth object, I am too great of hirth; And that, my state being gall'd with my expense, I seek to heal it only by his wealth:

Besides these, other bars he lays before me,—My riots past, my wild societies; And tells me, 'tis a thing impossible I should love thee but as a property.

Anne. May be, he tells you true.

Fent. No, heav'n so speed me in my time to come! Albeit, I will confess, thy father's wealth Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne: Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags; And 'tis the very riches of thyself, That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle master Fenton, Yet seek my father's love: still seek it, sir: If opportunity and humblest suit Cannot attain it, why then,—Hark you hither. [They converse apart.]

Enter SHALLOW, SLENDER, and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Shal. Break their talk, mistress Quickly; my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Sten. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't: slid, 'tis but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismay'd.

Sten. No, she shall not dismay me; I care not for that,—but that I am afraid.

Quick. Hark ye; master Slender would speak a word with you.

Anne. I come to him.—This is my father's choice. O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year! [Aside.]

Quick. And how does good master Fenton? you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, hadst a father!

Sten. I had a father, mistress Anne;—my can tell you good jests of him:—Pray you, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you. Sten. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any man in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman. Sten. Ay, that I will, come cut and long under the degree of a 'squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and y pounds jointure.

Anne. Good master Shallow, let him wear himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I'll leave.

Anne. Now, master Slender.

Sten. Now, good mistress Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Sten. My will? od's heartlings, that's a jest, indeed? I ne'er made my will yet, I heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, master Slender, what would with me?

Sten. Truly, for mine own part, I would lit nothing with you: Your father, and my uncle, made motions: if it be my luck, so: if not, I man be his dole! They can tell you how thin better than I can: You may ask your father; he comes.

Enter PAGE, and Mistress PAGE.

Page. Now, master Slender:—Love him, daughter Anne.—

Why, how now! what does master Fenton you wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my heart? I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fent. Nay, master Page, be not impatient.

Mrs. Page. Good master Fenton, come not to child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton, Come, master Shallow; come, son Slender:—

Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton. [Exeunt Page, Shal. and Anne.]

Quick. Speak to mistress Page. Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love daughter

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,— Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast

Re-enter BARDOLPH, with the wine.

Bard. Here's mistress Quickly, sir, to speak
h you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the ames water; for my belly's as cold, as if I had llowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy: Give

Fal. Take away these chalices: Go brew me a le of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir?

Fal. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish wo-

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it ld yearn your heart to see it. Her husband this morning a birding; she desires you once

t carry her word quickly: she'll make you nds, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her: Tell her so; and bid think, what a man is: let her consider his ty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, say'st thou?

Quick. Eight and nine, sir.

Fal. Well, be gone: I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, sir! [Exit.]

Fal. I marvel, I hear not of master Brook; he

O, here he comes.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. Now, master Brook? you come to know a hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you; I was er house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And how sped you, sir?

Fal. Very ill-favour'dly, master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her des-termination?

Fal. No, master Brook, but the peaking cornuto her husband, master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy;
and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What, while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, by her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket: ramm'd me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, and greasy napkins; thar, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smells, that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door; who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket: I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand.

Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook:
I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first,
an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether: next, to be compass'd, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head: and then, to be stopp'd in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that,—a man of my kidney,—think of that: that am as subject to heat, as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle, to 'scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse shoe: think of that,—hissing hot,—think of that, master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate; you'll undertake her no more.

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Aetna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a birding:
I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed; and the conclusion shall be crown'd with your enjoying her: Adieu.
You shall have her, master Brook; master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford. [Exit.]

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? is this a dream?
do I sleep? Master Ford, awake; awake, master Ford; there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. This 'tis to be married! this 'tis to have linen, and buck-baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house: he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box: but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places.
Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad. [Exit.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The Street.

Enter Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. QUICKLY, and WILLIAM.

Mrs. Page. Is he at master Ford's already, think'st thou?

Quick. Sure, he is by this; or will be presently; but truly, he is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by; I'll but bring my young man here to school: Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing-day, I see.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS.

How now, sir Hugh? no school to day?

Eva. No; master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says, my son profits nothing in the world at his book; I pray you, ask him some questions in his accidence.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Eva. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more; because they say, od's nouns.

Eva. Peace your tattlings. What is fair, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Pouleats! there are fairer things than pouleats, sure.

Eva. You are a very simplicity 'oman; I pray you, peace. What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.

Eva. And what is a stone, William?

Will. A pebble.

Eva. No, it is lapis; I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Eva. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog;—pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus: Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, child; Accusativo, hing, hang, hog.

Quick. Hang hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles, 'oman. What is the focative case, William?

Will. O—vocativo, O.

Eva. Remember, William; focative is, caret.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Eva. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace.

Eva. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitive case?

Eva. Ay.

Will. Genitive,—horum, harum, horum.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her!—never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Eva. For shame, 'oman.

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words: he teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves; and to call horum:—fie upon you!

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Pr'ythee hold thy peace.

Eva. Shew me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is hi, hæ, cod; if you forget your h your kæs, and your cods, you must be preach Go your ways, and play, go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar, than I thou; he was.

Eva. He is a good sprag memory. Farewe! mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good sir Hugh. [Exit Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we stay long. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.

A room in Ford's house.

Enter FALSTAFF and Mrs. FORD.

Fal. Mrs. Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up a sufferance: I see, you are obsequious in your loss and I profess requital to a hair's breadth: 't is only, mistress Ford, in the simple office of love but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a birding, sweet sir John.

Mrs. Page. [Within.] What ho, gossip For what ho!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, sir John.

[Exit Falstaff]

Enter Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart? who's home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed?

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly;—Speak louder. [Aside] Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is his old lunes again: he so takes on yonder w my husband; so rails against all married mankind so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion; and so buffets himself on the forehead; crying, Peer-out, peer-out! that any madness, ever yet beheld, seemed but tameness, civility, a patience, to this distemper he is in now: I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears, was carried out the last time he searched for him in a basket: protests to my husband, he is not here; and hath drawn him and the rest of the company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion: but I am glad the knight not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end; he will here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone!—the knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why, then you are utterly sham'd and he's but a dead man. What a woman; you?—Away with him, away with him; bet shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? he should I bestow him? Shall I put him into t basket again?

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket: M I not go out, ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas, three of master Ford's broth watch the door with pistols, that none shall iss out; otherwise you might slip away ere he can. But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do?—I'll creep up into t chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces: Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault but he hath an abstract for the remembrance such places, and goes to them by his note: That is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I'll go out then.
 Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, sir John. Unless you go out disguised,— Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him?
 Mrs. Page. Alas the day, I know not. There no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a rchief, and so escape.
 Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity, rather than a mischief.
 Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.
 Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; e's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too: Run up, sir John.
 Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet sir John: mistress age and I will look some linen for your head.
 Mrs. Page. Quick, quick; we'll come dress you aight: put on the gown the while.

[Exit Falstaff.]
 Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meet a in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman Brentford; he swears she's a witch; forbade: my house, and hath threatened to beat her.
 Mrs. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husband's igel; and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?
 Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, is he; and ks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had illigence.

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my n to carry the basket again, to meet him at the or with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: 's go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men, what they ll do with the basket. Go up, I'll bring linen him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we not misuse him enough.
 We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too:
 We do not act, that often jest and laugh;
 'Tis old but true, Still swine eat all the draff. [Exit.]

Re-enter Mrs. FORD, with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on r shoulders; your master is hard at door; if bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, detch. [Exit.]

Serv. Come, come, take it up.
 Serv. Pray heaven, it be not full of the knight again.

Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

ter FORD, PAGE, SHALLOW, CAIUS, and Sir HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, master Page, have any way then to unfool me again?—Set down basket, villain:—Somebody call my wife:—O, youth in a basket, come out here!—O, you idly rascals! there's a knot, a ging, a pack, a spiracy against me: Now shall the devil be med. What! wife, I say! come, come forth; old what honest clothes you send forth to aching.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are t to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.
 Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a d dog!

Shal. Indeed, master Ford, this is not well; indeed.

Enter Mrs. FORD.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—Come hither, mistress rd; mistress Ford, the honest woman, the most wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jeas fool for her husband!—I suspect without cause, stress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if I suspect me in any dishonesty.
 Ford. Well said, brazen-face; hold it out.—me forth, sirrah.

[Pulls the clothes out of the basket.]
 Page. This passes!

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed! let the clothes be me.

Ford. I shall find you anon.
 Eva. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say.
 Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why,—
 Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket. Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable: Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.
 Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, master Ford; this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.
 Page. No, nor nowhere else, but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity, let me for ever be your table-sport; let them say of me, As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's leman. Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What ho, mistress Page! come you, and the old woman, down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that?
 Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing.—Come down, you witch, you hag you; come down, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband;—good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter FALSTAFF in women's clothes, led by Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Page. Come, mother Prat, come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll prat her:—Out of my door, you witch! [beats him] you rag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you. [Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think, you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it:—'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!
 Eva. By yea and no, I think, the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard: I spy a great peard under her muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow; see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

[Exeunt Page, Ford, Shallow, and Evans.]
 Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.
 Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed, and hung o'er the altar; it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him; if the devil have him not in fee simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts, the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant, they'll have him publicly shamed: and, methinks, there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then, shape it: I would not have things cool. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be, comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court: Let me speak with the gentlemen: they speak English?

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay, I'll sauce them: they have had my horses a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them: Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Ford's house.

Enter PAGE, FORD, Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. FORD, and Sir HUGH EVANS.

Eva. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife: Henceforth do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold, Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour stand

In him, that was of late an heretick, As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more. Be not as extreme in submission, As in offence;

But let our plot go forward: let our wives

Yet once again, to make us public sport, Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,

Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How! to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight! fie, fie; he'll never come.

Eva. You say, he has been thrown in the rivers; and has been grievously peaten, as an old 'oman: methinks, there should be terrors in him, that he should not come; methinks, his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him, when he comes,

And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,

Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,

Doth all the winter time, at still midnight,

Walk round about an oak, with great ragg'd horns;

And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle;

And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain

In a most hideous and dreadful manner:

You have heard of such a spirit; and well you know,

The superstitious idle-headed eld

Received, and did deliver to our age,

This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many, that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak:

But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;

That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,

Disguised like Herne, with huge horns on his head.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,

And in this shape: When you have brought him

thither,

What shall be done with him? what is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon,

and thus:

Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,

And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress

Like urchins, ouphes, and fairies, green and whi
With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden,
As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once
With some diffused song; upon their sight,
We two in great amazement will fly:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight;
And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread,
In shape profane.

Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound,
And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being know
We'll all present ourselves; dis-horn the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children mu
Be practised well to this, or they'll ne'er do't.

Eva. I will teach the children their behaviour and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn t knight with my taper.

Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy the vizards.

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all t fairies,

Finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk will I go buy;—and in that tin Shall master Slender steal my Nan away, [Exit]
And marry her at Eton.—Go, send to Falst straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Broo.
He'll tell me all his purpose: Sure, he'll come.

Mrs. Page. Fear not you that: Go, get us pr perties,
And tricking for our fairies.

Eva. Let us about it: It is admirable pleasur and fery honest knaveries.

[Exeunt Page, Ford, and Eva.]

Mrs. Page. Go, mistress Ford,
Send Quickly to sir John, to know his mind.

[Exit Mrs. Ford.]

I'll to the doctor; he hath my good will,

And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.

That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;

And he my husband best of all affects;

The doctor is well money'd, and his friends

Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her

Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her [Exit]

SCENE V.

A room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and SIMPLE.

Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? wha thick-skin? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, sho quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with sir Jo Falstaff from master Slender.

Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castl his standing-bed, and truckle-bed; 'tis painte about with the story of the prodigal, fresh ar new: Go, knock and call; he'll speak like an A thropophagina unto thee: Knock, I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gor up into his chamber; I'll be so bold as stay, si till she come down: I come to speak with he indeed.

Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may b robbed: I'll call.—Bully knight! Bully sir Joh speak from thy lungs military: Art thou there?
is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

Fal. [above.] How now, mine host?

Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar carries t coming down of thy fat woman: Let her descen bully, let her descend; my chambers are honou able: Fie! privacy? fie!

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woma even now with me; but she's gone.

Sim. Pray you, sir, was't not the wise woman o Brentford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell; Wh would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, my master Slender, sent her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says, that the very same man, at beguiled master Slender of his chain, cozened in of it.

Sim. I would, I could have spoken with the woman herself; I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.

Fal. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about mistress Anne Page; to know, if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her,—or no: Go; say, the woman did me so.

Sim. May I be so bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, sir Tike; who more bold!

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my sister glad with these tidings. [Exit Simple.]

Host. Thou art clerky, thou art clerky, sir: Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one, that taught me more wit than ever I learned before my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but is paid for my learning.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage! mere cozenage! Host. Where be my horses! speak well of them, diletto.

Bard. Run away with the cozeners: for so soon I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from hind one of them, in a slough, of mire; and set us, and away, like three German devils, three vector Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain: do not say, they be fled; Germans are honest n.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS.

Evo. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Evo. Have a care of your entertainments: there a friend of mine come to town, tells me, there is a cozain german, that has cozened all the hosts Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses' l money: I tell you for good-will, look you: it are wise, and full of gibes and vlotting-stogs; I 'tis not convenient you should be cozened: re you well. [Exeunt.]

Enter Doctor CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mine Host de Jarterre?

Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity, and a btful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat: But it is tell-a, dat you make grand preparation for a duke de many: by my trot, dere is no duke, dat de rt is know to come: I tell you for good vill: er. [Exit.]

Host. Hue and cry, villain, go:—assist me, ght; I am undone:—Ay, run, hue and cry, vil- ai! I am undone! [Exeunt Host and Bardolph.]

Sl. I would all the world might be cozened: I have been cozened, and beaten too. If it uld come to the ear of the court, how I have n transformed, and how my transformation hath n washed and cudgled, they would melt me of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's ts with me; I warrant, they would whip me h their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as ried pear. I never prospered since I forswore self at primero. Well, if my mind were but g enough to say my prayers, I would repent.—

Enter Mrs. QUICKLY.

whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.

Sl. The devil take one party, and his dam the other, and so they shall be both bestowed! I have suffered more for their sakes, more, than the villainous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them: mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell'st thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford; but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, deliver'd me, the knave constable had set me i' the stocks, i' the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber: you shall hear how things go; and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Another room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FENTON and Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me; my mind is heavy, I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak: Assist me in my purpose,

And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee A hundred pound in gold, more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel.

Fent. From time to time I have acquainted you With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page; Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection (So far forth as herself might be her chooser,) Even to my wish: I have a letter from her Of such contents as you will wonder at; The mirth whereof so larded with my matter, That neither, singly, can be manifested, Without the show of both;—wherein fat Falstaff Hath a great scene: the image of the jest

[Showing the letter.]

I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host: To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one, Must my sweet Nan present the fairy queen; The purpose why, is here; in which disguise, While other jests are something rank on foot, Her father hath commanded her to slip Away with Slender, and with him at Eton

Immediately to marry: she hath consented:

Now, sir, Her mother, even strong against that match, And firm for doctor Caius, hath appointed That he shall likewise shuffle her away, While other sports are tasking of their minds, And at the deanery, where a priest attends, Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath Made promise to the doctor;—Now, thus it rests: Her father means she shall be all in white; And in that habit, when Slender sees his time To take her by the hand, and bid her go, She shall go with him:—her mother hath intended, The better to denote her to the doctor, (For they must all be mask'd and vizarded,) That, quaint in green, she shall be loose enrob'd, With ribbands pendant, flaring 'bout her head; And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe, To pinch her by the hand, and, on that token, The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive? father or mother?

Fent. Both, my good host, to go along with me: And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar To stay for me at church, 'twixt twelve and one, And, in the lawful name of marrying, To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device: I'll to the vicar: Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Fent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee; Besides, I'll make a present recompense. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

A room in the Garter Inn.Enter FALSTAFF and Mrs. QUICKLY.

Fal. Pr'ythee, no more prattling;—go.—I'll hold: This is the third time; I hope, good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go; they say, there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain; and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say: time wears: hold up your head, and mince. [Exit Mrs. Quickly.]

Enter FORD.

How now, master Brook? Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave, Ford her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you.—He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of man, master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam; because I know also, life is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me; I'll tell you all, master Brook. Since I plucked geese, played truant, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten, till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford: on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand.—Follow: strange things in hand, master Brook! follow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Windsor Park.Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, and SLENDER.

Page. Come, come: we'll couch it the castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies.—Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slender. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke with her, and we have a nay-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry, mum; she cries, budget; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your mum, or her budget? the white will decipher her well enough.—It ha'h struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Street in Windsor.Enter Mrs. PAGE, Mrs. FORD, and Dr. CAIUS.

Mrs. Page. Master doctor, my daughter is in green: when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and despatch it quickly: Go before into the park; we two must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do; adieu.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Caius.] My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter: but 'tis no matter: better a little chiding, than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies? and the Welch devil, Hugh?

Mrs. Page. They are all couched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will mock'd; if he be amazed, he will every way mock'd.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters, and thy lechery,

Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on; to the oak, the oak! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Windsor Park.Enter Sir HUGH EVANS, and Fairies.

Eva. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your parts: he pold, I pray you; follow me in the pit; and when I give the watch-ords, do a pid you; come, come; trib, trib. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the Park.Enter FALSTAFF disguised, with a buck's head.

Fal. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; minute draws on: Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me:—Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for Europa; love set on thy horns.—O powerful to that, in some respects, makes a beast a man; some other, a man a beast.—You were also, Jupiter, a swan, for the love of Leda:—O, omnipotent love! how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose!—A fault done first in the form of a beast.—O Jove, a beastly fault! and then another fault in the semblance of a fowl; think on't, Jove; foul fault.—When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windstag; and the fattest, I think, in the forest: Set me a cool rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me piss my tallow? Who comes here? my doe?

Enter Mrs. FORD and Mrs. PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John? art thou there, my dear my male deer?

Fal. My doe with the black scut?—Let the rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of Gr Sleeves; hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringo; let there come a tempest of provocation, I'll shelter me here. [Embracing.]

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with a sweetheart.

Fal. Divide me like a bride-buck, each a haun I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman? ha! Speak like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid's child of conscience; he makes restitution. As I a true spirit, welcome! [Noise with.]

Mrs. Page. Alas! what noise?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

Mrs. Ford. Away, away. [They run.]

Fal. I think, the devil will not have me damn; lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS, like a satyr; AN QUICKLY, and PISTOL; ANNE PAGE, the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and other dressed like fairies, with waizen tapers on their heads.

Quick. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, You moon-shine revellers, and shades of night, You orphan-heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office, and your quality.—Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy o-yes.

Pistol. Elves, list your names; silence, you airy to Cricket, to Windsor chimnies shalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths swept,

There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry: Our radiant queen hates sluts, and sluttery.

Fal. They are fairies; he, that speaks to them, shall die:

I wink and couch: no man their works must eye.

Eva. Where's Pede?—Go you, and where you find a maid, at ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said, use up the organs of her fantasy, eep she as sound as careless infancy; at those as sleep, and think not on their sins, nch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

Quick. About, about; arch Windsor castle, elves, within and out: rew good luck, oophes, on every sacred room; at it may stand till the perpetual doom, state as wholesome, as in state 'tis fit; orthy the owner, and the owner it.

several chairs of order look you scour 'th juice of balm, and every precious flower: ch fair instalment, coat, and several crest, 'th loyal blazon, evermore be blest!

id nightly, meadow-fairies, look, you sing, ke to the Garter's compass, in a ring: re expression that it bears, green let it be, ore fertile-fresh than all the field to see; id, Hony soit qui mal y pense, write, emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white; ke sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery, sckled below fair knight-hood's bending knee: } iries use flowers for their character.

ay; disperse: But, till 'tis one o'clock, re dance of custom, round about the oak 'Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set:

id twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be, guide our measure round about the tree. it, stay; I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welch fairy! t he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pist. Vile-worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Quick. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end: he be chaste, the flame will back descend, id turn him to no pain; but if he start, is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire? [They burn him with their tapers.]

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Quick. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire! out him, fairies; sing a scornful rhyme: d as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

Eva. It is right; indeed he is full of lecheries and quity.

SONG.

Fie on sinful fantasy!
Fie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart; whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.

Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
Pinch him for his villany;

Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles, and star-light, and moonshine be out.

During this song, the fairies pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; Slender another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Mrs. Anne Page. A noise of hunting is made within. All the fairies run away. Falstaff pulls off his buck's head, and rises.

Enter PAGE, FORD, Mrs. PAGE, and Mrs. FORD. They lay hold on him.

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think, we have watch'd you now;

ill none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?
Mrs. Page. I pray you, come; hold up the jest no higher:—

Now, good sir John, how like you Windsor wives? See you these, husband! do not these fair yokes Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now!—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, master Brook: And, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money; which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive, that I am made an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought, they were not fairies: and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the popery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment!

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Eva. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch goat too? Shall I have a coxcomb of frieze? 'tis time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and putter! have I lived to stand at the tail of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking, through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

Mrs. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings, and starings, pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welch flannel: ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me: use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pandar: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, husband, let that go to make amends:

Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends.

Ford. Well, here's my hand; all's forgiven at last.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee: Tell her, master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. Doctors doubt that: If Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius' wife. [Aside.]

Enter SLENDER.

Slen. Who, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son! how now? how now, son? have you despatched?

Slen. Despatched!—I'll make the best in Clocestershire know on't; would I were hanged, la else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slen. I came yonder at Eton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy: If it had not been i' the church, I would have swunged him, or he should have swunged me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a post-master's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you, how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slen. I went to her in white, and cry'd, mum, and she cryed budget, as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a post-master's boy.

Eva. Jeshn! Master Slender, cannot you see but marry boys?

Page. O, I am vexed at heart: What shall I do?

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened; I ha' married un garcon, a boy; un paisan, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gar I am cozened.

Mrs. Page. Why, did you take her in green?

Caius. Ay, be gar, and 'tis a boy: be gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit Caius.]

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me: Here comes master Fenton.

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

How now, master Fenton?

Anne. Pardon, good father! good my mother pardon!

Page. Now, mistress? how chance you went in with master Slender?

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

Fent. You do amaze her: Hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully,

Where there was no proportion held in love. The truth is, She and I, long since contracted,

Are now so sure, that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy, that she hath committed:

And this deceit loses the name of craft, Of disobedience, or unduteous title;

Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours,

Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd: here is no remedy:— In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy!

What cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chas'd.

Eva. I will dance and eat plums at your wedding

Mrs. Page. Well, I will muse no further:— Master Fenton,

Heaven give you many, many merry days!— Good husband, let us every one go home,

And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire; Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so:—Sir John, To master Brook you yet shall hold your word;

For he, to-night, shall lie with mistress Ford. [Exeunt.]

TWELFTH NIGHT.

Act 3. Sc. 4.

Published by W. Pickering, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 1825.

TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

ORSINO, duke of Illyria.
 SEBASTIAN, a young gentleman, brother to Viola.
 ANTONIO, a sea captain, friend to Sebastian.
 A sea captain, friend to Viola.
 VALENTINE, { gentlemen attending on the duke.
 CURIO, {
 SIR TOBY BELCH, uncle to Olivia.
 SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

MALVOLIO, steward to Olivia.
 FABIAN, { servants to Olivia.
 Clown, {
 OLIVIA, a rich countess.
 VIOLA, in love with the Duke.
 MARIA, Olivia's woman.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Musicians, and other attendants.

Scene,—A city in Illyria; and the sea-coast near it.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

An apartment in the Duke's palace.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If musick be the food of love, play on,
 Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting,
 The appetite may sicken, and so die—
 That strain again;—it had a dying fall:
 O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
 That breathes upon a bank of violets,
 Stealing, and giving odour.—Enough; no more;
 'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.
 O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou!
 That, notwithstanding thy capacity
 Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
 Of what validity and pitch soever,
 But falls into abatement and low price,
 Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy,
 That it alone is high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?

Duke. What, Curio?
Cur. The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:
 O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
 Methought, she purg'd the air of pestilence;
 That instant was I turn'd into a hart;
 And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds, E'er since pursue me.—How now! what news from her?

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
 But from her handmaid do return this answer:
 The element itself, till seven years heat,
 Shall not behold her face at ample view;
 But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
 And water once a day her chamber round
 With eye-offending brine: all this, to season
 A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh,
 And lasting, in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O, she, that hath a heart of that fine frame,
 To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
 How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
 Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else,
 That live in her! when liver, brain, and heart,
 These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd,
 (Her sweet perfections,) with one self king!—
 A way before me to sweet beds of flowers;
 Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with howers.
 [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

The sea-coast.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

Vi. What country, friends, is this?

Cap. Illyria, lady.

Vi. And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Elysium.

Perchance, he is not drown'd:—What think you, sailors?

Cap. It is perchance, that you yourself were saved.

Vi. O my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be.

Cap. True, madam: and, to comfort you with chance,

Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
 When you, and that poor number saved with you,
 Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
 Most provident in peril, bind himself
 (Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)
 To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea;
 Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
 I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
 So long as I could see.

Vi. For saying so, there's gold:

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
 Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
 The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,
 Not three hours travel from this very place.

Vi. Who governs here?

Cap. A noble duke, in nature,
 As in name.

Vi. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vi. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
 He was a bachelor then.

Cap. And so is now,

Or was so very late: for but a month Ago I went from hence; and then 'twas fresh
 In murmur, (as, you know, what great ones do,
 The less will prattle of,) that he did seek
 The love of fair Olivia.

Vi. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count,
 That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her

In the protection of his son, her brother,
 Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
 They say, she hath abjur'd the company
 And sight of men.

Vi. O, that I served that lady:

And might not be delivered to the world
 Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
 What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass;

Because she will admit no kind of suit,
 No, not the duke's.

Vi. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;
 And though that nature with a beauteous wall
 Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee

I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I pray thee, and I'll pay thee bounteously,
Conceal me what I am; and be my aid
For such disguise as, haply, shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke;
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of musick,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit;
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be:
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see!
To. I thank thee: Lead me in. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A room in Olivia's house.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and MARIA.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure, care's an enemy to-life.

Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights; your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you:
I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats; he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol-de-gambo, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,—almost natural: for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels, and substractors, that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece; I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: He's a coward, and a coystril, that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish top. What, wench? Casiliano vulgo; for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir Toby Belch?

Sir To. Sweet sir Andrew!

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good Mistress Mary Accost,—

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost, is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, sir Andrew, 'would thou might'st never draw sword again.

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink!

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet heart? what's that metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so; I am not suan ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, sir.

Sir And. Are you full of them?

Mar. Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

Sir To. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of ca-
When did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unles-see canary put me down: Methinks, someti-I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordi-man has; but I am a great eater of beef, and I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it ride home to-morrow, sir Toby.

Sir To. Pourquoy, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is pourquoy? do, or not d-I would I had bestowed that time in the tor-that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-bai-O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then hadst thou had an excellent of hair.

Sir And. Why, would that have mended hair?

Sir To. Past question; for thou seest, it will curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does not?

Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a staff; and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. 'Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir T-your niece will not be seen; or, if she be, it's sur-to one she'll none of me: the count himself, he hard by, woos her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the count; she'll not above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor I have heard her swear it. Tut, there's life in man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am low o' the strangest mind i' the world; I delight masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kick-sh-knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever be, under the degree of my betters; and yet I not compare with an old man.

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galli-knight?

Sir And. 'Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir And. And, I think, I have the back-simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wh-fore have these gifts a curtain before them?
they like to take dust, like mistress Mall's pict-why dost thou not go to church in a galliard, come home in a coranto? My very walk should a jig; I would not so much as make water, but a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the cellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed u-the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indiffewell in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set a some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else! were we born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, sir; it is legs and thighs. Let see thee caper: ha! higher: ha, ha!—[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in the Duke's palace.Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA, in man's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards Cesario, you are like to be much advanced; I hath known you but three days, and already you no stranger.

Vi. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of love: Is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants.

Vi. I thank you. Here comes the count.

uke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vi. On your attendance, my lord; here.

uke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario, I know'st no less but all; I have unclasp'd thee the book even of my secret soul: reform, good youth, address thy gait unto her; not deny'd access, stand at her doors, I tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow, thou have audience.

Vi. Sure, my noble lord, to be so abandon'd to her sorrow is spoke, she never will admit me.

uke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds, rather than make unprofitable return.

Vi. Say, I do speak with her, my lord; What then?

uke. O, then unfold the passion of my love, arise her with discourse of my dear faith: shall become thee well to act my woes; I will attend it better in thy youth, in a nuncio of more grave aspect.

Vi. I think not so, my lord.

uke. Dear lad, believe it; they shall yet belie thy happy years,

t say, thou art a man: Diana's lip

ot more smooth, and rubious; thy small pipe s the maiden's organ, shrill, and sound,

all is semblative a woman's part.

ow, thy constellation is right apt

this affair:—Some four, or five, attend him;

if you will; for I myself am best,

en least in company:—Prosper well in this,

thou shalt live as freely as thy lord,

all his fortunes thine.

Vi. I'll do my best,

voe your lady: yet, [Aside.] a barful strife!

er I woo, myself would be his wife. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A room in Olivia's house.Enter MARIA, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, will not open my lips, so wide as a bristle enter, in way of thy excuse: my lady will; thee for thy absence.

Cl. Let her hang me: he, that is well hanged in world, needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Cl. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenten answer: I can tell thee that saying was born, of, I fear no colours.

Cl. Where, good mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to in your foolery.

Cl. Well, God give them wisdom, that have it; those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hanged, for being so long at: or, to be turned away; is not that as good hanging to you?

Cl. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute then?

Cl. Not so neither; but I am resolved on two things.

Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Cl. Ay, in good faith; very apt! Well, go thy way; if sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert 'twixt a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that; here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best. [Exit.]

Enter OLIVIA, and MALVOLIO.

Cl. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits, that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: For what says Quinapalus? Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.—God bless thee, lady!

Ol. Take the fool away.

Cl. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Ol. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Cl. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the butcher mend him: Any thing, that's mended, is but patched: virtue, that transgresses, is but patched with sin; and sin, that amends, is but patched with virtue: If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower:—the lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Cl. Misprision in the highest degree!—Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much as to say, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Ol. Can you do it?

Cl. Dexteriously, good madonna.

Ol. Make your proof.

Cl. I must catechize you for it, madonna; Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Ol. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll 'hide your proof.

Cl. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Ol. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Cl. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Ol. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Cl. The more fool you, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Ol. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Cl. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn, that I am no fox; but he will not pass his word for two pence that you are no fool.

Ol. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal; I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool, that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanies.

Ol. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempred appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts, that you deem cannon-bullets: There is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Cl. Now Mercury endure thee with leasing, for thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman, much desires to speak with you.

Ol. From the count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam; 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off, I pray you; he speaks nothing but madman; Fie on him! [Exit Maria.] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will, to dismiss it.

[Exit Malvolio.] Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool: whose skull Jove cram with brains, for here he comes, one of thy kin, has a most weak pia mater.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH.

Oh. By mine honour, half drunk.—What is he at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oh. A gentleman? What gentleman?

Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here—A plague o' these pickle-herrings!—How now, sot?

Clo. Good sir Toby,

Oh. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery: There's one at the gate.

Oh. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one.

[Exit.

Oh. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman, one draught above heat makes him a fool; the second mads him; and a third drowns him.

Oh. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drown'd: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman.

[Exit Clown.

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick; he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you: I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Oh. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter of a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oh. What kind of man is he?

Mal. Why, of mau kind.

Oh. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner; he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Oh. Of what personage, and years, is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peacock, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him e'en standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks very shrewishly; one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Oh. Let him approach: Call in my gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls.

[Exit.

Re-enter MARIA.

Oh. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face; We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLA.

Fio. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Oh. Speak to me, I shall answer for her; Your will?

Fio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptable, even to the least sinister usage.

Oh. Whence came you, sir?

Fio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oh. Are you a comedian?

Fio. No, my profound heart: and yet, by the very fangs of malice, I swear, I am not that I are you the lady of the house?

Oh. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Fio. Most certain, if you are she, you do yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not to reserve. But this is from my commission: on with my speech in your praise, and then you the heart of my message.

Oh. Come to what is important in't: I fear you the praise.

Fio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, 'tis poetical.

Oh. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray keep it in. I heard, you were saucy at my gate, and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone! you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of day with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your

Fio. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a longer.—Some mollification for your giant, lady.

Oh. Tell me your mind.

Fio. I am a messenger.

Oh. Sure, you have some hideous matter to liver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Stay your office.

Fio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no nature of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the in my hand: my words are as full of peace as mine.

Oh. Yet you began rudely. What are you would you?

Fio. The rudeness, that hath appear'd in me, I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oh. Give us the place alone: we will hear divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what is text?

Fio. Most sweet lady,

Oh. A comfortable doctrine, and much made of it. Where lies your text?

Fio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oh. In his bosom? In what chapter of his book?

Fio. To answer by the method, in the first o' heart.

Oh. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have no more to say?

Fio. Good madam, let me see your face.

Oh. Have you any commission from your lord negotiate with my face? you are now out of text: but we will draw the curtain, and show the picture. Look you, sir, such a one I was present: Is't not well done? [Unveil]

Fio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oh. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind weather.

Fio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on Lady, you are the cruel'st she alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Oh. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried; and every particle, and utensil, labell'd to my will; as, item, two lips indifferent red; it two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one nose, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hithe 'praise me?

Fio. I see you what you are: you are too proud. But, if you were the devil, you are fair.

My lord and master loves you; O, such love Could be but recompens'd, though you were crown'd The nonpareil of beauty!

Oh. How does he love me?

Fio. With adoration, with fertile tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Oh. Your lord does know my mind, I can love him.

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant; And, in dimension, and the shape of nature, A gracious person: but yet I cannot love him;

He might have took his answer long ago.

Fio. If I did love you in my master's flame,

th such a suffering, such a deadly life,
our denial I would find no sense,
ould not understand it.

H. Why, what would you?

Vi. Make me a willow cabin at your gate, call upon my soul within the house;
te loyal cantons of contemned love,
sing them loud even in the dead of night;
a your name to the reverberate hills, make the babbling gossip of the air out, Olivia! O, you should not rest ween the elements of air and earth, you should pity me.

H. You might do much: What is your parentage?

Vi. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman.

H. Get you to your lord;
not love him: let him send no more;
ss, perchance, you come to me again,
ell me how he takes it. Fare you well:
ank you for your pains: spend this for me.
Vi. I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse;
master, not myself, lacks recompense.
e make his heart of flint, that you shall love; let your fervour, like my master's, be 'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.]

Oli. What is your parentage?

Vi. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:

Vi. I am a gentleman.—I'll be sworn thou art:
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon:—Not too fast:—
soft! soft!

Unless the master were the man.—How now?

Even so quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections,
With an invisible and subtle stealth,
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.— What, ho, Malvolio!

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.

Oli. Run after that same peevish messenger,
The county's man: he left this ring behind him,
Would I, or not; tell him, I'll none of it.

Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Oli. I do I know not what; and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.
Fate, show thy force: Ourselves we do not owe;
What is decreed, must be; and be this so! [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The sea-coast.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not,
I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly me; the malignancy of my fate might, perdistemper yours; therefore I shall crave of your leave, that I may bear my evils alone:
ere a bad recompense for your love, to lay any tem on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are id.

Seb. No, 'sooth, sir; my determinate voyage is : extravagancy. But I perceive in you so extant a touch of modesty, that you will not extort me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it ges me in manners the rather to express myself.
Must know of me then, Antonio, my name is stian, which I called Rodorigo; my father was Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you heard of: he left behind him, myself, and a , both born in an hour. If the heavens had pleas'd, 'twould we had so ended! but, you, utered that; for, some hour before you took from the breach of the sea, was my sister ned.

Ant. Alas, the day!

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much abled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful, though I could not, with such estimable ler, overfar believe that, yet thus far I will y publish her, she bore a mind, that envy
I not but call fair: she is drowned already, vith salt water, though I seem to drown her mbrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.
Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let e your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, is, kill him, whom you have recovered, desire
t. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of oers; and I am yet so near the manners of my er, that upon the least occasion more, mine ill tell tales of me. I am bound to the t Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.]

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
ve many enemies in Orsino's court, would I very shortly see thee there:
come what may, I do adore thee so,
t danger shall seem sport, and I will go.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

Vi. Even now, sir; on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: And one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Vi. She took the ring of me; I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her;
and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.]

Vi. I left no ring with her: What means this lady?

Fortune forbid, my outside have not charm'd her!
She made good view of me; indeed, so much,
That sure methought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speak in starts distractedly.
She loves me, sure; and the cunning of her passion
Invites me in this churlish messenger.

None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.

I am the man;—If it be so, (as 'tis,)

Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness,
Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy is it for the proper-false

In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!

Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we;

For, such as we are made of, such we be.

How will this fadge! My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him;

And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me:

What will become of this! As I am man,

My state is desperate for my master's love;

As I am woman, new alas the day!

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe?

O time, thou must untangle this, not I:

It is too hard a knot for me to untie. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in Olivia's house.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and Str ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Str To. Approach, sir Andrew: not to be a-beg'd
Q

after midnight, is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou know'st,—

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion; I hate it as an unfilled can: To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Sir And. 'Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.—Marian, I say!—a stoop of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Clow. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the picture of we three?

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg; and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Picrogrammus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Quebus; 'twas very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman; Hadst it?

Clow. I did impute thy gratitude; for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is six-pence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a—

Clow. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Clow. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear; your true love's coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further, pretty sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith!

Sir To. Good, good.

Clow. What is love? 'tis not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter;
What's to come, is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet-and-twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet, and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance, indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch.

Clow. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain: let our catch be, Thou knave.

Clow. Hold thy peace, thou knave, knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool; it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clow. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i' faith! Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter MARIA.

Mar. What a catterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and hid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian, we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Kamsey, and Three merry men be us. Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady! [Sings]

Clow. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable foolery.
Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be posed, and so do I too; he does it with a brace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. O, the twelfth day of December,—[Sings]
Alar. For the love o'God, peace.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Did I make an alehouse of my lady's house, that squeak out your coziers' catches without any reprobation or remorse of voice? Is there no respectation, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catch. Sneep up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to you: disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house; not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mal. Nay, good sir Toby.

Clow. His eyes do show his days are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. But I will never die.

Clow. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go?

Clow. What an if you do?

Sir To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clow. O no, no, no, no, you dare not.

Sir To. Out o'time? sir, ye lie.—Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale.

Clow. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall not i'th' mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt i'th' right.—Go, sir, rub your chain with crums:—A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's vour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand. [Exit]

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink with a man's a hungry, to challenge him to the fire and then to break promise with him, and make fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet sir Toby, be patient for to-night since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreant, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in bed: I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us; tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Italian.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What, for being a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser; an affectioned squire that cons state without book, and utters it by swarths: the best persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him, believe him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epithets of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the asure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he will find himself most feelingly personated: I write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of hands.

Nir Tb. Excellent! I smell a device.

Nir And. I have't in my nose too.

Nir Tb. He shall think, by the letters that thou drop, that they come from my niece, and that is in love with him.

Nir And. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Nir And. And your horse now would make him ass.

Mr. Ass. I doubt not.

Nir And. O, 'twill be admirable.

Nir And. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know, my rick will work with him. I will plant you two, I let the fool make a third, where he shall find letter; observe his construction of it. For this hat, to bed, and dream on the event. Farwell.

[Exit.]

Nir Tb. Good night, Penthesilea.

Nir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Nir Tb. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that res me; What o' that?

Nir And. I was adored once too.

Nir Tb. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need for more money.

Nir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a way out.

Nir Tb. Send for money, knight; if thou hast her i'th' end, call me Cut.

Nir And. If I do not, never trust me. take it how will.

Nir Tb. Come, come; I'll go burn some sack, 'tis late to go to bed now: come, knight; come, ght.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in the Duke's palace.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and others.

Duke. Give me some musick:—Now, good-morrow, friends:—

W, good Cesario, but that piece of soog, at old and antique song we heard last night: thought, it did relieve my passion much; re than light airs, and recollected terms, these most brisk and giddy-paced times:—ne, but one verse.

Mr. He is not here, so please your lordship, t should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Mr. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the y Olivia's father took much delight in: he is at the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

[Exit Curio—Musick.]

oe hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love, the sweet pangs of it remember me: ; such as I am, all true lovers are; staid and skittish in all motions else, e, in the constant image of the creature it is belov'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

io. It gives a very echo to the seat, ere Love is thro'n'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly: life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye th stay'd upon some favour that it loves; th it not, boy?

A little, by your favour.

Duke. What kind of woman is't?

io. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee then. What years, i'faith?

io. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven; Let still the woman take elder than herself; so wears she to him, sways she level in her husband's heart. r, boy, however we do praise ourselves, r fancies are more giddy and unfirm, re longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn, au women's are.

io. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thyself, thy affection cannot hold the bent:

For women are as roses; whose fair flower, Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.
Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so; To die, even when they try to perfection grow!

Re-enter CURIO, and Clown.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last night:—

Mark it, Cesario; it is old, and plain: The spinsters and the knitters in the sun, And the free maids, that weave their thread with bones,

Do use to chant it; it is silly sooth, And dallies with the innocence of love, Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir?

Duke. Ay; pr'ythee, sing.

[Musick.]

SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O prepare it;
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O, where Sad true lover ne'er find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in singing, sir.

Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.

Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee; and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffata, for thy mind is a very opal!—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell.

[Exit Clown.]

Duke. Let all the rest give place.—

[Exeunt Curio and Attendants.]

Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yon' same sovereign cruelty: Tell her, my love, more noble than the world, Prizes not quantity of dirty lands; The parts, that fortune hath bestow'd upon her, Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune; But 'tis that miracle, and queen of gems, That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.

Vio. But, if she cannot love you, sir?

Duke. I cannot be so answered.

Vio. 'Sooth, but you must.

Say, that some lady, as, perhaps, there is, Hath for your love as great a pang of heart As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her; You tell her so; Must she not then be answered?

Duke. There is no woman's sides, Can bide the beating of so strong a passion As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart So big, to hold so much; they lack retention. Alas, their love may be call'd appetite,— No motion of the liver, but the palate,— That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt; But mine is all as hungry as the sea, And can digest as much: make no compare Between that love a woman can bear me, And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know,—

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe:

In faith, they are as true of heart as we. My father had a daughter lov'd a man, As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman, I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord: She never told her love,

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought;
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
We men may say more, swear more: but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?
Tio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too;—and yet I know not:—
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste; give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no deny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Olivia's garden.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Come thy ways, signior Fabian.
Fab. Nay, I'll come; if I lose a scruple of this spout, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.
Sir To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out of favour with my lady, about a bear-baiting
here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have the bear again;
and we will fool him black and blue:—Shall we not, sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain:—How now, my nettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk; he has been yonder i'
the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow, this half hour: observe him, for the love of mockery;
for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative ideot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [Shows a letter,] for here comes the trout, that must be caught with tickling. [Exit Maria.]

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she did affect me: and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect, than any one else, that follows her. What should I think on't?

Sir To. Here's an over-weening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him! how he jests under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue:—

Sir To. Peace, I say.

Mal. To be count Malvolio;—

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace, peace!

Mal. There is example for't; the lady of the strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in; look, how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,—

Sir To. O, for a stone-hew, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping:

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace, peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,
—to ask for my kinsman Toby:

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with some jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us cars, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching familiar smile with an austere regard of contem-Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow lips then?

Mal. Saying, Cousin Toby, my fortunes he cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative speech:—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkenness.

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinew our plot.

Mal. Beside, you waste the treasure of your with a foolish knight;

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. One Sir Andrew:

Sir And. I knew 'twas I; for many do call me!

Mal. What employment have we here?

[Taking up the letter.]

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.
Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humours timate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my lady's hand: th be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and makes she her great P's. It is, in contemp question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: Why t

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [reads] Love knows, I love:

But who?

Lips do not move,

No man must know.

No man must know.—What follows? the nurl altered!—No man must know.—If this should tear, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. I may command, where I adore:

But silence, like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore;

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.

Fab. A fustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.—Nay, first, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed hi

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl che

Mal. I may command where I adore. Why, may command me; I serve her, she is my la

Sir To. O, ay! make up that:—he is now a cold scent.

Fab. Sower will cry upon't, for all this, thou it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins

Fab. Did not I say, he would work it out? t

Mal. M,—But then there is no consonancy in sequel; that suffers under probation: A should f

Fab. And O shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make h cry, O.

Mal. And then I comes behind;—

Fab. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, y might see more detraction at your heels, than fo tunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I;—This simulation is not as t hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but of afraid of greatness: Some are born great, some are greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon 'em. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and it embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and refresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with ants; let thy tongue tang arguments of state; thyself into the trick of singularity: She thus sees thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who counted thy yellow stockings; and wished to see thee cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to; thou nade, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not hy to touch fortune's fingers. Farewell. She, would alter services with thee,

I will be proud, I will read politic authors, ll baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acantance, I will be point-de-vice, the very man. not now fool myself to let imagination jade me; very reason excites to this, that my lady loves. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, lid praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in she manifests herself to my love, and, with a of injunction, drives me to these habits of her 3. I thank my stars, I am happy. I will be ge, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gar-, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, my stars, be praised!—Here is yet a postscript.

thee.—I will smile; I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. [Exit.]

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device:

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter MARIA.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at fray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either?

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that, when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true; does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow-stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too.

[Exit.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Olivia's Garden.

Enter VIOLA, and Clown with a tabor.

3. Save thee, friend, and thy musick: Dost live by thy tabor?

1. No, sir, I live by the church.

3. Art thou a churchman?

1. No such matter, sir; I do live by the church: do live at my house, and my house doth by the church.

1. So thou may'st say, the king lies by a beggar; if a beggar dwell near him: or, the church is by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the h.

3. You have said, sir.—To see this age!—A ice is but a cheveril glove to a good wit; quickly the wrong side may be turned out!

3. Nay, that's certain; they, that dally nicely words, may quickly make them wanton.

1. I would therefore, my sister had had no, sir.

3. Why, man?

1. Why, sir, her name's a word; and to dally that word, might make my sister wanton: indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds used them.

3. Thy reason, man?

1. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without; and words are grown so false, I am loath ve reason with them.

3. I warrant, thou art a merry fellow, and for nothing.

1. Not so, sir, I do care for something: but conscience, sir, I do not care for you; if e care for nothing, sir, I would it would you invisible.

3. Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

1. No, indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; sals are as like husbands, as pilchards are to egs, the husband's the bigger; I am, indeed, ir fool, but her corrupter of words.

3. I saw thee late at the count Orsino's.

1. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun; it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress: I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee.

Clw. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard!

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one; though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clw. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clw. I would play lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir; 'tis well begg'd.

Clw. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come; who you are, and what you would, are out of my welkin: I might say element; but the word is overworn. [Exit.]

Vio. This fellow's wise enough to play the fool; And, to do that well, craves a kind of wit:

He must observe their mood, on whom he jests,

The quality of persons, and the time;

And, like the haggard, check at every feather

That comes before his eye. This is a practice,

As full of labour as a wise man's art:

For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit;

But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi: votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than

I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance: But we are prevented.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier! Rain odours! well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed:—I'll get 'em all three ready.

Ol. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

[Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.]

Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Ol. My servant, sir! 'Twas never merry world,

Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment:

You are servant to the count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours;

Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Ol. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,

'Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts

On his behalf:—

Ol. O, by your leave, I pray you;

I bade you never speak again of him:

But, would you undertake another suit,

I had rather hear you to solicit that,

Than musick from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,—

Ol. Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send,

After the last enchantment you did here,

A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse

Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you:

Under your hard construction must I sit,

To force that on you, in a shameful cunning,

Which you knew none of yours: What might you think?

Have you not set mine honour at the stake,

And baited it with all the unmuzzled thoughts,

That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving

Enough is shown; a cypress, not a bosom,

Hides my poor heart: So let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Ol. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a grise; for 'tis a vulgar proof,

That very oft we pity enemies.

Ol. Why, then, methinks, 'tis time to smile again:

O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!

If one should be a prey, how much the better

To fall before the lion, than the wolf?

[Clock strikes.]

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.—

Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you:

And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest,

Your wife is like to reap a proper man:

There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward-hoe:

Grace, and good disposition 'tend your ladyship!

You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?

Ol. Stay:

I pry'thee, tell me, what thou think'st of me.

Vio. That you do think, you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then you think right; I am not what I am.

Ol. I would, you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am,

I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

Ol. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful

In the contempt and anger of his lip!

A murd'rous guilt shows not itself more soon

Than love, that would seem hid; love's night is noon.

Cesario, by the roses of the spring,

By maidenhood, honour, truth, and every thing,

I love thee so, that, mangle all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.

Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,

For, that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:

But, rather, reason thus with reason fetter:

Love sought is good, but given unsought, is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,

I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,

And that no woman has; nor never none

Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.

And so adieu, good madam; never more

Will I my master's tears to you deplore.

Ol. Yet come again: for thou, perhaps, may'st mend

That heart, which now abhors, to like his love.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A room in Olivia's house.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir And. No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir To. Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favo'

upon me; I saw't i' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy?

me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight! will you make an ass o' me?

Fab. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oath of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand jury-men, si-before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in y-sight, only to exasperate you, to awake your d-mouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and bri-stone in your liver: You should then have accoher; and with some excellent jests, fire-new fi-

the mint, you should have banged the youth idumbness. This was looked for at your hand, this was hauled: the double gilt of this opportu-ny let time wash off, and you are now sail'd i-

the north of my lady's opinion: where you y-hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, un-you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, eitof valour, or policy.

Sir And. And't be any way, it must be with lour; for policy I hate: I had as lief be a Brow-

as a politician.

Sir To. Why then, build me thy fortunes u-the basis of valour. Challenge me the count's yo-to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places;

niece shall take note of it: and assure thyself, tis no love-broker in the world can more prevail man's commendation with woman, than reporvalour.

Fab. There is no way but this, sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a chal-le to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand; be cond brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be quent, and full of invention: taunt him with licence of ink: if thou thou'st him some thrice shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will li-thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were enough for the bed of Ware in England, set down; go, about it. Let there be gall enough thy ink; though thou write with a goose-pen, matter: About it.

Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We'll call thee at the cubiculo: Go.

[Exit Sir And.]

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, sir To-Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad; some thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him:

you'll not deliver it.

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all me stir on the youth to an answer. I think, oxen wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew if he were opened, and you find so much blood his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

To. Look, where the youngest wren of nine es.

Or. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh selves into stitches, follow me: yon' gull volio is turned heathen, a very renegado; for e is no Christian, that means to be saved by ving rightly, can ever believe such impossible ages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

To. And cross-gartered?

Or. Most villainously; like a pedant, that keeps hood i' the church.—I have dogged him, like murderer: He does obey every point of the r, that I dropped to betray him. He does smile face into more lines, than are in the new map, the augmentation of the Indies: you have not such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear ing things at him. I know, my lady will strike
; if she do, he'll smile, and take't for a great ur.

To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A street.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Or. I would not, by my will, have troubled you; since you make your pleasure of your pains, ill no further chide you.

nt. I could not stay behind you; my desire,
e sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth;
not all love to see you, (though so much, might have drawn one to a longer voyage,) jealousy what might befall your travel, ig skillness in these parts; which to a stranger, uited, and unfriended, often prove gh and inhospitable: My willing love, rather by these arguments of fear, forth in your pursuit.

Or. My kind Antonio,
n no other answer make, but, thanks,
, thanks, and ever thanks: Often good turns shuffled off with such uncurrent pay:
, were my worth, as is my conscience, firm,
I should find better dealing. What's to do?
ll we go see the reliques of this town?

nt. To-morrow, sir; best, first, go see your lodging.

Or. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night;
ay you, let us satisfy our eyes
h the memorials, and the things of fame, t do renown this city.

nt. Would, you'd pardon me;
not without danger walk these streets:
e, in a sea-fight, 'gainst the Count his galleys,
d some service; of such note, indeed,
t, were I ta'en here, it would scarce be answer'd.
Or. Believe, you slew great number of his people.
nt. The offence is not of such a bloody nature;
sit the quality of the time, and quarrel,
ht well have given us bloody argument.
ight have since been answer'd in repaying at we took from them; which, for traffick's sake, t of our city did: only myself stood out:
which, if I be laps'd in this place,
all pay dear.

Or. Do not then walk too open.
nt. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here's my purse;
he south suburbs, at the Elephant,
est to lodge: I will bespeak our diet, fles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge,

h viewing of the town; there shall you have me.

Or. Why I your purse?

nt. Haply, your eye shall light upon some toy, have desire to purchase; and your store,
ink, is not for idle markets, sir.

Or. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for hour.

nt. To the Elephant.—

Or. I do remember. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Olivia's garden.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Or. I have sent after him: He says, he'll come;

How shall I feast him? what bestow on him?
For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or borrow'd.

I speak too loud.—
Where is Malvolio?—he is sad, and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes;—
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, madam;
But in strange manner. He is sure possess'd.
Oh. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Mar. No, madam,
He does nothing but smile: your ladyship
Were best have guard about you, if he come;
For, sure, the man is tainted in his wits.

Oh. Go call him hither.—I'm as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.—

Enter MALVOLIO.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho. [Smiles fantastically.]

Oh. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering;
But what of that, if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is: Please one,
and please all.

Oh. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs: It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think, we do know the sweet Roman wilt.

Oh. Will thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? ay, sweet-heart; and I'll come to thee.

Oh. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so,
and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request? Yes; Nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. Be not afraid of greatness.—'Twas well writ.

Oh. What meant thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. Some are born great,—

Oh. Ha?

Mal. Some achieve greatness,—

Oh. What say'st thou?

Mal. And some have greatness thrust upon them.

Oh. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings;—

Oh. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. And wish'd to see thee cross-gartered.

Oh. Cross-gartered?

Mal. Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so;—

Oh. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me see thee a servant still.

Oh. Why this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orsino's is returned; I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oh. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him; I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry. [Exit Olivia and Maria.]

Mal. Oh, oh! do you come near me now? no worse man than sir Toby to look to me? This concurr directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. Cast thy humble slough, says she;—be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants,—let thy tongue tang with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity;
—and, consequently, sets down the manner how;
as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And, when she went away now, let this fellow be looked to: Follow: not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but follow. Why, every thing adheres together; that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance.—What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter MARIA, with Sir TOBY BELCH, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils in hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is:—How is't with you, sir? how is't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you; let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ah! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace, we must deal gently with him; let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? how is't with you? What, man! defy the devil! consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress?

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace; this is not the way: Do you not see, you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir?

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan: Hang him, foul collier!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx?

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element; you shall know more hereafter. [Exit.]

Sir To. Is't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now; lest the device take air, and taint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief, that he is mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it; I warrant, there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is it, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [reads.] Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't.

Fab. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fab. Very brief, and exceeding good sense-less.

Sir To. I will way-lay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me,—

Fab. Good.

Sir To. Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain. Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law Good.

Sir To. Fare thee well; And God have mercy us, one of our souls! He may have mercy upon me but my hope is better, and so look to thyself.

ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK

Sir To. If this letter move him not, his legs c not: I'll give 't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't; h now in some commerce with my lady, and will and by depart.

Sir To. Go, sir Andrew; scout me for him the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailiff: soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as th drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass that a terrible oath, with a swaggering acc sharply tverged off, gives manhood more appo tion than ever proof itself would have earned h Away.

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [E

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter: the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him to be of good capacity and breeding; his empl ment between his lord and my niece confirms less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ig rant, will breed no terror in the youth, he will f it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deli his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ag cheek a notable report of valour; and drive gentleman, (as, I know, his youth will apply ree it,) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, sk fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright th both, that they will kill one another by the lo like cockatries.

Enter OLIVIA and VIOLA.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece: give th way, till he take leave, and presently after h

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some h rid message for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Mar

Ol. I have said too much unto a heart of sto And laid mine honour too unchary out:

Go on my master's griefs.

Ol. Here, wear this jewel for me, 'tis my pictu Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you:

To. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to-morrow: Fare thee w A fiend, like thee, might bear my soul to hell. [E

Re-enter Sir TOBY BELCH and FABIAN

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

To. And you, sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done hi I know not; but thy interceptor, full of despig bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orch end: dismount thy tuck, be yare in thy preparati for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

To. You mistake, sir; I am sure, no man he any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very f and clear from any image of offence done to any m

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure yo therefore, if you hold your life at any price, beta you to your guard; for your opposite hath in hi what youth, strength, skill, and wrath can furni man withal.

To. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unback rapiet, and on carpet consideration; but he is devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath divorced three; and his incensement at this mome so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but hangings of death and sepulchre: hob, nob, is his word; give't, or take't.

To. I will return again into the house, and squire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: believe, this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself of a very competent injury; therefore, get you, and give him his desire. Back you shall not the house, unless you undertake that with me, rich with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for saddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to bear iron about you.

To. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you, me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is; it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir Toby.]

To. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?
Fab. I know, the knight is incensed against you, to a mortal arbitrement; but nothing of the circumstance more.

To. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?
Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read a by his form, as you are like to find him in the roof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most cruel, bloody, and fatal opposite, that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria: Will he walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

To. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am glad, that had rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my title. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter Sir TOBY, with Sir ANDREW.

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil; I have seen such a rrago. I had a pass with him, fier, scabboard, and all, and he gives me the kick-in with such a mortal motion, that it is insupportable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely your feet hit the ground they step on: They say, has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. Pox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: man can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on't; an I thought he had been ant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him need ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey or white.

Sir To. I'll make the motion: Stand here, make good show on't; this shall end without the person of souls: Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I can. [Aside.]

Re-enter FABIAN and VIOLA.

To. Give his horse [to Fab.] to take up the quarrel; I have persuaded him, the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him; and thus, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir; he will fight you for his oath sake: marry, he hath better sought him of his quarrel, and he finds that scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, the supportance of his vow; he protests he will hurt you.

To. Pray God defend me! A little thing would come tell them how much I lack of a man. [Aside.]

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, sir Andrew, there's no remedy; gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one t with you: he cannot by the duello avoid it: he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and older, he will not hurt you. Come on; to't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath! [Draws.]

Enter ANTONIO.

To. I do assure you, 'tis against my will. [Draws.]

Ant. Pat up your sword;—If this young gentleman

Have done offence, I take the fault on me; If you offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.]

Sir To. You, sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. [Draws.]

Enter two Officers.

Fab. O good sir Toby, hold; here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon. [To Antonio.]

To. Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please. [To Sir Andrew.]

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir;—and for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word: He will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit Of count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1 Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well, Though now you have no sea-cap on your head.— Take him away; he knows I know him well.

Ant. I must obey.—This comes with seeking you; But there's no remedy; I shall answer it.

What will you do? Now my necessity Makes me to ask you for my purse; It grieves me Much more, for what I cannot do for you, Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd; But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

To. What money, sir?

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here, And, part, being prompted by your present trouble, Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something: my having is not much; I'll make division of my present with you: Hold, there is half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now? Is't possible, that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion! Do not tempt my misery, Least that it make me so unsound a man, As to upbraid you with those kindnesses, That I have done for you.

To. I know of none; Nor know I you by voice, or any feature:

I hate ingratitude more in a man, Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness, Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. O heavens themselves!

2 Off. Come, sir, I pray you, go.

Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here,

I snatch'd one-half out of the jaws of death; Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love,—

And to his image, which, methought, did promise Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

1 Off. What's that to us? The time goes by; away.

Ant. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!— Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.—

In nature there's no blemish, but the mind; None can be call'd deform'd, but the unkind:

Virtue is beauty; but the bounteous-evil Are empty trunks, o'erflourish'd by the devil.

1 Off. The man grows mad; away with him. Come, come, sir.

Ant. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers with Antonio.]

To. Methinks, his words do from such passion fly,

That he believes himself; so do not I. Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,

That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

To. He nam'd Sebastian; I my brother know Yet living in my glass; even such, and so,

In favour was my brother; and he went Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,

For him I imitate: O, if it prove, Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love!

[Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears, in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.

Sir To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never draw sword.

Sir And. An I do not,—

Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money, 'twill be not yet,

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The street before Olivia's house.

Enter SEBASTIAN and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe, that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow; Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, i'faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither.—Nothing, that is so, is so.

Seb. I pry'thee, vent thy folly somewhere else; Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney.—I pry'thee now, un-gird thy strangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady; Shall I vent to her, that thou art coming?

Seb. I pry'thee, foolish Greek, depart from me; There's money for thee; if you tarry longer, I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand:—These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir TOBY, Sir ANDREW, and FABIAN.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? there's for you.

Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there. Are all the people mad? [Beating Sir Andrew.]

Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight: I would not be in some of your coats for two-pence.

[Exit Clown.]

Sir To. Come on, sir; hold. [Holding Sebastian.]

Sir And. Nay, let him alone, I'll go another way to work with him; I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron; you are well fleshed; come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now?

If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

[Draws.]

Sir To. What, what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

[Draws.]

Enter OLIVIA.

Oh. Hold, Toby; on thy life, I charge thee, hold. Sir To. Madam?

Oh. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch, fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves,

Where manners ne'er were preach'd out of my sight! Be not offended, dear Cesario:—

Rudesby, be gone!—I pry'thee, gentle friend, [Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.]

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway In this unceiv and unjust extent

Against thy peace. Go with me to my house; And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks

This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby May'st smile at this: thou shalt not choose but go;

Do not deny: Beshrew his soul for me, He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What relish is in this? how runs the stream? Or I am mad, or else this is a dream:—

Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;

If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Oh. Nay, come, I pry'thee: 'Would thou'd'st rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Oh. O, say so, and so be! [Exit]

SCENE II.

A room in Olivia's house.

Enter MARIA and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I pry'thee, put on this gown, this beard; make him believe, thou art sir Toby the curate; do it quickly: I'll call sir Toby whilst.

[Exit Maria.]

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will disser myself in't; and I would I were the first, ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not enough to become the function well; nor enough to be thought a good student: but I said, an honest man, and a good house-keeper goes as fairly, as to say, a careful man, a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and MARIA.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.

Clo. Bonos dies, sir Toby: for as the old he of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very said to a niece of king Gorboduc, That, that is so I, being master parson, am master parson: what is that, but that? and is, but is?

Sir To. To him, sir Topas.

Clo. What, ho, I say,—Peace in this pri

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas, good sir Topas, my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperholical fiend! how vexest this man? talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wrong; good sir Topas, do not think I am mad; they laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Sathan? I call thee the most modest terms; for I am one of those gones, that will use the devil himself with court Say'st thou, that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, sir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath bay-windows transparent barricadoes, and the clear stones towards the south are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainst thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, sir Topas; I say to this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is darkness, but ignorance; in which thou art puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I there was never man thus abused: I am no madman than you are; make the trial of it in any stant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might inhabit a bird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think noly of the soul, and no way prove his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well; Remain thou still in darkness; thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagore I will allow of thy wits; and fear to ki fat. Sir Topas, sir Topas,— sr Tb. My most exquisite sir Topas!

fo. Nay, I am for all waters.

lar. Thou might'st have done this without thy sr Tb. To him in thine own voice, and bring me of this knavery. If he may be conveniently vered, I would he were; for I am now so far offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue h any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by y to my chamber. [Exeunt Sir Toby and Maria.]

fo. Hey Robin, jolly Robin, Tell me how thy lady does.

[Singing.]

fat. Fool,—

fo. My lady is unkind, perdy.

fat. Fool,—

fo. Alas, why is she so?

fat. Fool, I say:—

fo. She loves another—Who calls, ha?

fat. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and r; as I am a gentleman, I will live to be skful to thee for't.

fo. Master Malvolio!

fat. Ay, good fool.

fo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?
fat. Fool, there was never man so notoriously sed: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.
o. But as well? then you are mad, indeed, if be no better in your wits than a fool.

fat. They have here propertied me; keep me in ness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all can to face me out of my wits.

fo. Advise you what you say; the minister is .—Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens bible babble.

fat. Sir Topas,— fo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—

o, I, sir! not I, sir. God b'w'you, good sir as.—Marry, amen.—I will, sir, I will.

fat. Fool, fool, fool, I say,— fo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir?

a shent for speaking to you.

fat. Good fool, help me to some light, and some r; I tell thee, I am as well in my wits, as man in Illyria.

fo. Well-a-day,—that you were, sir!

fat. By this hand, I am: Good fool, some ink, r, and light, and convey what I will set down y lady; it shall advantage thee more than the bearing of letter did.

fo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

fat. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

fo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see rains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree:
I pr'ythee, be gone.

Clo. I am gone, sir,

And anon, sir,

I'll be with you again,

In a trice,

Like to the old vice,

Your need to sustain;

Who with dagger of lath,

In his rage and his wrath,

Cries, ah, ha! to the devil:

Like a mad lad,

Pare thy nails, dad,

Adieu, Goodman Drivel.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

Olivia's garden.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun;
This pearl she gave me, I do feel't, and see't:
And though 'tis wonder, that entwines me thus,
Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio, then?
I could not find him at the Elephant:
Yet there he was; and there I found this credit,
That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service:
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad,
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take, and give back, affairs, and their despatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing,
As, I perceive, she does: there's something in't,
That is deceivable. But here comes the lady.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Ol. Blame not this haste of mine: If you mean
well,
Now go with me, and with this holy man,
In the chantry by: there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: He shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note;
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth.—What do you say?
Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Ol. Then lead the way, good father;—And heavens so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!
[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The street before Olivia's house.

Enter Clown and FABIAN.

b. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his letter.

o. Good master Fabian, grant me another ret.

b. Any thing.

o. Do not desire to see this letter.

b. That is, to give a dog, and, in recompense, e my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, and Attendants.

uke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

o. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.

uke. I know thee well; How dost thou, my fellow?

o. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the e for my friends,

uke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends I am abused:
so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make you two affirmatives, why, then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me;
there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer; there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennet, sir, may put you in mind; One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know, I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit Clown].

Enter ANTONIO and Officers.

Vto. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well; Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeared As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war: A bawling vessel was he captain of; For shallow draught, and bulk, unprizable; With which such scathful grapple did he make With the most noble bottom of our fleet, That very envy, and the tongue of loss, Cry'd fame and honour on him.—What's the matter?

Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio, That took the Phoenix and her freight, from Candy; And this is he, that did the Tiger board, When your young nephew Titus lost his leg: Here in the streets, desperate of shame, and state, In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vto. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side; But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me, I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief! What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies, Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear, Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir, Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me; Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate, Though I confess, on base and ground enough, Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither: That most ingrateful boy there, by your side, From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was; His life I gave him, and did thereto add My love, without retention, or restraint, All his in dedication: for his sake Did I expose myself, pure for his love, Into the danger of this adverse town; Drew to defend him, when he was beset: Where being apprehended, his false cunning, (Not meaning to partake with me in danger,) Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance, And grew a twenty-years-removed thing, While one would wink; denied me mine own purse, Which I had recommended to his use Not half an hour before.

Vto. How can this be?

Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before, (No interim, not a minute's vacancy,) Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; now heaven walks on earth.—

But for thee, fellow, fellow, thy words are madness: Three months this youth hath tended upon me; But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

Off. What would my lord, but that he may not have, Wherein Olivia may seem servicable?— Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vto. Madam?

Duke. Gracious Olivia,—

Off. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—

Vto. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Off. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord, It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear, As hawling after musick.

Duke. Still so cruel?

Off. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What! to perverseness? you uncivil lady, To whose ingrate and unauuspicious altars

My soul the faithfull'st offerings hath breath'd, That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do?

Off. Even what it please my lord, that shall come him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to like to the Egyptian thief, at point of death, Kill what I love; and a savage jealousy, That sometimes savours nobly?—But hear me: Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument, That screws me from my true place in your favour, Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still; But this your minion, whom, I know, you love, And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dear, Him will I tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master's spite. Come boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief: I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To spite a raven's heart within a dove. [Exit Cesario].

Vto. And I, most jocund, apt, and willing To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

Off. Where goes Cesario?

Vto. After him I love More than I love these eyes, more than my More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love you. If I do feign, you witness above, Punish my life, for tainting of my love!

Off. Ah me, detested! how am I beguil'd?

Vto. Who does beguile you? who does wrong?

Off. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long Call forth the holy father. [Exit an Attendant].

Duke. Come away. [To]

Off. Whither, my lord?—Cesario, husband?

Duke. Husband?

Off. Ay, husband; Can he that Duke. Her husband, sirrah?

Vto. No, my lord,

Off. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,

That makes thee strangle thy propriety:

Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up;

Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou

As great as that thou fear'st.—O, welcome, to Re-enter Attendant and Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence, Here to unfold (though lately we intended To keep in darkness, what occasion now Reveals before 'tis ripe,) what thou dost know Hath newly past between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love, Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands, Attested by the holy close of lips, Strengthen'd by interchange of your rings, And all the ceremony of this compact Seal'd in my function, by my testimony: Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my I have travelled but two hours.

Duke. O, thou dissembling cni! what wilt thou do? When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case, Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow, That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow? Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vto. My lord, I do protest,—

Off. O, do not so Hold little faith, though thou hast too much.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, with head broke.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon one presently to Sir Toby.

Off. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, a given sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of God, your help: I had rather than forty I were at home.

Off. Who has done this, sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario, took him for a coward, but he's the very incarnation.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. Od's life! he is:—You my head for nothing; and that, that I did, set on to do't by sir Toby.

Viola. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you: you drew your sword upon me, without cause; and I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you've hurt me; I think, you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, drunk, led by the Clown.
Clown. Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: if he had not been in drink, he would have led you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman? how is't with you?
Sir To. That's all one: he has hurt me, and he's the end on't.—Sot, did'st see Dick surgeon,?

Clown. O, he's drunk, sir Toby, an hour ago; his eyes were set at eight i'the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue. After a passy-measure, or a pavin, I hate a drunken rogue.

Clown. Away with him: Who hath made this rock with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, sir Toby, because we'll dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave? a thin-faced knave, a gull?

Clown. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Exit Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.]

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman; but had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less, with wit, and safety. I do not throw a strange regard upon me, and that I do perceive it hath offended you; pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows I made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons; in natural perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio! I have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me, since I have lost thee.

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?
Ant. How have you made division of yourself?—An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ant. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother: I can there be that deity in my nature, here and every where. I had a sister, whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd:—a charity, what kin are you to me? [To Viola.] What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Viola. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father; and he a Sebastian was my brother too; and he suited to his watery tomb: spirits can assume both form and suit, and I come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed; and I am in that dimension grossly clad, from the womb I did participate.

And were you a woman, as the rest goes even, I could my tears let fall upon your cheek, and I say—Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Viola. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Viola. And died that day, when Viola from her birth I number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul!

And finished, indeed, his mortal act that day, that made my sister thirteen years.

Viola. If nothing lets to make us happy both, let this my masculine usurp'd attire, not embrace me, till each circumstance of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump, and I am Viola: which to confirm, bring you to a captain in this town, whose lie my maiden weeds: by whose gentle help I am preserv'd to serve this noble count: the occurrence of my fortune since I have been between this lady, and this lord.

Seb. So comes it, lady, you have been mistook:

[To Olivia.]

And I have nature to her bias drew in that.

And I would have been contracted to a maid;

Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd, You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.—If this be so, as yet the glass seems true, I shall have share in this most happy wreck: Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times, [To Viola.] Thou never should'st love woman like to me.

Viola. And all those sayings will I over-swear; And all those swearings keep as true in soul, As doth that orb'd continent the fire, That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand; And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Viola. The captain, that did bring me first on shore, Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some action, Is now in durance; at Malvolio's suit, A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Olivia. He shall enlarge him:—Fetch Malvolio hither:—

And yet, alas, now I remember me, They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter Clown, with a letter.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.—How does he, sirrah?

Clown. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do: he has here writ a letter to you, I should have given it to you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much, when they are delivered.

Olivia. Open it, and read it.

Clown. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman:—By the Lord, madam,— Olivia. How now! art thou mad?

Clown. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow ra.

Olivia. Pr'ythee, read i'thy right wits.

Clown. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Olivia. Read it you, sirrah. [To Fabian.]

Fabian. [reads.] By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury. The madly-used Malvolio.

Olivia. Did he write this?

Clown. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Olivia. See him delivered, Fabian; bring him hither. [Exit Fabian.]

My lord, so please you, these things further thought on, To think me as well a sister as a wife, One day shall crown the alliance on't, so please you, Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer.—

Your master quits you; [To Viola.] and, for your service done him,

So much against the mettle of your sex, So far beneath your soft and tender breeding, And since you call'd me master for so long, Here is my hand; you shall from this time be Your master's mistress.

Olivia. A sister?—you are she.

Re-enter FABIAN with MALVOLIO.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Olivia. Ay, my lord, this same:

How now, Malvolio?

Malvolio. Madam, you have done me wrong, Notorious wrong.

Olivia. Have I, Malvolio? no.

Malvolio. Lady, you have. Pray you, peruse that letter: You must not now deny it is your hand.

Write from it, if you can, in hand, or phrase; Or say, 'tis not your seal, nor your invention: You can say none of this: Well, grant it then,

And tell me in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour;
Bade me come smiling, and cross-gartered to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon sir Toby, and the lighter people:
And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious geck, and gull,
That e'er invention play'd on? tell me why.

Oli. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character:
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was she
First told me, thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such forms which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content:
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee;
But, when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good madam, hear me speak;
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess, myself, and Toby,
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him: Maria writ
The letter, at sir Toby's great importance;
In recompense whereof, he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge;
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Oli. Alas, poor fool! how have they baffled thee!
Clo. Why, some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them. I was one, sir, in this interlude; one sir Topas, sir; but that's all one:—By the Lord, fool,
*I am not mad;—*But do you remember? Madam,

why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you sm not, he's gagg'd: And thus the whirligig of tin brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be revenged on the whole pack of yo [Exe]

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace.
He hath not told us of the captain yet;
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls—Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man;
But, when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen. [Exeun]

SONG.

Clo. When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knave and thief men shut their ga
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came, alas! to wive,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With toss-pots still had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.
A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every da

Scene,—Messina.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Before Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO, HERO, BEATRICE, and others, with a Messenger.

Leon. I learn in this letter, that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this: he was not three leagues off, when I left him.

Leon. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice itself, when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here, that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro: He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age; doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leon. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness: There are no faces truer than those, that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping!

Beat. I pray you, is signior Montanto returned from the wars, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady; there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he, that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he is returned; and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight: and my uncle's fool reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt.—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady;—But what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing,—Well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece: there is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth, that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature.—Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is it possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No: an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound, ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don PEDRO, attended by BALTHAZAR and others, Don JOHN, CLAUDIO, and BENEDICK.

D. Pedro. Good signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but, when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly.—I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bene. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?
Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself:—Be happy, lady! for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders, for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder, that you will still be talking, signior Benedick; nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible, disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turn-coat:—But it is certain, I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart, that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God, and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that; I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mind! so some gentleman or other shall scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue, is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would, my horse had the speed of your tongue; and so good a continuer: But keep your way o' God's name; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick: I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Leonato,—signior Claudio, and signior Benedick,—my dear friend Leonato, hath invited you all. I tell him, we shall stay here at the least a month; and he heartily prays, some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays for his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together [Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.]

Clau. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I looked on her.

Clau. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Clau. No, I pray thee speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, i' faith, methinks she is too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her; that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome; and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Clau. Thou thinkest, I am in sport; I pray thee, tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Clau. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Clau. In mine eye she is the sweetest lady ever I looked on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and no such matter: there's her cousin, an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the first of May doth the last of cember. But I hope, you have no intent to marry a husband; have you?

Clau. I would scarce trust myself, though I were sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is it come to this, i' faith? Hath no world one man, but he will wear his cap with a pickin? Shall I never see a bachelor of three score again? Go to i' faith; an thou wilt needs t' thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and away Sundays. Look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, as you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Bene. You hear, count Claudio: I can be sworn as a dumb man, I would have you think so on my allegiance,—mark you this, on my allegiance:—He is in love. With who?—now that is your grace's part.—Mark, how short his answer is:—With Hero, Leonato's short daughter.

Clau. If it were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: it is no more 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Clau. If my passion change not shortly, I forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady very well worthy.

Clau. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Clau. And, in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And, by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Clau. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel, how she should be loved, nor know, how she should be worthy, is in my opinion, that fire cannot melt out of me; I will be it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Clau. And never could maintain his party in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her thanks; and yet still she is my enemy, because I will not do them the wrong to mistake any, I will do myself the right to trust none: the fine is, (for the which I may go the fine) I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look on with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hurt, my lord; not with love: prove, that ever I more blood with love, than I will get again drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle, like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's head, and set them in my forehead: and let me be painted; and in such great letters as they write, Here is good horse to hire, let them signify under sign,—Here you may see Benedick the married man.

Clau. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this short me. I look for an earthquake too then.

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the gods. In the mean time, good signior Benedick, I'll go to Leonato's; commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he made great preparation.

me. I have almost matter enough in me for an embassy; and so I commit you—laud. To the tuition of God: From my house, had it,— Pedro. The sixth of July: Your loving friend, adieu.

me. Nay, mock not, mock not: The body of discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, the guards are but slightly basted on neither: you flout old ends any further, examine your science; and so I leave you. [Exit Benedick.] laud. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

Pedro. My love is thine to teach; teach it but how, thou shalt see how apt it is to learn hard lesson, that may do thee good.

laud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

Pedro. No child but Hero, she's his only heir: thou affect her, Claudio?

laud. O my lord, when you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye, like'd, but had a rougher task in hand to drive liking to the name of love: now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts have left their places vacant, in their rooms thronging soft and delicate desires, prompting me how fair young Hero is, as, I lik'd her, ere I went to wars.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently, tire the hearer with a book of words: you do not love fair Hero, cherish it;

I will break with her, and with her father, thou shalt have her: Was't not to this end, that thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

laud. How sweetly do you minister to love, a know love's grief by his complexion! lest my liking might too sudden seem, could have said't with a longer treatise.

Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

fastest grant is the necessity:

what will serve, is fit: 'tis once, thou lov'st;

I will fit thee with the remedy.

now, we shall have revelling to-night;

I'll assume thy part in some disguise;

tell fair Hero I am Claudio;

in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,

take her hearing prisoner with the force strong encounter of my amorous tale:

after, to her father will I break;

the conclusion is, she shall be thine:

practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A room in Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Leon. How now, brother? Where is my cousin, my son? Hath he provided this music?
Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I tell you strange news that you yet dreamed of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them; but they have good cover, they show well outward. The prince count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached grove in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a maid: The prince discovered to Claudio, that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he should be accordant, he meant to take the present by the top, and instantly break with you of it.
Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?
Ant. A good sharp fellow: I will send for him, question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself:—but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.]

Cousins, you know what you have to do.—O, I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill:—Good cousins, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another room in Leonato's house.

Enter Don JOHN and CONRADE.

Con. What the goujere, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds it, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And, when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

D. John. I wonder, that thou being (as thou say'st thou art) born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad, when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat, when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep, when I am drowsy, and tend to no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root, but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all, than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied, that I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzel, and enfranchis'd with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my month, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discontent?

D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here? What news, Borachio?

Enter BORACHIO.

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper; the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato; and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool, that betroths himself to quietness?

Bora. Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

D. John. Who? the most exquisite Claudio?

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! And who, and who? which way looks he?

Bora. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chick! How came you to this?

Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference: I, whipt me behind the arras; and there heard it agreed upon, that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her, give her to count Claudio.

D. John. Come, come, let us thither; this may prove food to my displeasure: that young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow; if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way: You are both sure, and will assist me?

Con. To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper; their cheer is the greater, that I am subdued: 'Would the cook were of my mind!—Shall we go prove what's to be done?

Bora. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A hall in Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE, and others.

Leon. Was not count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him, but I am heart-burned an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beat. He were an excellent man, that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other, too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half signior Benedick's tongue in count John's mouth, and half count John's melancholy in signior Benedick's face,—

Beat. With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world,—if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she is too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst: I shall lessen God's sending that way: for it is said, God sends a curst cow short horns; but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns.

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for the which blessing I am at him on my knees every morning and evening: Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face; I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leon. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? He, that hath a beard, is more than a youth; and he, that hath no beard, is less than a man: and he that is more than a youth, is not for me; and he, that is less than a man, I am not for him: Therefore I will even take sirpence in earnest of the bear-herd, and lead his apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell?

Beat. No; but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids: so deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter for the heavens; he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. Well, niece, [To Hero.] I trust, you will be ruled by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make courtesy, and say, Father, as it please you;—but yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say, Father, as it please me.

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not woo'd in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him, there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer. For bear me, Hero; Wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure full of state and ancientry; and then a repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beat. I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by day-light.

Leon. The revellers are entering; brother, a good room.

Enter Don PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDIK, BALTHAZAR; Don JOHN, BORACHIO, MARGARET, URSULA, and others, masked.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and, especially, when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so? Hero. When I like your favour; for God del the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; w the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then your visor should be that

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

[Takes her a

Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Marg. So would not I, for your own sake; have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better; the hearers cry, Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight w the dance is done!—Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words; the clerk is answer

Urs. I know you well enough; you are sign Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the waggling of your he

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, u you were the very man: Here's his dry hand and down; you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not k you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide its Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful,—and that I my good wit out of the Hundred merry Tale. Well, this was signior Benedick, that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure, you know him well enoug

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very fool; only his gift is in devising impossible s ders: none but libertines delight in him; and commendation is not in his wit, but in his vill for he both pleaseth men, and angers them, then they laugh at him, and beat him: I am s he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell what you say.

Beat. Do, do: he'll but break a comparis two on me; which, peradventure, not marked not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; then there's a partridge' wing saved, for the will eat no supper that night. [Music will We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

lead. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave m at the next turning.

[Dance. Then exeunt all but Don John, Borachio, and Claudio.]

Don John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, hath withdrawn her father to break with him at it: The ladies follow her, and but one visor sains.

Hero. And that is Claudio; I know him by his ring.

Don John. Are not you signior Benedick?

Claudio. You know me well: I am he.

Don John. Signior, you are very near my brother his love: he is enamoured on Hero; I pray you, suade him from her, she is no equal for his th: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claudio. How know you he loves her?

Don John. I heard him swear his affection.

Hero. So did I too; and he swore he would ry her to-night.

Don John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt Don John and Borachio.]

Claudio. Thus answer I in name of Benedick, hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio.—
certain so;—The prince woos for himself.

ndship is constant in all other things,
e in the office and affairs of love:

efore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;
every eye negotiate for itself,

trust no agent: for beauty is a witch,
inst whose charms faith melteth into blood.

s is an accident of hourly proof, ich I mistrusted not: Farewell therefore, Hero!

Re-enter BENEDICK.

Hero. Count Claudio?

Claudio. Yea, the same.

Hero. Come, will you go with me?

Claudio. Whither?

Hero. Even to the next willow, about your own sedge, count. What fashion will you wear the and of? About your neck, like an usurer's n? or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf?
I must wear it one way, for the prince hath got r Hero.

Claudio. I wish him joy of her.

Hero. Why, that's spoken like an honest drover; sey sell bullocks. But did you think the prince ld have served you thus?

Claudio. I pray you, leave me.

Hero. Ho! now you strike like the blind man;
s the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat post.

Claudio. If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Hero. Alas, poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep sedges.—But, that my lady Beatrice should v me, and not know me! The prince's fool!—

it may be, I go under that title, because I merry.—Yea; but so; I am apt to do myself ig: I am not so reputed: it is the base, the r disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll venged as I may.

Enter Don PEDRO, HERO, and LEONATO.

Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count; Did see him?

Hero. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a e in a warren; I told him, and, I think, I him true, that your grace had got the good of this young lady; and I offered him my pany to a willow tree, either to make him a and, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a as being worthy to be whipped.

Pedro. To be whipped! What's his fault?

Hero. The flat transgression of a school-boy; s, being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, s it his companion, and he steals it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression?
transgression is in the stealer.

Hero. Yet it had not been amiss, the rod had made, and the garland too; for the garland night have worn himself; and the rod he might bestow'd on you, who, as I take it, have stolen bird's nest.

Don Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Benedick. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

Don Pedro. The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you; the gentleman, that danced with her, told her, she is much wronged by you.

Benedick. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block; an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester; that I was duller than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance, upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me: She speaks poniards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her, she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had, left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit; yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you shall find her the infernal Atë in good apparel. I would to God, some scholar would conjure her; for, certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

Re-enter CLAUDIO and BEATRICE.

Don Pedro. Look, here she comes.

Benedick. Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes, that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the farthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Prester John's foot; fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard; do you any embassy to the Pigmies, rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy: You have no employment for me?

Don Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Benedick. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not; I cannot endure my lady Tongue. [Exit.]

Don Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of signior Benedick.

Beatrice. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me a while;
and I gave him use for it, a double heart for his single one: marry, once before, he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say,
I have lost it.

Don Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beatrice. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

Don Pedro. Why, how now, count? wherefore are you sad?

Claudio. Not sad, my lord.

Don Pedro. How then? Siek?

Claudio. Neither, my lord.

Beatrice. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well: but civil, count; civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

Don Pedro. I'faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained; name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leonato. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beatrice. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claudio. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much.— Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Beatrice. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let him not speak, neither.

Don Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Beatrice. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care:—My cousin tells him in his ear, that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good lord, for alliance!—Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burned; I may sit in a corner, and cry, hie ho! for a husband.

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting: Hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days; your grace is too costly to wear every day:—But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cry'd; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.—Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's pardon. [Exit Beatrice.]

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means; she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leon. O lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claud. To-morrow, my lord: Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us; I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules' labours; which is, to bring sigior Benedick and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband, that I know: thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick:—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another room in Leonato's house.

Enter Don JOHN and BORACHIO.

D. John. It is so; the count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea, my lord; but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinal to me: I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so cover that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think, I told you lordship, a year since how much I am in the favour of Margaret, waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember.

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to tempt Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to him, that he hath wronged his honour in marry the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do mightily hold up) to a contaminated stale, such one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato: I you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despise them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bora. Go then, find me a meet hour to draw Claudio and the count Claudio, alone: tell them, you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of both to the prince and Claudio, as—in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match; and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid,—that have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; will shall bear no less likelihood, than to see me at chamber-window; hear me call Margaret, He hear Margaret term me Borachio; and bring tell to see this, the very night before the intended wedding: for, in the mean time, I will so fashion matter, that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, jealousy shall be call'd assurance, and all the party paration overthrow.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it will put it in practice: Be cunning in the world this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day marriage. [Exit Bora.]

SCENE III.

Leonato's garden.

Enter BENEDICK and a boy.

Bene. Boy,—

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bene. I know that;—but I would have thee here and here again. [Exit Boy.—] I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, and after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn, falling in love: And such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear tabor and the pipe: I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afoot, to see a good arm and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man; a soldier; and now is he turn'd orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: will not be sworn, but love may transform me an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he has made an oyster of me, he shall never make such a fool. One woman is fair; yet I am well another is wise; yet I am well: another virtuous yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never love her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not an angel; of good discourse, an excellent man, and her hair shall be of what colour it please d. Ha! the prince and monsieur Love! I will e me in the arbour. [Withdraws.]

ter Don PEDRO, LEONATO, and CLAUDIO.

Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?

Clau. Yes, my good lord:—How still the evening is, hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!

Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Clau. O, very well, my lord: the music ended, e'll fit the kid fox with a penny-worth.

Enter BALTHAZAR, with music.

Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my lord, tax not so bad a voice slander music any more than once.

Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency, put a strange face on his own perfection:— say thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: se many a wooer doth commence his suit her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos; will he swear, he loves.

Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come: if thou wilt hold longer argument, it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes, he's not a note of mine, that's worth the noting.

Pedro. Why these are very crotchets, that he speaks;

notes, forsooth, and noting! [Music.]

Clau. Now, Divine air! now is his soul ravished! it not strange, that sheeps' guts should hale s out of men's bodies!—Well, a horn for my ay, when all's done.

BALTHAZAR sings.

I.

Oh, sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,

Men were deceivers ever;

One foot in sea, and one on shore;

To one thing constant never:

Then sigh not so,

But let them go,

And be you blithe and bonny;

Converting all your sounds of woe

Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

II.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo

Of dumps so dull and heavy;

The fraud of men was ever so,

Since summer first was leavy.

Then sigh not so, &c.

Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Clau. And an ill singer, my lord.

Pedro. Ha! no; no, faith; thou singest well gh for a shift.

Clau. [Aside.] An he had been a dog, that ld have howled thus, they would have hanged and, I pray God, his had voice bode no mis-!

I had as lief have heard the night-raven,

what plague could have come after it.

Pedro. Yes, marry; [To Claudio.]—Dost thou

Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent ck: for to-morrow night we would have it at ady Hero's chamber-window.

Clau. The best I can, my lord.

Pedro. Do so: farewell. [Exeunt Balthazar

music.] Come hither, Leonato: What was a told me of to-day? that your niece Beatrice in love with signior Benedick?

Clau. O, ay:—Stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits de to Pedro.] I did never think that lady would loved any man.

Pedro. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful,

she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to r.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

[Aside.]

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection,—it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May he, she doth but counterfeit.

Clau. 'Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There never was counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion, as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Clau. Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

[Aside.]

Leon. What effects, my lord! She will sit you,— You heard my daughter tell you how.

Clau. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-headed fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence.

Clau. He hath ta'en the infection; hold it up.

[Aside.]

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's her torment.

Clau. 'Tis true, indeed: so your daughter says: Shall , says she, that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him, that I love him?

Leon. This says she now, when she is beginning to write to him: for she'll be up twenty times a night; and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper:—my daughter tells us all.

Clau. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O!—When she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet!—

Clau. That.

Leon. O! she tore the letter into a thousand half-pence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: I measure him, says she, by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should.

Clau. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;—O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!

Leon. She doth indeed; my daughter says so: and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself; it is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Clau. To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him: She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Clau. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In every thing, but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daff'd all other respects, and made her half myself: I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Clau. Hero thinks surely, she will die: for she says, she will die, if he love her not; and she will die, ere she make her love known; and she will die, if he woo her, rather than she will 'hate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth, indeed, show some sparks, that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece: Shall we go see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord: let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible; she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we'll hear further of it by your daughter; let it cool the while. I love Benedick well; and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready. Claud. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

D. Pedro. Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner.

[Exit Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato.]

BENEDICK advances from the arbour.

Bene. This can be no trick: The conference was sadly borne.—They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady; it seems, her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured:

they say, I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say, too; that shall rather die than give any sign of affection.—I never think to marry:—I must not seem proud. Happy are they, that hear their detractions and can put them to mending. They say, the lady is fair; 'tis a truth, I can hear them witness and virtuous;—'tis so, I cannot reprove it; and one, but for loving me:—By my troth, it is no addition to her wit;—nor no great argument of her worth, for I will be horribly in love with her.—I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have rail'd so long at marriage: But doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot endure in his age: Shall quips, and sentences, and jests be paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No: The world must be peopled. When I said, I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Here comes Beatrice: By this day, she's our lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter BEATRICE.

Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you in to dinner.

Bene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your message.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me; if it had been pain, I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure in the message? Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take at a knife's point, and choke a daw withal:—You've no stomach, signior; fare you well.

Bene. Ha! Against my will I am sent to bid me come in to dinner—there's a double meaning in't. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me—that's as much as to say, pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks that I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew: I will go get her picture.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Leonato's garden.

Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Hero. Good Margaret, run thee into the parlour; There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the Prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her; say, that thou overheard'st us; And bid her steal into the pleached bower, Where honey-suckles, ripen'd by the sun, Forbid the sun to enter;—like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it:—there will she hide her,

To listen our propose: This is thy office; Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick: When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit: My talk to thee must be, how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice: Of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;

Enter BEATRICE, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice; who even now

Is couched in the woodbine coverture: Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose not Of the false sweet bait, that we lay for it.—

[They advance to the]

No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful; I know, her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure,

That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero. So says the prince, and my new-trother.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it?

Hero. They did intreat me to acquaint her.

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick

To wish him wrestle with affection,

And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman

Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,

As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O God of love! I know, he doth desire

As much as may be yielded to a man:

But nature never fram'd a woman's heart

Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice:

Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes,

Misprising what they look on; and her wit

Values itself so highly, that to her

All matter else seems weak: she cannot love

Nor take no shape nor project of affection,

She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so;

And therefore, certainly, it were not good

She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why, you speak truth: I never yet saw

How wise, how noble, young, how rarely free

But she would spelt him backward: if fair-fair

She'd swear, the gentleman should be her sister

If black, why nature, drawing of an antic,

Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed low, an agate very wily cut:

speaking, why a vane, blown with all winds;
silent, why a block moved with none.
turns she every man the wrong side out;
d never gives to truth and virtue that high simpleness and merit purchaseth.

Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Pedro. No: not to be so odd, and from all fashions, Beatrice is, cannot be commendable:

t who dare tell her so? If I should speak, I'd mock me into air; O, she would laugh me t of myself, press me to death with wit.
erefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire, assume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
were a better death than die with mocks;
high is as bad as die with tickling.

Urs. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will say.

Pedro. No: rather I will go to Benedick,
I counsel him to fight against his passion:
I, truly I'll devise some honest slanders stain my cousin with: One doth not know,
w much an ill word may empoison liking.

Urs. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong.
cannot be so much without true judgment, ving so swift and excellent a wit she is priz'd to have,) as to refuse are a gentleman as signior Benedick.

Pedro. He is the only man of Italy, ays excepted my dear Claudio.

Urs. I pray you, be not angry with me, madam, aking my fancy; signior Benedick, shape, for bearing, argument, and valour,
s foremost in report through Italy.

Pedro. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

Urs. His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.—
en are you married, madam?

Pedro. Why, every day;—to-morrow: Come, go in;

show thee some attires; and have thy counsel,
ich is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. She's lim'd, I warrant you; we have caught her, madam.

Pedro. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps:
e Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

[Exeunt Hero and Ursula.]

BEATRICE advances.

Beat. What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?

empt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.

Benedick, love on, I will requite thee;
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand;

ou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band:

Others say, thou dost deserve; and I ive it better than reportingly.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A room in Leonato's house.

Don PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, and LEONATO.

Pedro. I do but stay, till your marriage be ummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Urs. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll use me.

Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in ew gloss of your marriage, as to show a child ew coat, and forbid him to wear it. I will be bold with Benedick for his company; for, the crown of his head to the sole of his foot,
all mirth; he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's string, and the little hangman dare not shoot me: he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and tongue is the clapper; for what his heart s, his tongue speaks.

Urs. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

Urs. So say I; methinks, you are sadder.

Urs. I hope, he is in love.

Pedro. Hang him, traitor; there's no true of blood in him, to be truly touch'd with if he be sad, he wants money.

Urs. I have the tooth-ach.

Pedro. Draw it.

Urs. Hang it!

Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

D. Pedro. What? sigh for the tooth-ach?

Leon. Where is but a humour, or a worm?

Bene. Well, Every one can master a grief, but he that has it.

Claud. Yet say I, he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutch-man to day; a Frenchman to-morrow; or in the shape of two countries at once, as, a German from the waist downward, all slops; and a Spaniard from the hip upward,
no doublet: Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: he brushes his hat o'mornings; What should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Claud. No, but the barber's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with civet: Can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That's as much as to say, The sweet youth's in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which,
I hear what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lutestring, and now governed by stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him:
Conclude, conclude, he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him.

D. Pedro. That would I know too; I warrant, one, that knows him not.

Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and, in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ach.—
Old signior, walk aside with me; I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

[Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.]

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Beatrice. 'Tis even so: Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice; and then the two bears will not bite one another, when they meet.

Enter Don JOHN.

D. John. My lord and brother, God save you.

D. Pedro. Good den, brother.

D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

D. Pedro. In private?

D. John. If it please you;—yet count Claudio may hear; for what I would speak of, concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter?

D. John. Means your lordship to be married tomorrow? [To Claudio.]

D. Pedro. You know, he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.

Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you, discover it.

D. John. You may think, I love you not; let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest: For my brother, I think, he holds you well; and in dearthness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage: surely, suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed!

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?

D. John. I came hither to tell you; and, circumstances shortened, (for she hath been too long a talking of,) the lady is disloyal.

Claud. Who? Hero?

D. John. Even she; Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.

Claud. Disloyal?

D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say, she were worse; think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not, till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered; even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claud. May this be so?

D. Pedro. I will not think it.

D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know: if you will follow me, I will show you enough; and, when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claud. If I see any thing to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow; in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disparage her no farther, till you are my witnesses: bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!

Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented!

So will you say, when you have seen the sequel.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A Street.

Enter DOGBERRY and VERGES, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desertless man to be constable?

1 Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacoal; for they can write and read.

Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal: God hath blessed you with a good name; to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watch. Both which, master constable,—

Dogb. You have; I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear, when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern: This is your charge; You shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

2 Watch. How if he will not stand?

Dogb. Why then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects:—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 Watch. We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how sleeping should offend:—Only, have a care that your bills be not stolen:—Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

2 Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why then, let them alone till they are sober; if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

2 Watch. Well, sir.

Dogb. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man: and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dogb. Truly, by your office, you may; I think, they that touch pitch will be defiled: most peaceable way for you, if you do take a care, is, to let him show himself what he is, and out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a man of man, partner.

Dogb. Truly, I would not hang a dog I say will; much more a man, who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 Watch. How if the nurse be asleep, and we hear us?

Dogb. Why then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ewe, that do not bear her lamb when it baas, will never bear a calf, when he bleats.

Verg. 'Tis very true.

Dogb. This is the end of the charge. You stable, are to present the prince's own person, if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verg. Nay, by'r lady, that, I think, he cannot.

Dogb. Five shillings to one on't with any that knows the statutes, he may stay him: if he watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By'r lady, I think, it be so.

Dogb. Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good an there be any matter of weight chances, me; keep your fellows' counsels and your own good night.—Come, neighbour.

2 Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge, let us go sit here upon the church-bench till we are called to bed.

Dogb. One word more, honest neighbour pray you, watch about signior Leonato's do the wedding being there to-morrow, when the coil to-night: Adieu, he vigilant, I beseech

[Exeunt Dogberry and

Enter BORACHIO and CONRADE

Bora. What! Conrade,—

Watch. Peace, stir not.

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close then under this pent for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drummer, utter all to thee.

Watch. [Aside.] Some treason, master stand close.

Bora. Therefore know, I have earned of De la thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible, that any villany should be so dear?

Bora. Thou shouldst rather ask, if it were sible any villany should be so rich; for wh villains have need of poor ones, poor ones make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows, thou art unconfirmed knowest, that the fashion of a doublet, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bora. Tush! I may as well say, the fool. But see't thou not what a deform the fashion is?

Watch. I know that Deformed; he has vile thief this seven year; he goes up and like a gentleman: I remember his name.

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No; 'twas the rane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a de thief this fashion is? how giddily he turns all the hot bloods, between fourteen and fifty? sometime, fashioning them like Ph soldiers in the reeby painting; sometime, I

5. priests in the old church window; sometime, the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-on tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club?

Urs. All this I see; and see, that the fashion is out more apparel than the man: But art thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that I hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of fashion?

Urs. Not so neither: but know, that I have sight wooed Margaret, the lady Hero's gentleman, by the name of Hero; she leans me out at mistress's chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely:—I had first tell thee, how the Prince, Claudio, and master, planted, and placed, and possessed by master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard amiable encounter.

Urs. And thought they Margaret was Hero?

Urs. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio; the devil my master knew she was Margaret; partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, by the dark night, which did deceive them, chiefly by my villany, which did confirm any der that Don John had made, away went my idio enraged; swore he would meet her as he appointed, next morning at the temple, and e, before the whole congregation, shame her what he saw over-night, and send her home without a husband.

Watch. We charge you in the prince's name,

Watch. Call up the right master constable: have here recover'd the most dangerous piece schery that ever was known in the common-th.

Watch. And one Deformed is one of them; I v him, he wears a lock.

Urs. Masters, masters.

Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, arrant you.

Urs. Masters,—

Watch. Never speak; we charge you, let us you to go with us.

Urs. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, g taken up of these men's bills.

Urs. A commodity in question, I warrant you. se, we'll obey you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Leonato's house.

Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Urs. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Urs. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well.

Urs. Troth, I think, your other rabato were r.

Urs. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.

Urs. By my troth, it's not so good; and I ant, your cousin will say so.

Urs. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another; wear none but this.

Urs. I like the new tire within excellently, if hair were a thought browner: and your gown's st rare fashion, i'faith. I saw the duchess of a's gown, that they praise so.

Urs. O, that exceeds, they say.

Urs. By my troth, it's but a night-gown in set of yours: Cloth of gold, and cuts, and l with silver; set with pearls, down sleeves, -sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a ish tinsel: but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and l lent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Urs. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart ceeding heavy!

Urs. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of an.

Urs. Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Urs. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? of marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not lord honourable without marriage? I think, would have me say, saving your reverence,— isand: an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend no body: is there any harm in—the heavier for a husband? None, I think, an it be the right husband, and the right wife; otherwise 'tis light and not heavy: Ask my lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter BEATRICE.

Hero. Good morrow, coz.

Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how now! do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Marg. Clap us into—Light o' love; that goes without a burden; do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

Beat. Yea, Light o' love, with your heels!—then, if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall lack no barns.

Marg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin: 'tis time you were ready. By my troth I am exceeding ill:—hey ho!

Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Marg. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

Beat. What means the fool, trow?

Marg. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!

Hero. These gloves the count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.

Marg. A maid, and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O, God help me! God help me! how long have you profess'd apprehension?

Marg. Ever since you left it: doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap.—By my troth, I am sick.

Marg. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.

Marg. Moral? no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor, indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: and how you may be converted, I know not; but, methinks, you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What paoe is this, that thy tongue keeps?

Marg. Not a false gallop.

Re-enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, withdraw; the prince, the count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another room in Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO, with DOGBERRY and VERGES.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour? Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that concerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see, 'tis a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?

Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest, as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous : palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers ; but, truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me ! ha !

Dogb. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis : for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city ; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir ; he will be talking ; as they say, When the age is in, the wit is out ; God help us ! it is a world to see !—Well said, i'faith, neighbour Verges :—well, God's a good man ; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind :—An honest soul, i'faith, sir ; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread : but, God is to be worshipp'd : All men are not alike ; alas good neighbour !

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too sharp you.

Dogb. Gifts, that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir : our watch, sir, have, deed, comprehended two aspiring persons, and would have them this morning examined by your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bid me ; I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be suffigance.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go : fare you well.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give daughter to her husband.

Leon. I will wait upon them ; I am ready.

[Exit Leonato and Messenger.]
Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Friar Seacoal, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to gaol ; we are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant ; here's that [Touching his forehead] shall drive some of them to a non com : only get the learned wit to set down our excommunication, and meet 'er the gaol. [Exit]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The inside of a church.

Enter Don PEDRO, Don JOHN, LEONATO, Friar, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, HERO, and BEATRICE, &c.

Leon. Come, friar Francis, be brief ; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady ?

Claud. No.

Leon. To be married to her, friar ; you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count ?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero ?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count ?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none.

Claud. O, what men dare do ! what men may do ! what men daily do ! not knowing what they do !

Bene. How now ! Interjections ? Why, then some be of laughing, as, ha ! ha ! he !

Claud. Stand thee by, friar.—Father, by your leave ; Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter ?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claud. And what have I to give you back, whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift ?

D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.—

There, Leonato, take her back again ;

Give not this rotten orange to your friend ;

She's but the sign and semblance of her honour :—

Behold, how like a maid she blushes here :

O, what authority and show of truth

Can cunning sin cover itself withal !

Comes not that blood, as modest evidence,

To witness simple virtue ? Would you not swear,

All you that see her, that she were a maid,

By these exterior shows ? But she is none :

She knows the heat of a luxurious bed :

Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord ?

Claud. Not to be married,

Nor knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own part, have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginity,—

Claud. I know what you would say ; if I known her,

You'll say, she did embrace me as a husband And so extenuate the 'forehand sin :

No, Leonato,

I never tempted her with word too large ;

But, as a brother to his sister, show'd

Bashful sincerity, and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you ?

Claud. Out on thy seeming ! I will write again

You seem to me as Dian in her orb ;

As chaste as is the bud, ere it be blown ;

But you are more intemperate in your blood

Than Venus, or those pamp'ring animals,

That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my lord well that he doth speak so well

Leon. Sweet prince, why speak you not ?

D. Pedro. What should I say ?

I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about

To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken ? or do I but dream

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True, O God

Claud. Leonato, stand I here ?

Is this the prince ? Is this the prince's brother

Is this face Hero's ? Are our eyes our own ?

Leon. All this is so ; But what of this, my lord

Claud. Let me but move one question to

daughter ;

And, by that fatherly and kindly power

That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child

Hero. O God defend me ! how am I beset !—

What kind of catechizing call you this ?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name

Hero. Is it not Hero ? Who can blot that name

With any just reproach ?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero

Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.

What man was he talk'd with you yesternight

Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one ?

Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden

Leonato,

I am sorry you must hear ; Upon mine honour

If, my brother, and this griev'd count, see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
with a ruffian at her chamber-window;
hath, indeed, most like a liberal villain, us'd the vile encounters they have had unsand times in secret.

John. Fie, fie! they are to be nam'd, my lord, not to be spoke of;
is not chastity enough in language,
out offence, to utter them: Thus, pretty lady,
sorry for thy much misgovernment.
Hero. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been, if thy outward graces had been placed t' thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!
fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell, pure impiety, and impious purity!
hee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
in my eye-lids shall conjecture hang,
in all beauty into thoughts of harm,
never shall it more be gracious.

n. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?
[Hero swoons.]

f. Why, how now, cousin? wherefore sink you down?
John. Come, let us go: these things, come thus to light,
per her spirits up.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio.]
e. How doth the lady?

f. Dead, I think;—help, uncle;—
! why, Hero!—Uncle!—signior Benedick!—
friar!

n. O fate, take not away thy heavy hand!
is the fairest cover for her shame,
may be wish'd for.

f. How now, cousin Hero?
er. Have comfort, lady.

n. Dost thou look up?
er. Yea; Wherefore should she not?

n. Wherefore? Why, doth not every earthly thing hame upon her? Could she here deny story that is printed in her blood!—
st live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes:

sd I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
ght I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,
if would, on the rearward of reproaches, at thy life. Grief'd I, I had but one?

I for that at frugal nature's frame?
e too much by thee! Why had I one?
ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?

had I not, with charitable hand,
up a beggar's issue at my gates;
smirched thus, and mired with infamy,

ht have said, *No part of it is mine,
thame derives itself from unknown toins?*

sine, and mine, I lov'd; and mine, I prais'd;
nine, that I was proud on; mine so much,
I myself was to myself not mine,

ag of her; why, she—O, she is fallen pit of ink! that the wide sea drops too few to wash her clean again;

alt too little, which may season give r foul tainted flesh!

e. Sir, sir, be patient:
y part, I am so attir'd in wonder,
w not what to say.

f. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!
e. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?

f. No, truly, not; although, until last night,
e this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

n. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made,
h was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!
ld the two princes lie? and Claudio lie?

lar'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
'd it with tears? Hence from her; let her die.
e. Hear me a little;

have only been silent so long,
given way unto this course of fortune, oting of the lady: I have mark'd usand blushing apparitions start her face; a thousand innocent shames gel whiteness bear away those blushes;

in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
arn the errors, that these princes hold

Against her maiden truth:—Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest, that all the grace, that she hath left,
Is, that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury; she not denies it:

Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse
That, which appears in proper nakedness?

Friar. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know, that do accuse me; I know none!

If I know more of any man alive,
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy!—O my father,
Prove you, that any man with me convers'd

At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Friar. There is some strange misprision in the princes.

Bene. Two of them have the very best of honour;
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toil in frame of villanies.

Leon. I know not; If they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.

Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havock of my means,

Nor my bad life left me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,
Both strength of limb, and policy of mind,
Ability in means, and choice of friends,

To quit me of them thoroughly.
Friar. Pause a while,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.

Your daughter here the princes left for dead;
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:

Maintain a mourning ostentation;
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites,
That appertain unto a burial.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?

Friar. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her behalf Change slander to remorse; that is some good:
But not for that, dream I on this strange course,

But on this travail look for greater birth.
She, dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied and excus'd

Of every hearer: For it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being leek'd and lost,

Why, then we rack the value; then we find
The virtue, that possession would not show us
Whiles it was ours:—So will it fare with Claudio:

When he shall hear she died upon his words,
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination;

And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate, and full of life,

Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed:—then shall he mourn,
(If ever love had interest in his liver,)

And wish he had not so accus'd her;
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but success

Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this he levell'd false,
The supposition of the lady's death

Will quench the wonder of her infamy:
And, if it sort not well, you may conceal her
(As best befits her wounded reputation,)

In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though, you know, my inwardness and love

Is very much unto the prince and Claudio, Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly, and justly, as your soul
Should wish with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Friar. 'Tis well consented; presently away;
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.—

Come, lady, die to live: this wedding day, Perhaps, is but prolong'd; have patience, and endure. [Exeunt Friar, Hero, and Leonato.] Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?
Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.
Beat. You have no reason, I do it freely.
Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wroug'd.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me, that would right her!

Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.

Bene. May a man do it?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you; Is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not: It were as possible for me to say, I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not;
I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing:—I am sorry for my cousin.

Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.

Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it, that you love me; and I will make him eat it, that says, I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it:
I protest, I love thee.

Beat. Why then, God forgive me!

Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have staid me in a happy hour; I was about to protest, I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do any thing for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha! not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to deny it: Farewell.

Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here;—There is no love in you:—Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Bene. Beatrice,—

Beat. In faith, I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends first.

Beat. You dare easier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman!—O, that I were a man!—What! hear her in hand until they come to take hauds; and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me, Beatrice;—

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window!—a proper saying!

Bene. Nay but, Beatrice;—

Beat. Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.

Bene. Beat—

Beat. Princes, and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a goodly-count-confect; a sweet gallant, surely! O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake!
But manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and swears it:—I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice: By this hand, I love
thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the count Claudio hath wronged Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or a Bene. Enough, I am engaged, I will challehim; I will kiss your hand, and so leave you:
this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear accou-
As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, com-your cousin: I must say, she is dead; and farewell. [Exe.]

SCENE II.

A prison.

Enter DOGBERRY, VERGES, and Sexton gowns; and the Watch, with CONRADE BORACHIO.

Dogb. Is our whole dissembly appeared?

Verg. O, a stool and a cushion for the sexton Sexton. Which be the malefactors?

Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner.

Verg. Nay, that's certain; we have the exhibit to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are examined? let them come before master constable

Dogb. Yea, marry, let them come before me
What is your name, friend?

Bora. Borachio.

Dogb. Pray write down—Borachio.—You
sirrah?

Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name Conrade.

Dogb. Write down—master gentleman Con-
—Masters, do you serve God?

Con. Bora. Yea, sir, we hope.

Dogb. Write down—that they hope they:
God:—and write God first; for God defend God should go before such villains!—Masters, proved already, that you are little better than knaves; and it will go near to be thought so How answer you for yourselves?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure but I will go about with him.—Come you hi sirrah; a word in your ear, sir; I say to you, thought you are false knaves.

Bora. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside.—Fore God, the both in a tale: Have you writ down—that are none.

Sexton. Master constable, you go not the way examine; you must call forth the watch that their accusers.

Dogb. Yea, marry, that's the efiest way:—
the watch come forth:—Masters, I charge you the prince's name, accuse these men.

1 Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down—prince John a villai Why this is flat perjury, to call a prince's br-—villain.

Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, fellow, peace; I do not thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

2 Watch. Marry, that he had received a thouducats of Don John, for accusing the lady wrongfully.

Dogb. Flat burglary, as ever was committed Verg. Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton. What else, fellow?

1 Watch. And that count Claudio did upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the assembly, and not marry her.

Dogb. O villain! thou wilt be condemned everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

2 Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more, masters, than you deny. Prince John is this morning secretly s-away; Hero was in this manner accused, in very manner refused, and upon the grief of suddenly died.—Master constable, let these be bound, and brought to Leonato's; I will go fore, and show him their examination.

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in band.

bn. Off, coxcomb!
ogb. God's my life! where's the sexton? let write down—the prince's officer, coxcomb.—
 e, bind them:—Thou naughty varlet!
on. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.
ogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost
 I not suspect my years?—O that he were here write me down—an ass!—but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written n, yet forget not that I am an ass:—No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more,

 a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to;
 and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him:—Bring him away. O, that I had been writ down—an ass! [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Before Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

nt. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself;
 'tis not wisdom, thus to second grief
 inst yourself.
an. I pray thee, cease thy counsel, ich falls into mine ears as profitless water in a sieve: give not me counsel;
 let no comforter delight mine ear,
 such a one, whose wrongs do suit with mine.
 g me a father, that so lov'd his child,
 see joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine,
 bid him speak of patience;
 sure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
 let it answer every strain for strain;
 us for thus, and such a grief for such,
 very lineament, branch, shape, and form:
 ch a one will smile, and stroke his beard;
 —sorrow, wag! and hem, when he should groan;
 h grief with proverbs; make misfortune drunk
 a candle-wasters; bring him, yet to me,
 I of him will gather patience.
 there is no such man: For, brother, men counsel, and speak comfort to that grief, ch they themselves not feel; but, tasting it,
 r counsel turns to passion, which before ld give preceptual medicine to rage,
 r strong madness in a silken thread,
 m ach with air, and agony with words:
 no; 'tis all men's office to speak patience
 ose that wring under the load of sorrow;
 o man's virtue, nor sufficiency,
 e so moral, when he shall endure like himself: therefore give me no counsel:
 riefs cry louder than advertisement.
t. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
n. I pray thee, peace: I will be flesh and blood;
 there was never yet philosopher,
 could endure the tooth-ach patiently;
 ever they have writ the style of gods,
 made a pish at chance and sufferance.
t. Yet heed not all the harm upon yourself:
 those, that do offend you, suffer too.
n. There thou speak'st reason: nay, I will do so:
 uld doth tell me, Hero is belied;
 that shall Claudio know, so shall the prince,
 all of them, that thus dishonour her.

Enter Don PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

t. Here comes the prince, and Claudio, hastily.
Pedro. Good den, good den.
aud. Good day to both of you.
m. Hear you, my lords,— Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.
n. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well, my lord:—
 ou so hasty now?—well, all is one.
Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.
t. If he could right himself with quarreling, e of us would lie low.
nd. Who wrongs him?
arry,
 , thou dost wrong me; thou dissembler, thou:—
 , never lay thy hand upon thy sword, r thee not.
nd. Marry, beshrew my hand, should give your age such cause of fear:—

In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leon. Tush, tush, man, never flier and jest at me:
 I speak not like a dotard, nor a fool;
 As, under privilege of age, to brag
 What I have done being young, or what would do,
 Were I not old: Know, Claudio, to thy head,
 Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and me,
 That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by;
 And, with grey hairs, and bruise of many days,
 Do challenge thee to trial of a man.
I say, thou hast belied mine innocent child;
 Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
 And she lies buried with her ancestors:
 O! in a tomb, where never scandal slept,
 Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villany.
Claud. My villany?
Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine, I say,
D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.
Leon. My lord, my lord,
 I'll prove it on his body, if he dare;
 Despite his nice fence, and his active practice,
 His May of youth, and bloom of lustyhood.
Claud. Away, I will not have to do with you.
Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd my child;
 If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Claud. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed:
 But that's no matter; let him kill one first:—
 Win me and wear me,—let him answer me,—
 Come, follow me, boy; come, boy, follow me:
 Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence;
 Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.
Leon. Brother,—
Ant. Content yourself: God knows, I lov'd my niece,
 And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains;
 That dare as well answer a man, indeed,
 As I dare take a serpent by the tongue:
 Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!—
Leon. Brother Antony,— Ant. Hold you content; What, man! I know them, yea,
 And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple:
 Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring boys,
 That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander,
 Go anticly, and show outward hideousness,
 And speak off half a dozen dangerous words,
 How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
 And this is all.
Leon. But, brother Antony,— Ant. Come, 'tis no matter;
 Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.
D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.
 My heart is sorry for your daughter's death;
 But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing—
 But what was true, and very full of proof.
Leon. My lord, my lord,—
D. Pedro. I will not hear you.
Leon. No?
 Brother, away:—I will be heard;—
Ant. And shall,
 Or some of us will smart for it.
 [Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.]
 Enter BENEDECK.
D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seek.
Claud. Now, signior! what news?
Bens. Good day, my lord.
D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: You are almost come to part almost a fray.

Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapt off with two old men without teeth.

D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother: What thinkest thou? Had we fought, I doubt, we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour. I came to seek you both.

Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away: Wilt thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard: Shall I draw it?

D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit.—I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale:—Art thou sick, or angry?

Claud. What! courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, an you charge it against me:—I pray you, choose another subject.

Claud. Nay, then, give him another staff; this last was broke cross.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more; I think, he be angry indeed.

Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Claud. God bless me from a challenge!

Bene. You are a villain;—I jest not:—I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare:—Do me right, or I will protest your cowardice. You have kill'd a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you:—Let me hear from you.

Claud. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast? a feast?

Claud. I'faith, I thank him; he hath bid me to a calf's head and a capon; the which, if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught.—Shall I not find a woodcock too?

Bene. Sir, your wit ambles well; it goes easily.

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee, how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day: I said thou hadst a fine wit; True, says she, a fine little one: No, said I, a great wit; Right, says she, a great gross one: Nay, said I, a good wit; Just, said she, it hurts nobody: Nay, said I, the gentleman is wise; Certain, said she, a wise gentleman: Nay, said I, he hath the tongues; That I believe, said she, for he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forswore on Tuesday morning; there's a double tongue; there's two tongues. Thus did she, an hour together, trans-shape thy particular virtues; yet, at last, she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily, and said, she cared not.

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; but yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly: the old man's daughter told us all.

Claud. All, all; and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

Claud. Yea, and text underneath, Here dwells Benedick the married man.

Bene. Fare you well, boy; you know my mind; I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour: you break jests as braggarts do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not.—My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you: I must discontinue your company: your brother, the bastard, is fled from Messina: you have, among you, killed a sweet and innocent lady: For my lord Lack-beard, there, he and I shall meet; and till then, peace be with him. [Exit Benedick.]

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and, I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee?

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off wit!

Enter DOGBERRY, VERGES, and the Watch with CONRADE and BORACHIO.

Claud. He is then a giant to an ape: but the an ape a doctor to such a man.

D. Pedro. But, soft you, let be; pluck up, heart, and be sad! Did he not say, my bro was fled?

Dogb. Come, you, sir; if justice cannot t you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in balance: nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite o you must be looked to.

D. Pedro. How now, two of my brother's: bound! Borachio, one!

Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord!

D. Pedro. Officers, what offence have these done?

Dogb. Marry, sir, they have committed false port; moreover, they have spoken untruths; conardly, they are slanders: sixth and lastly, I have belied a lady; thirdly, they have ver unjust things: and, to conclude, they are knaves.

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own divi and, by my troth, there's one meaning well su

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to answer; do you hear me, and let this count me. I have deceived even your very eyes: your wisdoms could not discover, these shafts fools have brought to light; who, in the overheard me confessing to this man, how John your brother incensed me to slander the Hero; how you were brought into the orchard saw me court Margarett in Hero's garments; you disgraced her, when you should marry my villany they have upon record; which I rather seal with my death, than repeat over to shame: the lady is dead upon mine and my ter's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire not but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron thro your blood?

SCENE II.

Leonato's garden.

BENEDICK and MARGARET, meeting.

an. Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, de-well at my hands, by helping me to the h of Beatrice.

arg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise
y beauty ?

an. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man
g shall come over it ; for, in most comely truth, deservest it.

arg. To have no man come over me ? why,
I always keep below stairs ?

an. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's
th, it catches.

Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret, it will not hurt a woman ; and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice :
I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice ; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who, I think, hath legs. [Exit Margaret.

Bene. And therefore will come.

The god of love, [Singing.

That sits above,

And knows me, and knows me,

How pitiful I deserve,—

I mean, in singing ; but in loving,—Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pan-dars, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love : Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme ; I have tried ; I can find out no rhyme to lady but baby, an innocent rhyme ; for scorn, horn, a hard rhyme ; for school, fool, a babbling rhyme ; very ominous endings : No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.—

Enter BEATRICE.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come, when I called
thee ?

Beat. Yea, signior, and depart, when you bid me.

Bene. O, stay but till then !

Beat. Then, is spoken ; fare you well now :—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words ; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome ; therefore I will depart unkissed.

Bene. Thou hast frightened the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit : But, I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge ; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me ?

Beat. For them altogether ; which maintained so politick a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me ?

Bene. Suffer love ; a good epithet ! I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think ; alas ! poor heart ! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours ; for I will never love that, which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession : there's not one wise man among twenty, that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours : if a man do not erect in this age his own tomb, ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument, than the bell rings, and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you ?

Bene. Question !—Why, an hour in clamour, and a quarter in rheum : Therefore it is most expedient for the wise, (if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary,) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself : So much for praising myself, (who, I myself will bear witness, is praise-worthy,) and now tell me, How doth your cousin ?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you ?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend : there will
I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle's; yonder's old coil at home: it is proved, my lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the Prince and Claudio mightily abused; and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and, moreover, I will go with thee to thy uncle's. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The inside of a church.

Enter Don PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and Attendants, with musick and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Atten. It is, my lord.

Claud. [Reads from a scroll.]

Done to death by slanderous tongues

Was the Hero, that here lies:

Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,

Gives her fame, which never dies:

So the life, that died with shame,

Lives in death with glorious fame.

Hang thou there upon the tomb, [Affixing it.]
Praising her when I am dumb.—

Now, musick, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

SONG.

Pardon, Goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our moan;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Graves, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good night!
Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters; put your torches out,
The wolves have prey'd; and look, the gentle day,

Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leave us; fare you well.

Claud. Good morrow, masters; each his several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds;

And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And, Hymen, now with luckier issue speed 's,

Than this, for whom we render'd up this woe! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Leonato's house.

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, BENEDICK, BEATRICE, URSULA, Friar, and HERO.

Friar. Did I not tell you, she was innocent?

Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus'd her

Upon the error, that you heard debated:

But Margaret was in some fault for this;

Although against her will, as it appears

In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforce'd

To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentewomen all,

Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves;

And, when I send for you, come hither mask'd;

The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour

To visit me:—You know your office, brother;

You must be father to your brother's daughter,

And give her to young Claudio. [Exeunt Ladies.]

Ant. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.

Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think

Friar. To do what, signior?

Bene. To bind me, or undo me, one of them

Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

Leon. That eye my daughter lent her; 'Tis true.

Bene. And I do with an eye of love requite

Leon. The sight whereof, I think, you had from From Claudio, and the prince; But what's will?

Bene. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But for my will, my will is, your good will

May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin'd
In the estate of honourable marriage;—

In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.

And all Europa shall rejoice at thee;

As once Europa did at lusty Jove,

When he would play the noble beast in love.

And some such strange bold leap'd your father's

And got a calf in that same noble feat,

Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Re-enter ANTONIO, with the Ladies mask

Claud. For this I owe you: here come

Which is the lady I must seize upon?

Ant. This same is she, and I do give you see your face.

Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take

Before this friar, and swear to marry her.

Hero. Nothing certain:—

And, surely as I live, I am a maid.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify;

When, after that the holy rites are ended,

I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death:

here's a paper, written in his hand, containing sonnet of his own pure brain, inscribed to Beatrice.

ro. And here's another, in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket, containing her affection unto Benedick.

ne. A miracle! here's our own hands against hearts!—Come, I will have thee; but, by this I take thee for pity.

of. I would not deny you;—but, by this good I yield upon great persuasion; and, partly, to your life, for I was told you were in a condition.

ne. Peace, I will stop your mouth.—

[Kissing her.]

Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick the married man?

ne. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of rackers cannot flout me out of my humour: thou think I care for a satire, or an epigram? if a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome about him: In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped, thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends:—let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Bene. First, o' my word; therefore, play, musick.—Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow; I'll devise thee brave punishments for him.—Strike up, pipers.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

An apartment in the Duke's palace.

Enter DUKE, ESCALUS, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke. Escalus—

Escal. My lord.

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold,
 Would seem in me to affect speech and discourse;
 Since I am put to know, that your own science
 Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice
 My strength can give you: Then no more remains
 But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
 And let them work. The nature of our people,
 Our city's institutions, and the terms
 For common justice, you are as pregnant in,
 As art and practice hath enriched any
 That we remember: There is our commission,
 From which we would not have you warp.—Call
 hither,

I say, bid come before us Angelo.—

[Exit an Attendant.]

What figure of us think you he will bear?
 For you must know, we have with special soul
 Elected him our absence to supply;
 Lent him our terror, dress'd him with our love;
 And given his deputation all the organs
 Of our own power: What think you of it?

Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth
 To undergo such ample grace and honour,
 It is lord Angelo.

Enter ANGELO.

Duke. Look, where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will,
 I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo,
 There is a kind of character in thy life,
 That, to the observer, doth thy history
 Fully unfold: Thyself and thy belongings
 Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
 Thyself upon thy virtues, them on thee.
 Heaven doth with us, as we with torches do;
 Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues
 Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
 As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd,
 But to fine issues: nor nature never lends
 The smallest scruple of her excellence,
 But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor,
 Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech
 To one, that can my part in him advertise;
 Hold therefore, Angelo;
 In our remove, be thou at full yourself;

Mortality and mercy in Vienna
 Live in thy tongue and heart: Old Escalus, Though first in question, is thy secondary:
 Take thy commission.

Ang. Now, good my lord,
 Let there be some more test made of my metal,
 Before so noble and so great a figure
 Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion:
 We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice
 Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.
 Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
 That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestio'd Matters of needful value. We shall write to you
 As time and our concerns shall importune,
 How it goes with us; and do look to know
 What doth befall you here. So, fare you well,
 To the hopeful execution do I leave you
 Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet, give leave, my lord,
 That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it;
 Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
 With any scruple: your scope is as mine own;
 So to enforce, or qualify the laws,
 As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand
 I'll privily away: I love the people,
 But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
 Though it do well, I do not relish well
 Their loud applause, and aves vehement;
 Nor do I think the man of safe discretion,
 That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes!

Escal. Let's forth, and bring you back in happiness!

Duke. I thank you: Fare you well. [Exit.]
Escal. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
 To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
 To look into the bottom of my place:
 A power I have; but of what strength and nature
 I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me:—Let us withdraw together,
 And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

Escal. I'll wait upon your honour. [Exit.]

2 Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2 Gent. Thou shalt not steal?

Lucio. Ay, that he razed.

1 Gent. Why, 'twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions; they put forth to steal: There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition well, that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for, I think, thou never wast where grace was said.

2 Gent. No! a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What! in metre!

Lucio. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any religion.

Lucio. Ay! why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: As for example; Thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.

1 Gent. Well, there went but a pair of sheers between us.

Lucio. I grant; as there may between the lists and the velvet; Thou art the list.

1 Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good velvet; thou art a three-pil'd piece, I warrant thee: I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as be ill'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.

1 Gent. I think I have done myself wrong; have not!

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art sinned or free.

Lucio. Behold, behold, where madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—

2 Gent. To what, I pray?

1 Gent. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars a-year.

1 Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me: art thou art full of error; I am sound.

Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy; but o sound, as things that are hollow: thy bones are allow; impiety has made a feast of thee.

Enter Bawd.

1 Gent. How now! Which of your hips has the most profound sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well; there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of us all.

1 Gent. Who's that, I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, signior Claudio.

1 Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know, 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head's to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not ave it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting madam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised to see me two hours since; and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something ear to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.

Lucio. Away; let's go learn the truth of it.

[Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen.]

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with the veat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk. How now? what's the news with you?

Enter Clown.

Clow. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well; what has he done?

Clow. A woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Clow. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

Bawd. What, is there a maid with child by him?

Clow. No; but there's a woman with maid by him!

You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Clow. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down.

Bawd. And what shall become of those in the city?

Clow. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pull'd down?

Clow. To the ground, mistress.

Bawd. Why, here's a change, indeed, in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?

Clow. Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade; I'll be your tapster still.

Courage; there will be pity taken on you: you, that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Bawd. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's withdraw.

Clow. Here comes signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison: and there's madam Juliet.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same.

Enter Provost, CLAUDIO, JULIET, and Officers, LUCIO, and two Gentlemen.

Clawd. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world?

Beat me to prison, where I am committed.

Prov. I do it not in evil disposition,

But from lord Angelo by special charge.

Clawd. Thus can the demi-god, Authority,

Make us pay down for our offence by weight.—

The words of heaven;—on whom it will, it will;

On whom it will not, so; yet still 'tis just.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Clawd. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:

As surfeit is the father of much fast,

So every scope by the immoderate use

Turns to restraint: Our natures do pursue

(Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,)

A thirsty evil; and, when we drink, we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest,

I would send for certain of my creditors: And yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedom, as the morality of imprisonment.—What's thy offence, Claudio?

Clawd. What, but to speak of, would offend again.

Lucio. What is it? murder?

Clawd. No.

Lucio. Lechery?

Clawd. Call it so.

Prov. Away, sir; you must go.

Clawd. One word, good friend:—Lucio, a word with you. [Taking him aside.]

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.—

Is lechery so look'd after?

Clawd. Thus stands it with me:—Upon a true contract

I got possession of Julietta's bed;

You know the lady; she is fast my wife,

Save that we do the denunciation lack

Of outward order: this we came not to,

Only for propagation of a dower

Remaining in the coffer of her friends;

From whom we thought it meet to hide our love,

Till time had made them for us. But it chanced,

The stealth of our most mutual entertainment,

With character too gross, is writ on Juliet.

Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Clawd. Unhappily, even so.

And the new deputy now for the duke,—

Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness;

Or whether that the body public be

A horse, whereon the governor doth ride,

Who, newly in the seat, that it may know

He can command, lets it straight feel the spur:
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up,
I stagger in:—But this new governor
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties,
Which have, like unscour'd armour, hung by the wall

So long, that nineteen zodiacks have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and, for a name,
Now puts the drowsy and neglected act
Freshly on me.—'tis surely, for a name.

Lucio. I warrant, it is: and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milk-maid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, but he's not to be found.
I pry'thee, Lucio, do me this kind service:
This day my sister should the cloister enter,
And there receive her approbation:
Acquaint her with the danger of my state;
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him;
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and speechless dialect,
Such as moves men; beside, she hath prosperous
art,

When she will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray, she may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition; as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I'll to her.

Claud. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours,—

Claud. Come, officer, away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A monastery.

Enter DUKE and Friar Thomas.

Duke. No; holy father; throw away that thought;
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a complete bosom: why I desire thee
To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than you How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd;
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,
Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps.
I have delivered to lord Angelo (A man of stricture, and firm abstinence,) my absolute power and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travell'd to Poland;
For so I have strew'd it in the common ear,
And so it is receiv'd: Now, pious sir,
You will demand of me, why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes, and most biting laws,

(The needful bits and curbs for headstrong steeds,) which for these fourteen years we have let sleep;
Even like an o'er-grown lion in a cave,
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond fathers
Having bound up the threatening twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their children's sight,
For terror, not to use; in time the rod Becomes more mock'd, than fear'd: so our decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead;
And liberty plucks justice by the nose;
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your grace

To unloose this tied-up justice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd,
Than in lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike, and gall them
For what I hid them do: For we bid this be done,
When evil deeds have their permissive pass,
And not the punishment. Therefore, indeed, my father,

I have on Angelo impos'd the office;

Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike
And yet my nature never in the sight,
To do it slander: And to behold his sway,
I will, as 'twere a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people: therefore, I pr'
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar. More reasons for this act:
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one:—Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: Hence shall we
If power change purpose, what our seemers
[Exeunt.]

Enter ISABELLA and FRANCISCA.

Isab. And have you nuns no further privi-

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be; as those Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stead

As bring me to the sight of Isabella,

A novice of this place, and the fair sister

To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Isab. Why her unhappy brother? let me see

The rather, for I now must make you know

I am that Isabella, and his sister.

Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother

grets you:

Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.

Isab. Woe me! For what?

Lucio. For that which, if myself might be his

He should receive his punishment in thanks

He hath got his friend with child.

Isab. Sir, make me not your story.

Lucio. It is tru

Lucio. Is she your cousin?

Isab. Adoptedly; as school-maids change names,

By vain though apt affection.

Lucio. She it is.

Isab. O, let him marry her!

Lucio. This is the pe

The duke is very strangely gone from hence

Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,

In hand, and hope of action: but we do lear

By those, that know the very nerves of state, givings out were of an infinite distance on his true-meant design. Upon his place, I with full line of his authority, seems lord Angelo; a man, whose blood very snow-broth; one who never feels wanton stings and motions of the sense; doth rebate and blunt his natural edge

 th' profits of the mind, study and fast.
 (to give fear to use and liberty, mice by lions,) hath pick'd out an act,

 business 'twixt you and your poor brother.
Isab. Doth he so seek his life?
Lucio. Has censur'd him lady; and, as I hear, the provost hath

A warrant for his execution.
Isab. Alas! what poor ability's in me
 To do him good?

Lucio. Assay the power you have.
Isab. My power! Alas! I doubt,— Lucio. Our doubts are traitors,
 And make us lose the good we oft might win,
 By fearing to attempt: Go to lord Angelo,
 And let him learn to know, when maidens sue,
 Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,
 All their petitions are as freely theirs
 As they themselves would owe them.
Isab. I'll see what I can do.
Lucio. But, speedily.
Isab. I will about it straight;
 No longer staying but to give the mother
 Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you:
 Commend me to my brother: soon at night
 I'll send him certain word of my success.
Lucio. I take my leave of you.
Isab. Good sir, adieu. [Exeunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A hall in Angelo's house.

ANGELO, ESCALUS, a Justice, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scare-crow of the law,
 ing it up to fear the birds of prey, let it keep one shape, till custom make it in perch, and not their terror.

Isab. Ay, but yet us be keen, and rather cut a little,
 n fall, and bruise to death: Alas! this gentleman, om I would save, had a most noble father.
 but your honour know,

hom I believe to be most strait in virtue,
 t, in the working of your own affections,
 l time coher'd with place, or place with wishing,
 that the resolute acting of your blood
 ld have attain'd the effect of your own purpose, ether you had not sometime in your life
 'd in this point, which now you censure him, pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus, ther thing to fall. I not deny, jury, passing on the prisoner's life,
 ' in the sworn twelve, have a thief or two tier than him they try: What's open made to justice,

: justice seizes. What know the laws,
 : thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant, jewel that we find, we stoop and take it,
 use we see it; but what we do not see,
 tread upon, and never think of it, may not so extenuate his offence,
 n I, that censure him, do so offend,
 mine own judgment pattern out my death,
 nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.
Isab. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the provost?
 ve. Here, if it like your honour.

Ang. See, that Claudio executed by nine to-morrow morning:
 g him his confessor, let him be prepar'd;
 that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

[Exit Provost.
Isab. Well, heaven forgive him! and forgive us all!
 e rise by sin, and some by virtue fall:
 e run from brakes of vice, and answer none;
 some condemned for a fault alone.

ELBOW, FROTH, Clown, Officers, &c.

Isab. Come, bring them away: if these be good e in a common-weal, that do nothing but use
 : abuses in common houses, I know no law;
 g them away.

Ang. How now, sir! What's your name? and t's the matter?

Isab. If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors? Well; what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: but precise villains they are, that I am sure of; and void of all profanation in the world, that good christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well; here's a wise officer.

Ang. Go to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Elb. He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir?

Elb. He, sir? a tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, sir, was,
 as they say, pluck'd down in the suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour,—

Escal. How! thy wife?

Elb. Ay, sir; whom, I thank heaven, is an honest woman,—

Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, constable?

Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleaniness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elb. Ay, sir, by mistress Overdone's means: but as she spit in his face, so she defied him.

Clow. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Escal. Do you hear how he misplaces?

[To Angelo.

Clow. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing (saving your honour's reverence,) for stew'd prunes; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some three-pence; your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escal. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, sir.

Clow. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great-belly'd, and longing, as I said, for prunes;
 and having but two in the dish, as I said, master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly;—for, as you know, master Froth, I could not give you three-pence again.

Froth. No, indeed. K

Clo. Very well: you being then, if you be remember'd, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes.

Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Clo. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remember'd, that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Froth. All this is true.

Clo. Why, very well then.

Escal. Come, you are a tedious fool: to the purpose. What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave: And, I beseech you, look into master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a year; whose father died at Hallowmas:—Was't not at Hallowmas, master Froth?

Froth. All-holland eve.

Clo. Why, very well; I hope here be truths: He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir;—'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit: Have you not?

Froth. I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter.

Clo. Why, very well then;—I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave, And leave you to the hearing of the cause; Hoping, you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Escal. I think no less: Good morrow to your lordship.

[Exit Angelo.]

Now, sir, come on: What was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Clo. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escal. Well, sir: What did this gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face:—Good master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose: Doth your honour mark his face?

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Escal. Well, I do so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Escal. Why, no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a hook, his face is the worst thing about him: Good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right: Constable, what say you to it?

Elb. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest, wicked varlet: the time is yet to come, that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Escal. Which is the wiser here? Justice, or Iniquity?—Is this true?

Elb. O thou caitiff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer!—Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escal. If he took you a box o' the ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for it: What is't your worship's pleasure I should do with this wicked caitiff?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it:—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come unto thee; thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Escal. Where were you born, friend? [To Fr Froth.] Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, and't please you, sir.

Escal. So.—What trade are you of, sir?

[To the Clo

Clo. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Escal. Your mistress's name?

Clo. Mistress Over-done.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir; Over-done by the last.

Escal. Nine!—Come hither to me, master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquaint with tapsters; they will draw you, master Froth, and you will hang them: Get you gone, and me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship: For mine own part I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I drawn in.

Escal. Well; no more of it, master Froth: I'll well. [Exit Froth.]—Come you hither to me, master tapster; what's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Escal. What else?

Clo. Bum, sir.

Escal. 'Tis Froth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the beastliest sense, you Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a ha Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not? come, tell me true; it shall be better for you.

Clo. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow, that would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? by a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey: it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and scall the youth in the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will then: If your worship will take order for the dogs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning, I tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend away but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads. If this hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it, after three pence a bay: If you live to this come to pass, say, Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey; and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you,—I advise you let me not find you before me again upon complaint whatsoever, no, not for dwelling with you; if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you; in parting, Pompey, I shall have you whipt: so this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your worship for your good counsel but I shall follow it, as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me? No, no; let carman whip his jade; The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade.

Escal. Come hither to me, master Elbow; come hither, master Constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by your readiness in the office you had continued in it some time: You say, seven years together?

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas! it hath been great pains to you: They do you wrong to put you so off upon't: there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it.

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me; I do it for some piece of money, and through with all.

Escal. Look you, bring me in the names of six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish:

Is. To your worship's house, sir?
scat. To my house: Fare you well. [Exit me.] What's o'clock, think you?
ust. Eleven, sir.
scat. I pray you home to dinner with me.
ust. I humbly thank you.
scat. It grieves me for the death of Claudio;
 there's no remedy.
ust. Lord Angelo is severe.
scat. It is but needful:
 'ry is not itself, that oft looks so;
 'don is still the nurse of second woe;
 yet,—Poor Claudio!—There's no remedy.
 ne, sir. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another room in the same.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

rov. He's hearing of a cause; he will come straight.
 tell him of you.
rov. Pray you, do. [Exit Servant.] I'll know pleasure; may be, he will relent: Alas, hath not as offended in a dream!
 sects, all ages smack of this vice; and he die for it!

Enter ANGELO.

ng. Now, what's the matter, provost?
rov. Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?
ng. Did I not tell thee, yea? hadst thou not order'd thy dost thou ask again?
rov. Lest I might be too rash:
 ler your good correction, I have seen, en, after execution, judgment hath ented o'er his doom.
ng. Go to; let that be mine:
 you your office, or give up your place,
 I you shall well be spar'd.
rov. I crave your honour's pardon.—
 at shall be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet?
 's very near her hour.
ng. Dispose of her some more fitter place; and that with speed.

Re-enter Servant.

rov. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd, sires access to you.
ng. Hath he a sister?
rov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid, k to be shortly of a sisterhood,
 ot already.
ng. Well, let her be admitted.
 you, the fornicatress be remov'd;
 her have needful, but not lavish, means;
 re shall be order for it.

Enter LUCIO and ISABELLA.

rov. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.]
ng. Stay a little while.—[To Isab.] You are welcome: What's your will?
ab. I am a woeful suitor to your honour, ase but your honour hear me.
ng. Well; what's your suit?
ab. There is a vice, that most I do abhor,
 I most desire should meet the blow of justice;
 which I would not plead, but that I must;
 which I must not plead, but that I am war, 'twixt will, and will not.
ng. Well; and the matter?
ab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die:
 beseech you, let it be his fault,
 I not my brother.
rov. Heaven give thee moving graces!
ng. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it!
 ry, every fault's condemn'd, ere it be done:
 ac were the very cipher of a function,
 find the faults, whose fine stands in record,
 I let go by the actor.
ab. O just, but severe law!
 ad a brother then.—Heaven keep your honour!
 ucio. [To Isab.] Give't not o'er so: to him again, intreat him;
 sel down before him, hang upon his gown;

You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
 You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
 To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy.

Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him,
 And neither heaven, nor man, grieve at the mercy.
Ang. I will not do't.

Isab. But can you, if you would?

Ang. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isab. But might you do't, and do the world no wrong,

If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse
 As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentenc'd; 'tis too late.

Lucio. You are too cold. [To Isabella.]

Isab. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word,
 May call it back again: Well believe this,
 No ceremony that to great ones 'longs,
 Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
 The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
 Become them with one half so good a grace,
 As mercy does. If he had been as you,
 And you as he, you would have slept like him;
 But he, like you, would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you, begone.

Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency,
 And you were Isabel! should it then be thus?
 No; I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,
 And what a prisoner.

Lucio. Ay, touch him: there's the vein. [Aside.]

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
 And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas! alas!

Why, all the souls, that were, were forfeit once;
 And He, that might the vantage best have took,
 Found out the remedy: How would you be,
 If He, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are? O, think on that;
 And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
 Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid;

It is the law, not I, condemns your brother:
 Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
 It should be thus with him;—he must die to-morrow.

Isab. To-morrow? O, that's sudden! Spare him, spare him:

He's not prepar'd for death! Even for our kitchens
 We kill the fowl of season; shall we serve heaven
 With less respect than we do minister To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink
 you:

Who is it, that hath died for this offence?
 There's many have committed it.

Lucio. Ay, well said.

Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:

Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
 If the first man, that did the edict infringe,
 Had answer'd for his deed: now, 'tis awake;
 Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,
 Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils, (Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv'd,
 And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,)
 Are now to have no successive degrees,
 But, where they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.

Ang. I show it roost of all, when I show justice;
 For then I pity those I do not know,
 Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall;
 And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,
 Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
 Your brother dies to-morrow; be content.

Isab. So you must be the first, that gives this sentence;

And he, that suffers: O, it is excellent
 To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
 To use it like a giant.

Lucio. That's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder
 As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
 For every pelting, petty officer,
 Would use his heaven for thunder; nothing but thunder.—
 Merciful heaven!

Thou rather, with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,
Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle;—O, but man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority;
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastick tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. O, to him, to him, wench: he will relent;
He's coming, I perceive't.

Prov. Pray heaven, she win him!
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with ourself:
Great men may jest with saints: 'tis wit in them;
But, in the less, foul profanation.

Lucio. Thou'rt in the right, girl; more o' that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio. Art advis'd o' that? more on't.

Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
Isab. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That skins the vice o' the top: Go to your hosom;
Knock there; and ask your heart, what it doth know,
That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.

Ang. She speaks, and 'tis Such sense, that my sense breeds with it.—Fare you well.

Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back.

Ang. I will bethink me:—come again to-morrow.

Isab. Hark, how I'll bribe you: Good my lord, turn back.

Ang. How! bribe me?

Isab. Ay, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.

Lucio. You had marr'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond shekels of the tested gold,
Or stones, whose rates are either rich, or poor,
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there,
Ere sun-rise; prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal. *

Ang. Well: come to me
To-morrow.

Lucio. Go to; it is well; away. [Aside to Isabella.]

Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!

Ang. Amen: for I Am that way going to temptation, [Aside.]

Isab. At what hour to-morrow Shall I attend your lordship?

Ang. At any time 'fore noon.

Isab. Save your honour!
[Exeunt Lucio, Isabella, and Provost.]

Ang. From thee; even from thy virtue!—
What's this? what's this? Is this her fault, or mine?
The tempter, or the tempted, who sins most? Ha!
Not she; nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That lying by the violet, in the sun,
Do, as the carrion does, not as the flower, Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary,
And pitch our evils there? O, fie, fie, fie!
What dost thou? or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her foully, for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live:
Thieves for their robbery have authority,
When judges steal themselves. What? do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again,
And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream on?
O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook! Most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin in loving virtue: never could the strumpet,
With all her double vigour, art, and nature,
Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite;—Ever, till now,
When men were fond, I smil'd, and wonder'd how.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.

A room in a prison.

Enter DUKE, habited like a Friar, and Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost! so, I think you Prov. I am the provost: What's your will,
friar?

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my bless'd
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: do me the common right—
To let me see them; and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that, if more needful.

Enter JULIET.

Look, here comes one; a gentlewoman of mine
Who falling in the flames of her own youth,
Hath blister'd her report: She is with child;
And he, that got it, sentenc'd: a young man
More fit to do another such offence,
Than die for this.

Duke. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.—
I have provided for you; stay a while, [To Juliet.]
And you shall be conducted.

Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you call Juliet. I do; and bear the shame most patient.

Duke. I'll teach you how you shall arraign conscience,

And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.

Juliet. I'll gladly learn.

Duke. Love you the man, that wrong'd you Juliet. Yes, as I love the woman, that wrong'd you.

Duke. So then, it seems, your most offence
Was mutually committ'd?

Juliet. Mutually.

Duke. Then was your sin of heavier kind than Juliet. I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter: But lest you repent,

As that the sin hath brought you to this shair
Which sorrow is always toward ourselves
heaven;

Showing, we'd not spare heaven, as we love it
But as we stand in fear,—

Juliet. I do repent me, as it is an evil;

And take the shame with joy.

Duke. There rest.

Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him.—
Grace go with you! Benedicite!

Juliet. Must die to-morrow! O, injurious!
That respites me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror!

Prov.

'Tis pity of him. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Angelo's house.

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I find pray

To several subjects: heaven hath my empty
Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Isabel: Heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew its name;
And in my heart, the strong and swelling ev
Of my conception: The state whereon I studi
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown fear'd and tedious; yea, my gravity,
Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride,
Could I, with boot, change for an idle plume,
Which the air beats for vain. O place! O
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser soul
To thy false seeming! Blood, thou still art bl Let's write good angel on the devil's horn,
'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

How now, who's there?

Serv. One Isabel, a sister, Desires access to you.

g. Teach her the way. [Exit Serv.] avens!
 Does my blood thus muster to my heart;
 as both it unable for itself, dispossessing all my other parts necessary fitness?
 ay the foolish throngs with one that swoons;
 all to help him, and so stop the air, which he should revive: and even so general, subject to a well-wish'd king, their own part, and in obsequious fondness d to his presence, where their untaught love needs appear offence.

Enter ISABELLA.

now, fair maid!

h. I am come to know your pleasure.
 g. That you might know it, would much better
 please me, to demand what 'tis. Your brother cannot live.

h. Even so!—Heaven keep your honour!

g. Yet may he live a while; and, it may be, as long as you, or I: Yet he must die.

h. Under your sentence?

g. Yes.

h. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve, or, or shorter, he may be so fitted,
 his soul sicken not.

g. Ha! Fie, these filthy vices! It were as good r'don him that hath from nature stolen already made, as to remit saucy sweetness that do coin heaven's image, mps that are forbid: 'tis all as easy ly to take away a life true made, put mettle in restrained means,
 like a false one.

h. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.
 g. Say you so? then I shall pose you quickly.
 h. Had you rather, That the most just law took your brother's life; or, to redeem him, up your body to such sweet uncleanness,
 e that he hath stain'd?

g. Sir, believe this,

rather give my body than my soul.

h. I talk not of your soul; Our compell'd sins more for number than accomp't.

g. How say you?

h. Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak st the thing I say. Answer to this;—
 v the voice of the recorded law, unce a sentence on your brother's life:
 there not be a charity in sin
 re 'this brother's life?

g. Please you to do't, ke it as a peril to my soul,
 so sin at all, but charity.

h. Pleas'd you to do't, at peril of your soul, equal poise of sin and charity.

g. That I do beg his life, if it be sin, n, let me bear it! you granting of my suit, e be sin, I'll make it my morn prayer ve it added to the faults of mine, othing of your, answer.

h. Nay, but bear me:
 ense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
 m, so, craftily; and that's not good.

g. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good, riciously to know I am no better.

h. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright, e it doth tax itself: as these black masks um an ensheild beauty ten times louder beauty could displayed.—But mark me; received plain, I'll speak more gross:
 brother is to die.

g. So.

h. And his offence is so, as it appears tant to the law apou that pain.

g. True.

h. Admit no other way to save his life, subscribe not that nor any other,
 a the loss of question,) that you, his sister,
 ng yourself desir'd of such a person,
 se credit with the judge, or own great place,
 l fetch your brother from the manacles
 e all-binding law; and that there were

No earthly mean to save him, but that either
 You must lay down the treasures of your body
 To this supposed, or else let him suffer;
 What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother, as myself:
 That is, Were I under the terms of death,
 The impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies,
 And strip myself to death, as to a bed,
 That, longing, I have been sick for, ere I'd yield
 My body up to shame.

Ang. Then must your brother die.

Isab. And 'twere the cheaper way:
 Better it were, a brother died at once,
 Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
 Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence,
 That you have said slander'd so?

Isab. Ignominy in ransom, and free pardon,
 Are of two houses: lawful mercy is Nothing akin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a tyrant;
 And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother
 A merriment than a vice.

Isab. O, pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out,
 To have what we'd have, we speak not what we mean:

I something do excuse the thing I hate,
 For his advantage, that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail.

Isab. Else let my brother die,
 If not a feodary, but only he,
 Owe, and succeed by weakness.

Ang. Nay, women are frail too.

Isab. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;

Which are as easy broke as they make forms.
 Women!—Help heaven! men their creation mar
 In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail;
 For we are soft as our complexions are,
 And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well:

And from this testimony of your own sex,
 (Since, I suppose, we are made to be no stronger Than faults may shake our frames,) let me be bold;—
 I do arrest your words; Be that you are,
 That is, a woman; if you be more, you're none;
 If you be one, (as you are well express'd
 By all external warrants,) show it now,
 By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one: gentle my lord,
 Let me intreat you speak the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.

Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me,
 That he shall die for it.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.

Isab. I know, your virtue hath a license in't,
 Which seems a little fowler than it is,
 To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour,

My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believ'd,
 And most pernicious purpose!—Seeming, seeming!
 I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for't:
 Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
 Or, with an outstretch'd throat, I'll tell the world
 Aloud, what man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
 My unsol'd name, the austereness of my life,
 My vouch against you, and my place i' the state,
 Will so your accusation overweigh,

That you shall stifle in your own report,

And smell of calumny. I have begun:

And now I give my sensual race the rein;

Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;

Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes,

That banish what they sue for; redeem thy brother

By yielding up thy body to my will;

Or else he must not only die the death,

But thy unkindness shall his death draw out.

To lingering sufferance: answer me to-morrow,

Or, by the affection that now guides me most,

I'll prove a tyrant to him: As for you,

Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true.

[Exit.]

Isab. To whom shall I complain? Did I tell this,

Who would believe me? O perilous mouths,

That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
 Either of condemnation or approval!
 Bidding the law make court'sy to their will;
 Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,
 To follow as it draws! I'll to my brother:
 Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood,
 Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
 That had he twenty heads to tender down

On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up Before his sister should her body stoop
 To such abhorrd pollution.
 Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:
 More than our brother is our chastity.
 I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,
 And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A room in the prison.

Enter DUKE, CLAUDIO, and Provost.

Duke. So, then you hope of pardon from lord Angelo?

Claud. The miserable have no other medicine,
 But only hope:

I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death; either death, or life, Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life,—

If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing
 That none but fools would keep: a breath thou art, (Serve to all the skiey influences,)

That dost this habitation, where thou keep'st,
 Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death's fool;

For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
 And yet run'st toward him still: Thou art not noble;

For all the accommodations that thou bear'st,
 Are nurs'd by baseness: Thou art by no means valiant;

For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
 Of a poor worm: Thy best of rest is sleep,
 And that thou oft provok'st; yet grossly fear'st
 Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thyself;

For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains,
 That issue out of dust: Happy thou art not:

For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get;
 And what thou hast, forget'st: Thou art not certain;

For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
 After the moon: If thou art rich, thou art poor;

For, like an ass, whose back with ingots bows,
 Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
 And death unloads thee: Friend hast thou none;

For thy own bowels, which do call these sins,
 The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
 Do curse the gout, serpigio, and the rheum,
 For ending thee no sooner: Thou hast nor youth,
 nor age;

But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep,
 Dreaming on both: for all thy blessed youth
 Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
 Of palsied old; and when thou art old, and rich,
 Thou hast neither heat, affection, limh, nor beauty,
 To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this,
 That bears the name of life? Yet in this life Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we fear,
 That makes these odds all even.

Claud. I humbly thank you.
 To sue to live, I find, I seek to die;
 And, seeking death, find life: Let it come on.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome.

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior, here's your sister.

Duke. Provost, a word with you.

Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring them to speak, where I may be conceal'd.

Yet hear them. [Exeunt Duke and Provost.]

Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isab. Why, as all comforts are; most good in deed: Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, Intends you for his swift ambassador,
 Where you shall be an everlasting leiger:

Therefore your best appointment make with
 To-morrow you set on.

Claud. Is there no remedy?
Isab. None, but such remedy, as, to save a
 To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any?

Isab. Yes, brother, you may live;
 There is a devilish mercy in the judge,
 If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
 But fetter you till death.

Claud. Perpetual durance?
Isab. Ay, just, perpetual durance; a restra Though all the world's vastidity you had,
 To a determin'd scope.

Claud. But in what nature?
Isab. In such a one as (you consenting to)
 Would bark your honour from that trunk you
 And leave you naked.

Claud. Let me know the pain

Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I qu
 Lest thou a feverous life should'st entertain,
 And six or seven winters more respect
 Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die?

The sense of death is most in apprehension;
 And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
 In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
 As when a giant dies.

Claud. Why give you me this?
 Think you I can a resolution fetch
 From flowery tenderness? If I must die,
 I will encounter darkness as a bride,
 And hug it in mine arms.

Isab. There spake my brother; there my f grave

Did utter forth a voice! Yes, thou must die
 Thou art too noble to conserve a life
 In base appliances. This outward-saint puty,—

Whose settled visage and deliberate word
 Nips youth i' the head, and follies doth enn
 As falcon doth the fowl,—is yet a devil;
 His filth within being cast, he would appea
 A pond as deep as hell.

Claud. The princely Angelo

Isab. O, 'tis the cunning hivery of hell,
 The damnd'st body to invest and cover
 In princely guards! Dost thou think, Claud
 If I would yield him my virginity,
 Thou might'st be freed?

Claud. O, heavens! it can Isab. Yes, he would give it thee, for this offence,

 So to offend him still: This night's the time
 That I should do what I abhor to name,
 Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claud. Thou shalt ne

Isab. O, were it but my life,
 I'd throw it down for your deliverance
 As frankly as a pin.

Claud. Thanks, dear Isabel.

Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-m

Claud. Yes.—Has he affections in him,
 That thus can make him bite the law by th
 When he would force it? Sure it is no sin;
 Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Claud. If it were damnable, he, being so Why, would he for the momentary trick
 Be perdurably fin'd?—O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?

Claud. Death is a fearful

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not is in cold obstruction, and to rot; sensible warm motion to become headed clod; and the delighted spirit bathes in fiery floods, or to reside thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice;

 he imprison'd in the viewless winds, blown with restless violence round about pendent world, or to be worse than worst hose, that lawless and uncertain thoughts gine howling!—'tis too horrible!
 weariest and most loathed worldly life,
 t age, ach, penury, and imprisonment lay on nature, is a paradise what we fear of death.

ab. Alas! alas!
laud. Sweet sister, let me live:
 at sin you do to save a brother's life,
 ure dispenses with the deed so far,
 t it becomes a virtue.

ab. O, you beast!
 aithless coward! O, dishonest wretch!
 t thou be made a man out of my vice?
 not a kind of incest, to take life n thine own sister's shame? What should I think?
 ren shield, my mother play'd my father fair!
 such a warped slip of wilderness r issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance:
 ; perish! might but my bending down ievae thee from thy fate, it should proceed:
 pray a thousand prayers for thy death,
 word to save thee.

laud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.
ab. O, fie, fie, fie!
 sin's not accidental, but a trade:
 cy to thee would prove itself a bawd:
 best, that thou diest quickly. [Going.] laud. O' hear me, Isabella.

 Re-enter DUKE.

uke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one
 d.
ab. What is your will?
uke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I ld by and by have some speech with you: the sation, I would require, is likewise your own sfit.

ab. I have no superfluous leisure; my stay t be stolen out of other affairs; but I will at you a while.

uke. [To Claudio, aside.] Son, I have over-d what hath past between you and your sister.
 elo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only ath made an essay of her virtue, to practise udgment with the disposition of natures: she,
 the truth of honour in her, hath made him gracious denial, which he is most glad to re-
 : I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this : true; therefore prepare yourself to death: Do satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fal-
 : to-morrow you must die; go to your knees, make ready.

laud. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out ve with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.
uke. Hold you there: Farewell.

[Exit Claudio.]
 Re-enter Provost.

rov. a word with you.
rov. What's your will, father?
uke. That now you are come, you will be gone:
 ve me a while with the maid; my mind proses with my habit, no loss shall touch her by company.

rov. In good time. [Exit Provost.]
uke. The hand, that hath made you fair, hath le you good: the goodness, that is cheap in ty, makes beauty brief in goodness! but grace, ag the soul of your complexion, should keep the y of it ever fair. The assault, that Angelo hath le to you, fortune hath convey'd to my undernding; and, but that frailty hath examples for falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How ld you do to content this substitute, and to save r brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolve him: I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss: Yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only.—Therefore, fasten your ear on my advisings; to the love I have in doing good, a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe, that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.

Isab. Let me hear you speak further; I have spirit to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful.
 Have you not heard speak of Mariana the sister of Frederick, the great soldier, who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Her should this Angelo have married;
 he was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perish'd vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark, how heavily this befel to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dry'd not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonour: in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death, to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life that it will let this man live!—But how out of this can she avail?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal:
 and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

Isab. Show me how, good father.

Duke. This fore-named maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point: only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience: this being granted in course, now follows all. We shall advise this wronged maid to stand up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense: and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already;
 and, I trust, it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up: Haste you speedily to Angelo; if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St. Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana: At that place call upon me; and despatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort: Fare you well, good father. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.

The street before the prison.

Enter DUKE, as a Friar; to him ELBOW, Clown, and Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O, heavens! what stuff is here?

Clo. 'Twas never merry world, since of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worse allow'd by order of law a furr'd gown to keep him warm; and furr'd with fox and lambskins too, to signify, that craft, being richer than innocence, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, sir:—Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father: What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elb. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law; and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir; for we have found upon him, sir, a strange picklock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah; a bawd, a wicked bawd!

The evil that thou causest to be done,
That is thy means to live: Do thou but think
What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a back,
From such a filthy vice: say to thyself,—
From their abominable and beastly touches
I drink, I eat, array myself, and live.
Canst thou believe thy living is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go, mend, go, mend.

Clo. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin,

Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer; Correction and instruction must both work, Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning: the deputy cannot abide a whoremaster: if he be a whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would seem to be, Free from our faults, as faults from seeming, free!

Enter LUCIO.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a cord, sir.
Clo. I spy comfort; I cry, hail: Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the heels of Cæsar? Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clutched? What reply? Ha! what say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method? Is't not drown'd i' the last rain? Ha? What say'st thou, trot? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Duke. Still thus, and thus! still worse!

Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still? Ha?

Clo. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio. Why, 'tis good; it is the right of it; it must be so: Ever your fresh whore and your powder'd bawd: An unshunn'd consequence; it must be so: Art going to prison, Pompey?

Clo. Yes, faith, sir.

Lucio. Why 'tis not amiss, Pompey: Farewell: Go; say, I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Lucio. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right: Bawd is he, doubtless, and of antiquity too; bawd-born. Farewell, good Pompey: commend me to the prison, Pompey: You will turn good husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why, your mettle is the more: Adieu, trusty Pompey.—you, friar.

Duke. And you.

Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Clo. You will not bail me then, sir?

Lucio. Then, Pompey? nor now.—What abroad, friar? What news?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio. Go,—to kennel, Pompey, go:

[Exeunt Elbow, Clown, and Off

What news, friar, of the duke?

Duke. I know none: Can you tell me of an Lucio. Some say, he is with the emperor Russia; other some, he is in Rome: But what he, think you?

Duke. I know not where: But, wheresoever wish him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of his steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he never boru to. Lord Angelo dukes it well i' absence; he puts transgression to't.

Duke. He does well i't.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lechery would harm in him: something too crabbed that friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severity cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a kindred; it is well ally'd: but it is impossible extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking i' down. They say, this Angelo was not man and woman, after the downright way of a nation: Is it true, think you?

Duke. How should he be made then?

Lucio. Some report, a sea-maid spawn'd hi Some, that he was begot between two stock—But it is certain, that, when he makes water urine is congeal'd ice; that I know to be true he is a motion ungenerative, that's infallible

Duke. You are pleasant, sir; and speak ar

Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is t him, for the rebellion of a cod-piece, to take the life of a man? Would the duke, that is a have done this? Ere he would have hang'd: for the getting a hundred bastards, he would paid for the nursing a thousand: He had feeling of the sport; he knew the service, an instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke muctected for women; he was not inclined that Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.

Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who? not the duke? yes, your beg fifty;—and his use was, to put a ducat i' clack-dish: the duke had crotchets in him would be drunk too: that let me inform you

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his: A sh low was the duke: and, I believe, I know the of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I pr'ythee, might be the cau

Lucio. No, pardon;—'tis a secret must be within the teeth and the lips: but this I c you understand,—The greater file of the s held the duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise? why, no question but he wa

Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unwe fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, o taking; the very stream of his life, and the bu he hath helmed, must, upon a warranted nec him a better proclamation. Let him be but monied in his own bringings forth, and he appear to the envious, a scholar, a statesman a soldier: Therefore, you speak unskillfully; your knowledge he more, it is much darker your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you not what you speak. But, if ever the duke (as our prayers are he may,) let me desire make your answer before him: If it be hone poke, you have courage to maintain it: I am to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

io. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to like.

sc. He shall know you better, sir, if I may report you.

io. I fear you not.

sc. O, you hope the duke will return no more, imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But, I can do you little harm: you'll forswear gain.

io. I'll be hang'd first: thou art deceived in that. But no more of this: Canst thou tell, if I die to-morrow, or no?

sc. Why should he die, sir?

io. Why? for filling a bottle with a tun-dish. I'd, the duke, we talk of, were return'd again: agentur'd agent will unpeople the province outineency; sparrows must not build in his eaves, because they are lecherous. The duke could have dark deeds darkly answer'd; he never bring them to light: would he were 'd! Marry, this Claudio is condemn'd for sinning. Farewell, good friar; I pr'ythee, pray. The duke, I say to thee again, would eat it on Fridays. He's now past it: yet, and I thee, he would mouth with a beggar, though celt brown bread and garlick: say, that I do. Farewell. [Exit.]

e. No might nor greatness in mortality insure 'scape; back-wounding calumny hitest virtue strikes: What king so strong, e the gall up in the slanderous tongue? he comes here?

r ESCALUS, Provost, Bawd, and Officers.

d. Go, away with her to prison.

d. Good my lord, be good to me; your hos accounted a merciful man: good my lord. I. Double and treble admonition, and still in the same kind? This would make mercy and play the tyrant.

sc. A bawd of eleven years continuance, may as your honour.

d. My lord, this is one Lucio's information to me: mistress Kate Keep-down was with by him in the duke's time, he promised her ge; his child is a year and a quarter old, Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and we he goes about to abuse me.

d. That fellow is a fellow of much licence: him be called before us.—Away with her to: Go to; no more words. [Exeunt Bawd Officers.] Provost, my brother Angelo will alter'd, Claudio must die to-morrow: let: furnished with divines, and have all chari-reparation: if my brother wrought by my t should not be so with him.

sc. So please you, this friar hath been with and advised him for the entertainment of

d. Good even, good father.

e. Bliss and goodness on you!

d. Of whence are you?

e. Not of this country, though my chance is now

To use it for my time: I am a brother Of gracious order, late come from the see, In special business from his holiness.

Escal. What news abroad i' the world?

Duke. None, but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive, to make societies secure; but security enough, to make fellowships accurs'd: much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke?

Escal. One, that, above all other strifes, contented especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at any thing, which profess'd to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice: yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life; which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die.

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have labour'd for the poor gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him, he is indeed—justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein, if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner: Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you!

[Exeunt Escalus and Provost.]

He, who the sword of heaven will bear,

Should be as holy as severe;

Pattern in himself to know,

Grace to stand, and virtue go;

More nor less to others paying,

Than by self-offences weighing.

Shame to him, whose cruel striking

Kills for faults of his own liking!

Twice treble shame on Angelo,

To weed my vice, and let his grow!

O, what may man within him hide,

Though angel on the outward side!

How may likeness, made in crimes,

Making practice on the times,

Draw with idle spiders' strings

Most pond'rous and substantial things!

Craft against vice I must apply:

With Angelo to-night shall lie

His old betrothed, but despis'd!

So disguise shall, by the disguis'd,

Pay with falsehood false exacting,

And perform an old contracting.

[Exit.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

A room in Mariana's house.

ARIANA discovered sitting; a Boy singing.

SONG.

ake, oh take those lips away,
 That so sweetly were forsworn;
 And those eyes, the break of day,
 Lights, that do mislead the morn:
 Out my kisses bring again,
 Bring again,
 Calls of love, but seal'd in vain,
 Seal'd in vain.
 Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away,

Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
 Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.—

[Exit Boy.]

Enter DUKE.

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish,
 You had not found me here so musical:
 Let me excuse me, and believe me so,—
 My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duke. 'Tis good: though music oft hath such a charm,

To make bad, good, and good provoke to harm.

I pray you, tell me, hath any body inquired for me here to-day? much upon this time have I promised here to meet.

Mari. You have not been inquired after: I have sat here all day.

Enter ISABELLA.

Duke. I do constantly believe you:—The time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little; may be, I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

Mari. I am always bound to you.

[Exit.]

Duke. Very well met, and welcome.

What is the news from this good deputy?

Isab. He hath a garden circummurd' with brick; Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd; And to that vineyard is a planced gate, That makes his opening with this bigger key: This other doth command a little door, Which from the vineyard to the garden leads; There have I made my promise to call on him, Upon the heavy middle of the night.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isab. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't; With whispering and most guilty diligence, In action all of precept, he did show me The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other tokens Between you 'greed, concerning her observance?

Isab. No, none, but only a repair i' the dark; And that I have possess'd him, my most stay Can be but brief: for I have made him know, I have a servant comes with me along, That stays upon me; whose persuasion is, I come about my brother.

Duke. 'Tis well borne up. I have not yet made known to Mariana A word of this:—What, ho! within! come forth!

Re-enter MARIANA.

I pray you, be acquainted with this maid; She comes to do you good.

Isab. I do desire the like.

Duke. Do you persuade yourself, that I respect you? Mari. Good friar, I know you do; and have found it

Duke. Take then this your companion by the hand, Who hath a story ready for your ear: I shall attend your leisure; but make haste; The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Will't please you walk aside?

[Exeunt Mariana and Isabella.]

Duke. O place and greatness, millions of false eyes Are stuck upon thee! 'volumes of report Run with these false and most contrarious quests Upon thy doings! thousand 'scapes of wit Make thee the father of their idle dream, And rack thee in their fancies!—Welcome! How agreed?

Re-enter MARIANA and ISABELLA.

Isab. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father, If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent, But my intreaty too.

Isab. Little have you to say, When you depart from him, but soft and low, Remember now my brother.

Mari. Fear me not.

Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all: He is your husband on a pre-contract: To bring you thus together, 'tis no sin; Sith that the justice of your title to him Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go; Our corn's to reap, for yet our tithes to sow.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A room in the prison.

Enter Provost and Claudio.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah: Can you cut off a man's head?

Clo. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can; but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyves; if not shall have your full time of imprisonment your deliverance with an unpitied whipping you have been a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, out of mind; but yet I will be content to lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive instruction from my fellow partner.

Prov. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson?

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you, morrow in your execution: If you think it compound with him by the year, and let him here with you; if not, use him for the present dismiss him: He cannot plead his estimation you; he hath been a bawd.

Abhor. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him, he will credit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a t will turn the scale.

Clo. Pray, sir, by your good favour, (for, sir, a good favour you have, but that you hang looking,) do you call, sir, your occupa mystery?

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Clo. Painting, sir, I have heard say, is a tery; and your whores, sir, being members occupation, using painting, do prove my occupa mystery: but what mystery there should hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot im; Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clo. Proof.

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits you If it be too little for your thief, your tru thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your your thief thinks it little enough: so every man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find hangman is a more pient trade than your he doth often ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block an axe, to-morrow four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct my trade; follow.

Clo. I do desire to learn, sir; and, I hope, have occasion to use me for your own tur shall find me yare: for, truly, sir, for you ness, I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio

Duke.

They will then, ere 't be long.

Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke.

There's some in Prov. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel' with the stroke and line of his great justice;

 with holy abstinence subdued himself, which he spurs on his power to edify in others: were he meald that, which he corrects, then were he tyrannous;

is being so, he's just.—Now are they come.—

ost returns, speaking to one at the door.

. There he must stay, until the officer to let him in; he is call'd up.

e. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,

s must die to-morrow?

. None, sir, none.

e. As near the dawning, Provost, as it is, all hear more ere morning.

. Happily,

omething know; yet, I believe, there comes ntermand; no such example have we:

s, upon the very siege of justice,

Angelo hath to the publick ear

s'd the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

. This is his lordship's man.

. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

. My lord hath sent you this note; and by s further charge, that you swerve not from allest article of it, neither in time, matter, or ircumstance. Good morrow; for, as I take almost day.

. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.]

e. This is his pardon; purchas'd by such sin.

[Aside.]

hich the pardon himself is in:

hath offence his quick celerity,

it is borne in high authority;

vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended,

or the fault's love is the offender friended.—

sir, what news?

. I told you: Lord Angelo, be-like, thinking miss in mine office, awakens me with this ted putting on: methinks, strangely; for he ot used it before.

e. Pray you, let's hear.

say you to this, sir?

e. What is that Barnardine, who is to be d in the afternoon?

. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up ed: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

e. Hew came it, that the absent duke had have heard, it was ever his manner to do so.

. His friends still wrought reprieves for him:

ndeed, his fact, till now in the government

Angelo, came not to an undoubtful proof.

e. Is it now apparent?

. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

s. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison?

eems he to be touch'd?

. A man that apprehends death no more ully, but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless fearless of what's past, present, or to come;

ble of mortality, and desperately mortal.

e. He wants advice.

. He will hear none: he hath evermore had erty of the prison; give him leave to escape

he would not: drunk many times a day, if any days entirely drunk. We have very often d him, as if to carry him to execution, and d him a seeming warrant for it: it hath not him at all.

Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, Provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have a warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo, who hath sentenced him: To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days respite; for the which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Luke. In the delaying death.

Prov. Alack! how may I do it! having the hour limited; and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order, I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

Duke. O, death's a great disguiser: and you may add to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say, it was the desire of the penitent to be so bared before his death: You know, the course is common.
 If any thing fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint, whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father; it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Prov. To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor my persuasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the duke; you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is a thing, that Angelo knows not:
 for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor;
 perchance, of the duke's death; perchance, entering into some monastery; but, by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd: Put not yourself into amazement, how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy, when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a present shrift, and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amazed; but this shall absolutely resolve you. Come away; it is almost clear dawn.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another room in the same.

Enter Clown.

Clow. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our house of profession: one would think, it were mistress Overdone's own house, for here be many of her old customers. First, here's young master Rash; he's in for a commodity of brown paper and old ginger, ninescore and seventeen pounds; of which he made five marks, ready money: marry, then, ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one master Caper, at the suit of master Three-pile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-colour'd satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizzy, and young master Deep-vow, and master Copper-spur, and master Starve-lackey the rapier and dagger-man, and young Drop-heir that kill'd lusty Pudding, and master Fortbricht the tilter, and brave master Shoe-tie the great traveller, and wild Half-can that stabb'd Pots, and, I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now for the Lord's sake.

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clo. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hang'd, master Barnardine!

Abhor. What, ho, Barnardine!

Barnar. [Within.] A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clo. Your friends, sir; the hangman: You must be so good, sir, to rise and be put to death.

Barnar. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away; I am sleepy.

Abhor. Tell him, he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clo. Pray, master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming, sir, he is coming; I hear his straw rustle.

Enter BARNARDINE.

Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clo. Very ready, sir.

Barnar. How now, Abhorsou? what's the news with you?

Abhor. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for, look you, the warrant's come.

Barnar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

Clo. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hang'd betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Enter DUKE.

Abhor. Look you, sir, here comes your ghostly father: Do we jest now, think you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Barnar. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must: and therefore, I beseech you,

Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barnar. I swear, I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,—

Barnar. Not a word; if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day. [Exit.]

Enter Provost.

Duke. Unfit to live, or die: O, gravel heart!—After him, fellows; bring him to the block.

[Exeunt Abhorsou and Clown.]

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner?

Duke. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death; And, to transport him in the mind he is, Were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father, There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate, A man of Claudio's years; his beard, and head, Just of his colour: What if we omit This reprobate, till he were well inclined; And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. O, 'tis an accident that heaven provides! Despatch it presently; the hour draws on Prefix'd by Angelo: See, this be done, And sent according to command; whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently. But Barnardine must die this afternoon: And how shall we continue Claudio, To save me from the danger that might come, If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done;—Put them in secret holds, Both Barnardine and Claudio: Ere twice The sun hath made his journal greeting to The under generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependent.

Duke. Quick, despatch,

And send the head to Angelo.

[Exit.]

Now will I write letters to Angelo,—
The provost, he shall bear them,—whose Shall witness to him, I am near at home;
And that, by great injunctions, I am bound
To enter publicly: him I'll desire
To meet me at the consecrated fount,
A league below the city; and from thence,
By cold gradation and well-balanced form,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head: I'll carry it myself.
Duke. Convenient is it: Make a swift return
For I would commune with you of such things
That want no ear but yours.

Prov.

I'll make all

Isab. [Within.] Peace, ho, be here!

Duke. The tongue of Isabel!—She's come
If yet her brother's pardon be come hither
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despair,
When it is least expected.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. Ho, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and daughter.

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little to your reports; but the best is, he lives not ucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well do: he's a better woodman than thou takest for.

uke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare well.

ucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee; I tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

uke. You have told me too many of him a day, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were a day.

ucio. I was once before him for getting a wench a child.

uke. Did you such a thing?

ucio. Yes, marry, did I: but was fain to for- ar it; they would else have married me to the en medlar.

uke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest: t you well.

ucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the 's end: If bawdy talk offend you, we'll have little of it: Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr, all stick. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room in Angelo's house.

Enter ANGELO and ESCALUS.

Escal. Every letter he hath writ hath disvouch'd

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner. His as show much like to madness: pray heaven, wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at gates, and re-deliver our authorities there?

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour e his entering, that, if any crave redress of ice, they should exhibit their petitions in the t?

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a atch of complaints; and to deliver us from es hereafter, which shall then have no power and against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaim'd: mes i' the morn, I'll call you at your house: e notice to such men of sort and suit, re to meet him.

Escal. I shall, sir: fare you well. [Exit.]

Ang. Good night.— deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant, duld to all proceeding. A deflower'd maid!

by an eminent body, that enforce'd law against it!—But that her tender shame not proclaim against her maiden loss, might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her?

—no: ny authority bears a erdent bulk, t particular scandal once can touch, t confounds the breather. He should have liv'd, that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense,

Might in the times to come have ta'en revenge, By so receiving a dishonour'd life, With ransom of such shame. 'Would yet he had liv'd!

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot, Nothing goes right; and we would, and we would not. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

Fields without the town.

Enter DUKE in his own habit, and Friar PETER.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.

[Giving letters.]
The provost knows our purpose, and our plot. The matter being afoot, keep your instruction, And hold you ever to our special drift; Though sometimes you do hench from this to that, As cause doth minister. Go, call at Flavius' house, And tell him where I stay: give the like notice To Valentinius, Rowland, and to Crassus, And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate; But send me Flavius first.

F. Peter. It shall be speeded well.

[Exit Friar.]

Enter VARRIUS.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste;

Come, we will walk: There's other of our friends Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Street near the city gate.

Enter ISABELLA and MARIANA.

Isab. To speak so indirectly, I am loath; I would say the truth; but to accuse him so, That is your part: yet I'm advis'd to do it; He says, to veil full purpose.

Mari. Be rul'd by him.

Isab. Besides, he tells me, that, if peradventure He speak against me on the adverse side, I should not think it strange; for 'tis a physick, That's bitter to sweet end.

Mari. I would, friar Peter—

Isab. O, peace; the friar is come.

Enter Friar PETER.

F. Peter. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,

Where you may have such vantage on the duke, He shall not pass you; Twice have the trumpets sounded;

The generous and gravest citizens Have hent the gates, and very near upon

The duke is ent'ring; therefore hence, away. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

A public place near the city gate.

MARIANA, (veil'd), ISABELLA, and PETER, a distance. Enter at opposite doors, DUKE, VARRIUS, Lords; ANGELO, ESCALUS, UCIO, Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

uke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met:— old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.

g. and Escal. Happy return be to your royal grace!

uke. Many and hearty thankings to you both have made inquiry of you; and we hear of goodness of your justice, that our soul not but yield you forth to public thanks, running more requital.

g. You make my bonds still greater.

uke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it, ck it in the wards of covert bosom, n it deserves with characters of brass ted residence, 'gainst the tooth of time,

And razure of oblivion: Give me your hand, And let the subject see, to make them know That outward courtesies would fain proclaim Favours that keep within:—Come, Escalus; You must walk by us on our other hand; And good supporters are you.

PETER and ISABELLA come forward.

F. Peter. Now is your time; speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard Upon a wrong'd, I'd fain have said, a maid! O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye By throwing it on any other object,

Till you have heard me in my true complaint, And given me, justice, justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs: In what? By whom?

Be brief: Here is lord Angelo shall give you justice; Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O, worthy duke, You bid me seek redemption of the devil:

Hear me yourself; for that, which I must speak,

L

Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redress from you: hear me, O, hear me,
here.

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice.

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly, and strange.

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly, will I speak:
That Angelo's forsworn; is it not strange?

That Angelo's a murderer; is't not strange?

That Angelo is an adulterous thief,

An hypocrite, a virgin violator;

Is it not strange, and strange?

Duke. Nay, it is ten times strange.

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo,

Than this is all as true as it is strange:

Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth

To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her!—Poor soul,

She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.

Isab. O prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st

There is another comfort than this world,

That thou neglect me not, with that opinion,

That I am touch'd with madness: make not impossible

That, which but seems unlike: 'tis not impossible,

But one, the wicked'st caitiff on the ground,

May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute,

As Angelo; even so may Angelo,

In all his dressings, characts, titles, forms,

Be an arch-villain: believe it, royal prince,

If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,

Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty,

If she be mad, (as I believe no other),

Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,

Such a dependency of thing on thing,

As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O, gracious duke,

Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason

For inequality: but let your reason serve

To make the truth appear, where it seems hid;

And hide the false, seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad,

Have, sure, more lack of reason.—What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,

Condemn'd upon the act of fornication

To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo:

I, in probation of a sisterhood,

Was sent by my brother: one Lucio

As then the messenger;—

Lucio. That's I, an'd like your grace:

I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her

To try her gracious fortune with lord Angelo,

For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he, indeed.

Duke. You were not bid to speak.

Lucio. No, my good lord;

Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I wish you now then;

Pray you, take note of it: and when you have

A business for yourself, pray heaven, you then

Be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour.

Duke. The warrant's for yourself; take heed to it.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right; but you are in the wrong

To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Isab. I went

To this pernicious caitiff deputy.

Duke. That's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it;

The phrase is to the matter.

Duke. Mended again: the matter;—Proceed.

Isab. In brief,—to set the needless process by,

How I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd;

How he refus'd me, and how I reply'd;

(For this was of much length,) the vile conclusion

I now begin with grief and shame to utter:

He would not, but by gift of my chaste body

To his concupiscent intemperate lust,

Release my brother; and, after much debatement,

My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,

And I did yield to him: But the next morn betw
His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most like

Isab. O, that it were as like, as it is true!

Duke. By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st

what thou speak'st;

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour,

In hateful practice: First, his integrity

Stands without blemish:—next, it imports no rea

That with such vehemency he should pursue

Faults proper to himself; if he had so offend

He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself

And not have cut him off: Some one hath set you

Confess the truth, and say by whose advice

Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all

Then, oh, you blessed ministers above,

Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time,

Unfold the evil, which is here wrapt up

In countenance!—Heaven shield your grace:

woe,

As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd go!

Duke. I know, you'd fain be gone:—An offi

Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler;

As he's reported by this gentleman;

And, on my trust, a man, that never yet

Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it

F. Peter. Well, he in time may come to himself;

But at this instant, he is sick, my lord,

Of a strange fever: Upon his mere request,

Duke. Good friar, let's hear riana comes forward.

Do you not smile at this, lord Angelo?—

O heaven! the vanity of wretched fools!—

Give us some seats.—Come, cousin Angelo;

In this I'll be impartial; be you judge

Of your own cause.—Is this the witness, friar

Duke. Are you a maid?

Mari. No, my

 ri. Neither, my lord.
 ie. Why, you thing then:—Neither maid, widow, nor wife?
 io. My lord, she may be a punk; for many m are neither maid, widow, nor wife.
 ie. Silence that fellow: I would, he had some cause
 attle for himself.
 io. Well, my lord.
 ri. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married;
 I confess, besides, I am no maid:
 e known my husband; yet my husband knows
 not.
 ever he knew me.
 io. He was drunk then, my lord; it can be tter.
 ie. For the benefit of silence, 'would thou so too.
 io. Well, my lord.
 ie. This is no witness for lord Angelo.
 ri. Now I come to't, my lord:
 that accuses him of fornication,
 f-same manner doth accuse my husband;
 harges him, my lord, with such a time,
 a I'll depose I had him in mine arms,
 all the effect of love.
 f. Charges she more than me?
 ri. Not that I know.
 ie. No? you say, your husband.
 ri. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo, thinks, he knows, that he ne'er knew my body,
 nows, he thinks, that he knows Isabel's.
 g. This is a strange abuse:—Let's see thy face.
 ri. My husband bids me; now I will unmask.
 [Unveiling. is that face, thou cruel Angelo, h, once thou swor'st, was worth the looking on:
 is the hand, which, with a vow'd contract,
 fast belock'd in thine: this is the body,
 took away the match from Isabel, did supply thee at thy garden-house
 r imagin'd person.
 ie. Know you this woman?
 io. Carnally, she says.
 ie. Sirrah, no more.
 io. Enough, my lord.
 g. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman; five years since, there was some speech of marriage
 ixt myself and her; which was broke off, y, for that her promised proportions short of composition; but, in chief, hat her reputation was disvalued ity: since which time, of five years, r spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,
 my faith and honour.
 ri. Noble prince,
 ere comes light from heaven, and words from breath,
 ere is sense in truth, and truth in virtue, affianc'd this man's wife, as strongly ords could make up vows: and, my good lord, Tuesday night last gone, in his garden-house,
 ew me as a wife: As this is true,
 ne in safety raise me from my knees;
 se for ever be confixed here,
 urble monument!
 g. I did but smile till now;
 , good my lord, give me the scope of justice;
 atience here is touch'd: I do perceive,
 e poor informal women are no more instruments of some more mightier member, sets them on: Let me have way, my lord,
 and this practice out.
 ie. Ay, with my heart;
 punish them unto your height of pleasure.—
 i foolish friar; and thou pernicious woman, pact with her that's gone! think'st thou, thy oaths,
 igh they would swear down each particular saint,
 e testimonies against his worth and credit,
 's seal'd in approbation?—You, lord Escalus, with my cousin; lend him your kind pains

To find out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd.—
 There is another friar that set them on;
 Let him be sent for.
 F. Peter. Would he were here, my lord! for he,
 indeed,
 Hath set the women on to this complaint:
 Your provost knows the place where he abides,
 And he may fetch him.
 Duke. Go, do it instantly.— [Exit Provost.
 And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,
 Whom it concerns to bear this matter forth,
 Do with your injuries as seems you best,
 In any chastisement: I for a while
 Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have well Determined upon these slanderers.
 Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly.— [Exit Duke.] Signior Lucio, did not you say, you knew that friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?
 Lucio. Cucullus non facit monachum: honest in nothing, but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.
 Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.
 Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.
 Escal. Call that same Isabel here once again;
 [To an Attendant.] I would speak with her: Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.
 Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report.
 Escal. Say you?
 Lucio. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess; perchance, publicly, she'll be ashamed.
 Re-enter Officers, with ISABELLA; the Duke in the Friar's habit, and Provost.
 Escal. I will go darkly to work with her.
 Lucio. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.
 Escal. Come on, mistress: [To Isabella.] here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.
 Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here with the provost.
 Escal. In very good time:—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.
 Lucio. Mum.
 Escal. Come, sir: Did you set these women on to slander lord Angelo? they have confess'd you did!
 Duke. 'Tis false.
 Escal. How! know you where you are?
 Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the devil
 Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne:—
 Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.
 Escal. The duke is in us; and we will hear you speak:
 Look, you speak justly.
 Duke. Boldly, at least:—But, oh, poor souls,
 Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?
 Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone?
 Then is your cause gone too. The duke's unjust,
 Thus to retort your manifest appeal,
 And put your trial in the villain's mouth,
 Which here you come to accuse.
 Lucio. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke of.
 Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unhallow'd friar!
 Is't not enough, thou hast suborn'd these women
 To accuse this worthy man; but, in foul mouth,
 And in the witness of his proper ear,
 To call him villain?
 And then to glance from him to the duke himself;
 To tax him with injustice?—Take him hence;
 To the rack with him:—We'll touze you joint by joint,
 But we will know this purpose:—What! unjust?
 Duke. Be not so hot; the duke Dare no more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own; his subject am I not,
 Nor here provincial: My business in this state
 Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
 Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble,
 Till it o'er-run the stew: laws, for all faults;
 But faults so countenance'd, that the strong statutes Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,

As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison!

Ang. What can you vouch against him, signior Lucio?

Is this the man, that you did tell us of?

Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord. Come hither, good-man bald-pate: Do you know me?

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse.

Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest, I love the duke, as I love myself.

Ang. Hark! how the villain would close now, after his reasonable abuses!

Escal. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withal:—Away with him to prison:—Where is the provost?

—Away with him to prison; lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more:—Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companions!

[The Provost lays hands on the Duke.]

Duke. Stay, sir; stay a while.

Ang. What! resists he? Help him, Lucio.

Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh, sir: Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pax to you! show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour! Will't not off?

[Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.]

Duke. Thon art the first knave, that e'er made a duke.—

First, Provost, let me bail these gentle three:—Sneak not away, sir; [To Lucio.]

Must have a word anon:—lay hold on him!

Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon; sit you down.— [To Escalus.]

We'll borrow place of him:—Sir, by your leave: [To Angelo.]

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee office? If thou hast, Rely upon it till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

Ang. O my dread lord,

I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be undiscernible, When I perceive your grace, like power divine, Hath look'd upon my passes: Then, good prince, No longer session hold upon my shame, But let my trial be mine own confession; Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither, Mariana:—Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my lord.

Duke. Go, take her hence, and marry her instantly.—

Do you the office, friar; which consummate, Return him here again:—Go with him, Provost.

[Exeunt Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and the Provost.]

Escal. My lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonour, Than at the strangeness of it.

Duke. Come hither, Isabel:

Your friar is now your prince: As I was then Advertising, and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isab. O, give me pardon,

That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd Your unknown sovereignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel:

And now, dear maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart: And you may marvel, why I obscur'd myself, Labouring to save his life; and would not rat: Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Than let him so be lost: O, most kind maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: But, peace be with it! That life is better life, past fearing death, Than that, which lives to fear: make it your com: So happy is your brother.

Re-enter ANGELO, MARIANA, PETEE and Provost.

Isab. I do, my lord.

Duke. For this new-married man, approach here,

Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd Your well-defended honour, you must pardon For Mariana's sake: but as he adjudg'd you bro (Being criminal, in double violation Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach, Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,) The very mercy of the law cries out Most audible, even from his proper tongue, An Angelo for Claudio, death for death. Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers lei: Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Mea Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested; Which though thou would'st deny, denies vantage:

We do condemn thee to the very block, Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with haste:—

Away with him!

Mari. O, my most gracious lord,

I hope you will not mock me with a husband

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you w: husband:

Consenting to the safeguard of your honour, I thought your marriage fit; else imputation, For that he knew you, might reproach you: I And choke your good to come: for his possess: Although by confiscation they are ours, We do instate and widow you withal, To buy you a better husband.

Mari. O, my dear lord:

I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mari. Gentle, my liege,— [Knee]

Duke. You do but lose your lal: Away with him to death!—Now, sir, [To Lu to you.

Mari. O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel, tak part;

Lend me your knees, and all my life to come I'll lend you, all my life to do you service.

Duke. Against all sense you do impfortune: Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact, Her brother's ghost his paven bed would bre: And take her hence in horror.

Mari. Isabel,

Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me; Hold up your hands, say nothing, I'll speak: They say, best men are moulded out of faults: And, for the most, become much more the be: For being a little bad: so may my husband. O, Isabel! will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. Most bounteous: [Knee]

Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd: As if my brother liv'd: I partly think, A due sincerity govern'd his deeds, Till he did look on me; since it is so, Let him not die: My brother had but justice, In that he did the thing, for which he died: For Angelo, His act did not o'ertake his bad intent; And must be buried but as an intent, That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subj: Intents but merely thoughts.

Mari. Merely, my lord.

Duke. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I sa: I have bethought me of another fault:—

ost, how came it Claudio was beheaded at an unusual hour?

It was commanded so.

Had you a special warrant for the deed?

No, my good lord; it was by private message.

For which I do discharge you of your office:

up your keys. Pardon me, noble lord:
ought it was a fault, but knew it not;
and repent me, after more advice:

estimony whereof, one in the prison, should by private order else have died,
were reserr'd alive.

What's he?

His name is Barnardine.

I would thou had'st done so by Claudio.—
Fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

[Exit Provost.]

I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
as you, lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
and slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

I am sorry, that such sorrow I procure:
so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
I crave death mote willingly than mercy;
I am deserving, and I do entreat it.

ter Provost, BARNARDINE, CLAUDIO, and JULIET.

Which is that Barnardine?

This, my lord.

There was a friar told me of this man:—
thou art said to have a stubborn soul, apprehends no further than this world,
quar'rst thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd;

for those earthly faults, I quit them all;
pray thee, take this mercy to provide better times to come:—Friar, advise him;
I'll give him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's that?

This is another prisoner, that I sav'd, should have died when Claudio lost his head;
I'll give almost to Claudio, as himself.

[Unmuffles Claudio.]

If he be like your brother, [To Isabella.] for his sake
pardon'd; And, for your lovely sake,
I'll give you your hand, and say you will be mine,
my brother too: But fitter time for that.

By this, lord Angelo perceives he's safe;
Methinks, I see a quick'ning in his eye:—
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well:
Look, that you love your wife; her worth, worth
yours.—

I find an apt remission in myself:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon;—
You, sirrah, [To Lucio.] that knew me for a fool,
a coward,

One all of luxury, an ass, a madman;
Wherein have I so deserved of you,
That you extol me thus?

Lucio. 'Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: If you will hang me for it, you may, but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipp'd.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.—
Proclaim it, provost, round about the city;
If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,
(As I have heard him swear himself, there's one Whom he begot with child,) let her appear,
And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now, I made you a duke; good my lord, do not recompense me, in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits:—Take him to prison:
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Sland'ring a prince deserves it.—
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.—
Joy to you, Mariana!—love her, Angelo;
I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue.—
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:

There's more behind, that is more gratefull.
Thanks, Provost, for thy care and secrecy;
We shall employ thee in a worthier place:—
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's;
The offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good;
Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is your's, and what is yours is mine:—
So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Navarre. A park, with a palace in it.

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
 Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
 And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
 When, spite of cormorant devouring time,
 The endeavour of this present breath may buy
 That honour, which shall hate his scythe's keen edge,
 And make us heirs of all eternity.

Therefore, brave conquerors!—for so you are,
 That war against your own affections,
 And the huge army of the world's desires,—
 Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
 Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
 Our court shall be a little Academe,
 Still and contemplative in living art.
 You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,
 Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
 My fellow scholars, and to keep those statutes,
 That are recorded in this schedule here;
 Your oaths are past, and now subscribe your names;
 That his own hand may strike his honour down,
 That violates the smallest branch herein:
 If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
 Subscribe to your deep oath, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd: 'tis but a three years' fast;
 The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
 Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
 Make rich the ribs, but bank'rout quite the wits.

Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified;
 The grosser manner of these world's delights
 He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:
 To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
 With all these living in philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their protestation over,
 So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
 That is, To live and study here three years.
 But there are other strict observances:
 As, not to see a woman in that term;
 Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
 And, one day in a week to touch no food;
 And but one meal on every day beside;
 The which, I hope, is not enrolled there:
 And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
 And not be seen to wink of all the day;
 (When I was wont to think no harm all night,
 And make a dark night too of half the day;)
 Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
 O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep;
 Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.

Biron. Let me say no, my liege, as if you please:
 I only swore, to study with your grace,
 And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.
Biron. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.
 What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.
Biron. Come on then, I will swear to study so,
 To know the thing I am forbid to know:
 As thus,—To study where I well may dine,

When I to feast expressly am forbid;
 Or, study where to meet some mistress fine,
 When mistresses from common sense are hid:

Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
 Study to break it, and not break my troth.
 If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
 Study knows that, which yet it doth not know:

Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say, no.
King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
 And train our intellects to vain delight.

Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain,
 Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain:
 As, painfully to pore upon a book,
 To seek the light of truth; while truth the while Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
 Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile:

So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
 Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
 Study me how to please the eye indeed,
 By fixing it upon a fairer eye;

Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
 And give him light that was it blinded by.
 Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
 That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks;

Small have continual plodders ever won,
 Save base authority from others' books.
 These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,
 That give a name to every fixed star,
 Have no more profit of their shining nights,
 Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.

Too much to know, is, to know nought but fame;
 And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Act 4. Sc. 3.

Published by W. Pickering, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 1823.

Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Biron. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Biron. Something then in rhyme.

Long. Biron is like an envious sneaping frost,

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast,

Before the birds have any cause to sing?

Why should I joy in an abortive birth?

At Christmas I no more desire a rose,

Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;

But like of each thing, that in season grows.

So you, to study now it is too late,

Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron; adieu!

Biron. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:

And, though I have for barbarism spoke more,

Than for that angel knowledge you can say,

Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn,

And bide the penance of each three years' day.

Give me the paper, let me read the same;

And to the strict'st decrees I'll write my name.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Biron. [Reads.] Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court—

And hath this been proclaim'd?

Long. Four days ago.

Biron. Let's see the penalty.

[Reads.]—On pain of losing her tongue—

Who devis'd this?

Long. Marry, that did I.

Biron. Sweet lord, and why?

Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.

Biron. A dangerous law against gentility.

[Reads.] Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such publick shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise—

This article, my liege, yourself must break;

For, well you know, here comes in embassy The French King's daughter, with yourself to speak—

A maid of grace, and complete majesty,—

About surrender-up of Aquitain

To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father:

Therefore this article is made in vain,

Or vainly comes the admired princess hither.

King. What say you, lords? why, this you quite forgot.

Biron. So study evermore is overshot;

While it doth study to have what it would,

It doth forget to do the thing it should:

And, when it hath the thing it hunteth most,

'Tis won, as towns with fire; so won, so lost.

King. We must, of force, dispense with this decree;

She must lie here on mere necessity.

Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn

Three thousand times within this three years' space:

For every man with his affects is born;

Not by might master'd, but by special grace:

If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,

I am forsworn on mere necessity.—

So to the laws at large I write my name:

[Subscribes.]

And he, that breaks them in the least degree,

Stands in attainder of eternal shame:

Suggestions are to others, as to me;

Not, I believe, although I seem so loth,

I am the last, that will last keep his oath.

But is there no quick recreation granted?

King. Ay, that there is: our court, you know, is haunted

With a refined traveller of Spain;

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,

That hath a mint of phrases in his brain:

One, whom the musick of his own vain tongue

Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony;

A man of complements, whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their mutiny:

This child of fancy, that Armado hight,

For interim to our studies, shall relate,

In high-born words, the worth of many a knight

From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;

But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,

And I will use him for my minstrelsy.

Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight,

A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.

Long. Costard the swain, and he, shall be our sport;

And, so to study, three years is but short.

Enter DULL, with a letter, and COSTARD.

Dull. Which is the duke's own person?

Biron. This, fellow; What would'st?

Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough: but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.

Biron. This is he.

Dull. Signior Arme—Arme—commends you.

There's villainy abroad; this letter will tell you more.

Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Biron. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low having: God grant us patience!

Biron. To hear? or forbear hearing?

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both.

Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriuess.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Biron. In what manner?

Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those three: I was seen with her in the manor house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is, in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman: for the form,—in some form.

Biron. For the following, sir?

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; And God defend the right!

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Biron. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [Reads.] Grant deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering patron,—

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. So it is,—

Cost. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so, so.

King. Peace.

Cost.—be to me, and every man that dares not fight!

King. No words.

Cost.—of ether men's secrets, I beseech you.

King. So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-oppressing humour to the most wholesome physick of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk.

The time when? About the sixth hour; when beasts most graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper.

So much for the time when: Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon: it is clyped thy park.

Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebony-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest: But to the place, where,—It standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden: There did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minnow of thy mirth,

Cost. Me.
King. —that unletter'd small-knowing soul,
Cost. Me.
King. —that shallow vassal,
Cost. Still me.
King. —which, as I remember, hight Costard,
Cost. O me!
King. —sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with—with,—O with—but with this I passion to say wherewith.
Cost. With a wench.
King. —with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I (as my ever esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Antony Dull; a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.

Dull. Me, an't shall please you; I am Antony Dull.

King. For Jaquenetta, (so is the weaker vessel called, which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain,) I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

Don Adriano de Armado.

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment, to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir, I was taken with a damosel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damosel.
Cost. This was no damosel neither, sir; she was a virgin.

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed, virgin.

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity; I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir.

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence; You shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.— My lord Biron, see him deliver'd o'er.— And go we, lords, to put in practice that,

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.—

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumain.]

Biron. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat, These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.—

Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir; for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again, and till then, Sit thee down, sorrow! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another part of the same. Armado's house.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Moth. No, no; O lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young days, we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertine to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir? I pretty, ar saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little: Wherefo

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same;

Arm. What? that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say, thou art quick in answers: heatest my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. He speaks the mere contrary, crosses not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three year the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Arm. I am ill at reckoning, it fitteth the

MA. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale-white shown:
Then, if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know;
For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.
Dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of MA. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and beggar?

JA. The world was very guilty of such a ballad three ages since: but, I think, now 'tis not to and; or, if it were, it would neither serve he writing, nor the tune.

MA. I will have the subject newly writ o'er,
I may example my digression by some mighty deat. Boy, I do love that country girl, that c in the park with the rational hind Costard;
eserves well.

JA. To be whipped; and yet a better love than vaster.

MA. I will tell thee wonders.

JA. With that face?

MA. I love thee.

JA. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Jag. Fair weather after you!

Dull. Come, Jaquenetta, away.

[Exeunt Dull and Jaquenetta.]

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences, ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you, than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave; away.

Cost. Let me not be pent up, sir; I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

Moth. What shall some see?

Cost. Nay, nothing, master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and, therefore, I will say nothing;
I thank God, I have as little patience as another man; and therefore I can be quiet.

[Exeunt Moth and Costard.]

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn, (which is a great argument of falsehood,) if I love:
And how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil:
there is no evil angel but love. Yet Samson was so tempted: and he had an excellent strength:
yet was Solomon so seduced; and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spannard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is, to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for, I am sure, I shall turn sonneteer. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio. [Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Part of the same. A pavilion and tents at a distance.

the Princess of France, ROSALINE, MA-KATHARINE, BOYET, Lords, and other attendants.

MA. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits:

For who the king your father sends;

Whom he sends; and what's his embassy:

Self, held precious in the world's esteem;

Whom with the sole inheritor

Perfections, that a man may owe,

Less Navarre; the plea of no less weight

Aquitain; a dowry for a queen.

Whom as prodigal of all dear grace,

Whom he was in making graces dear,

Whom she did starve the general world beside,

Whom he did starve them all to you.

1. Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,

Whom he not the painted flourish of your praise;

Whom he is bought by judgment of the eye,

Whom he is ster'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues:

Whom he is less proud to hear you tell my worth,

Whom he is you much willing to be counted wise

Whom he is finding your wit in the praise of mine.

Whom he is to task the tasker,—Good Boyet,

Whom he is to be not ignorant, all-telling fame

Whom he is to noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,

Whom he is to fulfil study shall out-wear three years,

Whom he is to man may approach his silent court:

Whom he is to be to us seemeth it a needful course,

Whom he is to we enter his forbidden gates,

To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,

Bold of your worthiness, we single you

As our best-moving fair solicitor:

Tell him, the daughter of the king of France,

On serious business, craving quick despatch,

Impertunes personal conference with his grace.

Haste, signify so much; while we attend,

Like humbly-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boy. Proud of employment, willingly I go. [Exit.]

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.—

Who are the votaries, my loving lords,

That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

1 Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin.

Know you the man?

Mar. I know him, madam; at a marriage feast,

Between lord Perigot and the beauteous heir

Of Jaques Falconbridge solemnized,

In Normandy saw I this Longaville:

A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;

Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:

Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.

The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,

(If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil),

Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;

Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still

Will

It should none spare, that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is't not so?

Mar. They say so most, that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.

Who are the rest?

Kath. The young Dumain, a well-accomplish'd youth,

Of all, that virtue love, for virtue lov'd:

Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace, though he had no wit.
I saw him at the duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good, I saw,
Is my report to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: if I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest;
Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love;
That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?
Mar. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter BOYET.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?
Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he, and his competitors in oath,
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
(Like one that comes here to besiege his court,)
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.
Here comes Navarre. [The ladies mask.]

Enter KING, LONGAVILLE, DUMAINE, BIRON, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. Fair, I give you back again; and, welcome
I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome then; conduct me thither.

King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear, your grace hath sworn-out house-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it:
But pardon me, I am too sudden-bald;
To teach a teacher ill besemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Gives a paper.]

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner; that I were away;
For you'll prove perjurd, if you make me stay.

Biron. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Biron. I know, you did.

Ros. How needless was it then
To ask the question!

Biron. You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis long of you that spur me with such questions.

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast,
'twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour, that fools should ask.

Biron. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!

Biron. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Biron. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum,

Disbursed by my father in his wars.
But say, that he, or we, (as neither have,) Receiv'd that sum; yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more; in surety of the One part of Aquitain is bound to us,
Although not valued to the money's worth.
If then the king your father will restore
But that one half, which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitain,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid
An hundred thousand crowns; and not dem-
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitain;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitain so gelded as it is.
Dear princess, were not his requests so far From reason's yielding, your fair self should
A yielding, 'gainst some reason, in my breast
And go well satisfied to France again.

Prin. You do the king my father too much
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseemly to confess receipt
Of that, which hath so faithfully been paid.

King. I do protest, I never heard of it;
And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitain.

Prin. We arrest your word
Boyet, you can produce acquittances,
For such a sum, from special officers
Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.
Boyet. So please your grace, the packet is not Where that and other specialties are bound.
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which inter-

You may not come, fair princess, in my gate
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my house
Though so denied fair harbour in my house
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and for
To-morrow shall we visit you again.

Biron. Lady, I will commend you to my

Ros. 'Pray you, do my commendations; I be glad to see it.

Biron. I would you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Biron. Sick at the heart.

Ros. Alack, let it bleed.

Biron. Would that do it good?

Ros. My physick says, I.

Biron. Will you prick 't with your eye?

Ros. No poynt, with my knife.

Biron. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Biron. I cannot stay thanksgiving. [R that, were a shame.

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard!

Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended:
She is an heir of Falconbridge.

Long. Nay, my choler is ended.

a most sweet lady.
et. Not unlike, sir; that may be. [Exit Long.] an. What's her name, in the cap?
et. Katherine, by good hap.
an. Is she wedded, or no?
et. To her will, sir, or so.
an. You are welcome, sir; adieu!
et. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you.
 [Exit Biron.—Ladies unmask.]
 That last is Biron, the merry mad-cap lord;
 word with him but a jest.
et. And every jest but a word.
f. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
et. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board.
 Two hot sheeps, marry!
et. And wherefore not ships?
ep. Sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.
 You sheep, and I pasture; Shall that finish the jest?
f. So you grant pasture for me.
 [Offering to kiss her.]
 Not so, gentle beast;
 As are no common, though several they be.
f. Belonging to whom?
 To my fortunes and me.
 Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree:
 All war of wits were much better used than and his book-men; for here 'tis abused.
f. If my observation, (which very seldom lies,) heart's still rhetoric, disclosed with eyes, me not now, Navarre is infected.
 With what?
 With that, which we lovers entitle affected.

Prin. Your reason?
Boyet. Why, all his behaviours did make their retire
 To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire:
 His heart, like an agate, with your print impressed,
 Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed:
 His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
 Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be;
 All senses to that sense did make their repair,
 To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
 Methought, all his senses were lock'd in his eye,
 As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
 Who, tending their own worth, from where they were glass'd,
 Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
 His face's own margent did quote such amazes,
 That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes:
 I'll give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
 An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
Prin. Come, to our pavilion: Boyet is dispos'd—Boyet. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclos'd:
 I only have made a mouth of his eye,
 By adding a tongue, which I know will not lie.
Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully.
Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.
Ros. Then was Venus like her mother; for her father is but grim.
Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches?
Mar. No.
Boyet. What then, do you see?
Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.
Boyet. You are too hard for me.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Another part of the same.

*Enter ARMADO and MOTH.*Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

i. Concofines!— [Singing.] Sweet air!—Go, tenderness of years; take up, give enlargement to the swain, bring him ely hither; I must employ him in a letter ove.

Master, will you win your love with a brawl?

How mean'st thou? brawling in French?

No, my complete master: but to jig off a the tongue's end, canary to it with your amour it with turning up your eye-lids; note, and sing a note; sometime through out, as if you swallowed love with singing metime through the nose, as if you snuffed by smelling love; with your hat penthouseer the shop of your eyes; with your arms on your thin belly-doublet, like a rabbit on or your hands in your pocket, like a man old painting; and keep not too long in one at a snip and away: These are complements, e humours, these betray nice wenches—that be betrayed without these; and make them note, (do you note, men?) that most are to these.

How hast thou purchased this experience?

By my penny of observation.

But O,—but O,—

—the hobby-horse is forgot.

Callst thou my love, hobby-horse?

No, master; the hobby-horse is but a nd your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have got your love?

Almost I had.

Negligent student! learn her by heart.

By heart, and in heart, boy.

And out of heart, master: all those three rove.

What wilt thou prove?

Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart, that you cannot enjoy her.

Arm. I am all these three.Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.Arm. Fetch hither the swain; he must carry me a letter.Moth. A message well sympathised; a horse to be ambassador for an ass!Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited: But I go.Arm. The way is but short; away.Moth. As swift as lead, sir.Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious?

Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.Arm. I say, lead is slow.Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so:
Is that lead slow, which is fir'd from a gun?Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he:—
I shoot thee at the swain.Moth. Thump then, and I flee. [Exit.]Arm. A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace!By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is return'd.Re-enter MOTH and COSTARD.Moth. A wonder, master; here's a Costard broken in a shin.Arm. Some enigma, some riddle: come,—thy l'envoy;—begin.Cost. No enigma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve in the mail, sir: O, sir, plantain, a plain plantain;
no l'envoy, no l'envoy, no salve, sir, but a plantain!Arm. By virtue, thou enforeest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O, pardon me, my stars! Dost the inconsiderate take salve for l'envoy, and the word, l'envoy, for a salve?

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not l'envoy a salve?

Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain
Some obscure precedence, that hath tofore been said.
I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
There's the moral: Now the l'envoy.

Moth. I will add the l'envoy: Say the moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,

Were still at odds, being but three:
Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three:

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose;
Would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat:—

Sir, your pennyworth's good, an your goose be fat.—
To sell a bargain well, is as cunning as fast and loose:
Let me see a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither: How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for the l'envoy.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain; Thus came your argument in;

Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought;
And he ended the market.

Arm. But tell me; how was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth; I will speak that l'envoy:

I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O, marry me to one France;—I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean, setting thee at liberty, enfranchising thy person; thou wert im-mured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true; and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta: there is remuneration; [Giving him money.] for the best ward of mine honour is, rewarding my dependents. Moth, follow. [Exit.]

Moth. Like the sequel, l.—Signior Costard, adieu.
Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incoy Jew!— [Exit Moth.]

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration!
O, that's the Latin word for three farthings:
three farthings—remuneration.—What's the price of this inkle? a penny:—No, I'll give you a remuneration: why, it carries it.—Remuneration!—why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will buy and sell out of this word.

Enter BIRON.

Biron. O, my good knave Costard! exceed well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation may a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, half-penny farthing.

Biron. O, why then, three farthings-worth in. What's your will, sir? what's your will?

 t. I have a letter from monsieur Biron, to one lady Rosaline.

 of mine:

 letter is mistook, it importeth none here;
 writ to Jaquenetta.

in. We will read it, I swear:

 ear.

et. [Reads.] By heaven, that thou art fair, is nfallible; true, that thou art beautiful; true, that thou art lovely: More fairer than fair,
 ful than beautiful; truer than truth itself, commiseration on thy heroic vassal! The unanimous and most illustrious king Cophetua set every part.

Thine, in the dearest design of industry,
 Don Adriano de Armado.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemeau lion roar
 'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey;

Submissive fall his princely feet before,
 And he from forage will incline to play:
 But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?
 Food for his rage, repasture for his den.

Prin. What plume of feathers is he, that indited this letter?

What vane? what weather-cock? did you ever hear better?

Boyet. I am much deceived, but I remember the style.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it erewhile.

Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;

A phantasm, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
 To the prince, and his book-mates.

Prin. Thou, fellow, a word:
 Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord.

Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.

Prin. From which lord, to which lady?

Cost. From my lord Biron, a good master of mine,
 To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this; 'twill be thine another day. [Exit Princess and Train.]

Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?

Ros. Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.

Ros. Why she, that bears the bow.

Finely put off!
 Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou marry,

Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry.
 Finely put on!

Ros. Well then, I am the shooter.

Boyet. And who is your deer?

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come near.

Finely put on, indeed!—
 Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower: Have I hit her now?

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Ros. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it, [Singing.
 Thou canst not hit it, my good man.]

Boyet. An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
 An I cannot, another can.

[Exit Ros. and Kath.]
 Cost. By my troth, most pleasant! how both did fit it!

Mar. A mark marvellous well shot; for they both did hit it.

Boyet. A mark! O, mark but that mark; A mark, says my lady!

Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at, if it may be.
 Mar. Wide o'the bow hand! I'faith your hand is out.

Cost. Indeed, a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Boyet. An if my hand be out, then, belike your hand is in.

Cost. Then will she get the upshot by cleaving the pin.

Mar. Come, come, you talk gressily, your lips grow foul.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir; challenge her to bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing; Good night, my good owl. [Exit Boyet and Maria.]

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown
 Lord, lord! how the ladies and I have put him down!

O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar wit!
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.

Armatho' o' the one side,—O, a most dainty man!
To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan!
To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly
a' will swear!—

And his page o' t' other side, that handful of wit!
Ah, heavens, it is a most pathological nit!
Sola, sola!

[Shouting within.
[Exit Costard, running.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter HOLOFERNES, Sir NATHANIEL, and DULL.

Nath. Very reverent sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, in sanguis,— blood; ripe as a pomewater, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of caelo,—the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab, on the face of terra,—the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: But, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.

Dull. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a pricket.
Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way, of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,— after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my haud credo for a deer.

Dull. I said the deer was not a haud credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!—O thou monster ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts:

And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be

(Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts, that do fructify in us more than he.

For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool,

So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him
in a school:

But, omne bene, say I; being of an old father's mind,
Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.

Dull. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wit

What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

Hol. Dietyinna, good man Dull; Dietyinna, good man Dull.

Dull. What is Dietyinna?

Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old, when Adam was no more;

And raught not to five weeks, when he came to fivescore.

The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the pollution holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old:
and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess kill'd.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I have call'd the deer the princess kill'd, a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter; for it argues facility.

The praiseful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pleasing pricket;

Some say, a sore; but not a sore, till now made with shooting.

The dogs did yell; put I to sore, then sore;
from thicket;

Or pricket, sore, or else sore; the people hooting.

If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sore sore L!

Of one sore I an hundred make, by adding be-more L.

Nath. A rare talent!

Dull. If a talent be a claw, look how he him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, sir, a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, fishes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, moti-volutions: these are begot in the ventricle o' mory, nourished in the womb of pia mater:
deliver'd upon the mellowing of occasion: B gift is good in those in whom it is acute, am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you; a may my parishioners; for their sons are tutor'd by you, and their daughters profit greatly under you: you are a good member o' commonwealth.

Hol. Mehercle, if their sons be ingenious shall want no instruction: if their daughters capable, I will put it to them: But, vir sapi-pauca loquitur: a soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jaq. God give you good morrow, master p Hol. Master person,—quasi pers-on.—And should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he t liketh to a hogshead.

Hol. Of piercing a hogshead! a good lu conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for;
pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is

Jaq. Good master person, be so good as re this letter; it was given me by Costard, an me from Don Armatho: I beseech you, read

Hol. Fausta, precor gelida quando pecus omumbra

Ruminat,—and so forth. Ah, good old Man
I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of V

—Vinogia, Vinogia,

Ch! non te vede, ei non te pregia.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who underst thee not, loves thee not.—Ut, re, sol, la, mi Under pardon, sir, what are the contents; rather, as Horace says in his—What, my verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a Leges, domine.

Nath. If love make me forsworn, how;
swear to love?

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty v
Thought to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful Those thoughts to me were oaks, to th osiers bowed.

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thin
Where all those pleasures live, that art comprehend:

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee
suffice;

Well learned is that tongue, that well co commend:

All ignorant that soul, that sees thee w wonder;

(Which is to me some praise, that I thy admire.)

Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voi dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is musick, and fire.

Celestial, as thou art, oh pardon, love, this v
That sings heaven's praise with such an e tongue!

Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and se the accent: let me supervise the canzonet, are only numbers ratified; but, for the clef, ty, and golden cadence of poesy, caret. Ovidius was the man: and why, indeed, Naso; but melting out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, erks of invention? Initiari, is nothing: so doth sound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired his rider. But damocella virgin, was this staid to you?

9. Ay, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of strange queen's lords.

4. I will overglance the superscript. To the white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline. I'll look again on the intellect of the letter, for nomination of the party writing to the person ten unto:

Your Ladyship's in all desired employment, BIRON.

Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries the king; and here he hath framed a letter sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath misad.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this into the royal hand of the king; it may conmuch: Stay not thy compliment; I forgive luty; adieu.

7. Good Costard, go with me.—Sir, God save life!

st. Have with thee, my girl.

[Exeunt Cost. and Jag.]

24. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, religiously; and as a certain father saith—

7. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear rable colours. But, to return to the verses; they please you, sir Nathaniel?

24. Marvellous well for the pen.

7. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain of mine; where if, before repast, it shall be you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, by privilege I have with the parents of the aid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; and I will prove those verses to be very undue, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor inon: I beseech your society.

24. And thank you too: for society, saith the is the happiness of life.

7. And, certes, the text most infallibly consents it.—Sir, [To Dull.] I do invite you too; shall not say me, nay: pauca verba. Away; 'tween are at their game, and we will to our ution. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another part of the same.

on. The king he is hunting the deer; I am ing myself: they have pitch'd a toil; I am g in a pitch; pitch, that defiles; defile! a word. Well, Set thee down, sorrow! for so, say, the fool said, and so say I, and I the Well proved, wit! By the lord, this love is ad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a: Well proved again on my side! I will not if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O, ter eye,—by this light, but for her eye. I d not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my t. By heaven, I do love: and it hath taught o rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, hath one of my sonnets already; the clown it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: t clown, sweetest fool, sweetest lady! By rold, I would not care a pin, if the other were in: Here comes one with a paper; God him grace to groan! [Gets up into a tree.]

Enter the KING, with a paper.

ng. Ah me!

ron. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven!—Proceed, t Cupid; thou hast thump'd him with thy bolt under the left pap:—i' faith secrets.—

ng. [Reads.] So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not those fresh morning drops upon the rose, ny eye beams, when their fresh rays have smote night of dew that on my cheeks down flows:

Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright

Through the transparent bosom of the deep.

As doth thy face through tears of mine give light;

Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep:

No drop but as a coach doth carry thee,

So videst thou triumphing in my woe;

Do but behold the tears, that swell in me,

And they thy glory through my grief will show:

But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep

My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.

O queen of queens, how far dost thou excel!

No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.—

How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper;

Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes here?

[Steps aside.]

Enter LONGAVILLE, with a paper.

What, Longaville! and reading! I listen, ear.

Biron. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool, appear!

[Aside.]

Long. Ah me! I am forsworn.

Biron. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers.

[Aside.]

King. In love, I hope; Sweet fellowship in

[Aside.]

shame!

Biron. One drunkard loves another of the name.

[Aside.]

Long. Am I the first, that have been perjur'd so?

Biron. [Aside.] I could put thee in comfort; not by two, that I know:

Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner-cap of society,

The shape of love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear, these stubborn lines lack power to move:

O sweet Maria, empress of my love!

These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.

Biron. [Aside.] O, rhymes are guards on wanton

Cupid's hose:

Disfigure not his slop.

Long. This same shall go.—

[He reads the sonnet.]

Did not the heavenly rhetorick of thine eye

(Guinst whom the world cannot hold argument),

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?

Vows, for thee broke, deserve not punishment.

A woman I forswore; but, I will prove,

Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:

My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;

Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.

Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is;

Then thou fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,

Exhal'st this vapour vow; in thee it is:

If broken then, it is no fault of mine;

If by me broke, What fool is not so wise,

To lose an oath to win a paradise?

Biron. [Aside.] This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity;

A green goose, a goddess: pure, pure idolatry.

God amend us, God amend! we are much out

o' the way.

Enter DUMAIN, with a paper.

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company I stay. [Stepping aside.]

Biron. [Aside.] All hid, all hid, an old infant play:

Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,

And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.

More sacks to the mill! O heavens, I have my wish;

Dumain transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!

Dum. O most divine Kate!

Biron. O most profane coxcomb! [Aside.]

Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!

Biron. By earth she is but corporal: there you lie. [Aside.]

Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber coted.

Biron. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.

[Aside.]

Dum. As upright as the cedar.

Biron. Scoop, I say;

Her shoulder is with child. [Aside.]

Dum. As fair as day.

Biron. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine. [Aside.]

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long. And I had mine! [Aside.]

King. And I mine too, good Lord ! [Aside.
Biron. Amen, so I had mine : Is not that a good word ?

Dum. I would forget her ; but a fever she reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.

Biron. A fever in your blood, why, then incision would let her out in saucers ; sweet misprision !

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode, that I have writ.

Biron. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit.

Dum. On a day, (alack the day !)
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air ;
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, gan passage find ;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow ;
Air, would I might triumph so !
But alack, my hand is sworn,
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn :
Now, alack, for youth unmet ;
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee :
Thou, for whom even Jove would swear, Juno but an Ethiop were ;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.—

This will I send ; and something else more plain,
 That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
 O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
 Were lovers too ! fill, to example ill,
 Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note ;
 For none offend, where all alike do dote.

Long. Dumain, [advancing.] thy love is far from charity,

That in love's grief desir'st society :
 You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
 To be o'erheard, and taken napping so.

King. Come, sir, [advancing.] you blush ; as his, your case is such ;

You chide at him, offending twice as much :
 You do not love Maria ! Longaville
 Did never sonnet for her sake compile ;
 Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart
 His loving bosom, to keep down his heart !
 I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
 And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.
 I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your fashion ;
 Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion :
 Ah me ! says one ; O Jove ! the other cries ;
 One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes :
 You would for paradise break faith and troth ;

[To Long.
 And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
 [To Dumain.

What will Biron say, when that he shall hear
 A faith infring'd, which such a zeal did swear ?
 How will he scorn ! how will he spend his wit ?
 How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it ?
 For all the wealth, that ever I did see,
 I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.—
 Ah, good my liege, I pray thee pardon me ;

[Descends from the tree.
 Good heart, what grace hast thou, thus to reprove

These worms for loving, that art most in love ?
 Your eyes do make no coaches ; in your tears,
 There is no certain princess, that appears :
 You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing ;
 Tush, none but minstrels like of sonnetting.
 But are you not asham'd ? nay, are you not,
 All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot ?
 You found his mote ; the king your mote did see ;
 But I a beam do find in each of three.
 O, what a scene of foolery I have seen,
 Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen !
 O me, with what strict patience have I sat,
 To see a king transformed to a gnat !
 To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
 And profound Solomon to tune a jigg,

And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
 And critick Timon laugh at idle toys !
 Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumain
 And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain ?
 And where my liege's ? all about the breast—
 A candle, ho !

King. Too bitter is thy jest.
 Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view ?

Biron. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you
 I, that am honest ; I, that hold it sin
 To break the vow I am engaged in ;
 I am betray'd, by keeping company

With moon-like men, of strange inconsistency.
 When shall you see me write a thing in rhye
 Or groan for Joan ? or spend a minute's time
 In pruning me ? When shall you hear, that I Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
 A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
 A leg, a limb ?—

King. Soft ; Whither away so fast
 A true man, or a thief, that gallops so ?

Biron. I post from love ; good lover, let me

Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD

Jaq. God bless the king !

King. What present hast thou ?
Cost. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason
Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing the
 The treason, and you, go in peace away together

Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter read ;

Our parson misdoubts it ; 'twas treason, he says.
King. Biron, read it over.

[Giving him the Jaq. Of Costard.

King. Where hadst thou it ?
Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio

King. How now ! what is in you ? why dost tear it ?

Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy ; your grace not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and the let's hear it.

Dum. It is Biron's writing, and here is his :

[Picks up the Biron. Ah, you whorson loggerhead, [To tard.] you were born to do me shame—

Guilty, my lord, guilty ; I confess, I confess.
King. What ?

Biron. That you three fools lack'd me to make up the mess :

He, he, and you, and you, my liege, and I,
 Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die
 O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Biron. True, true ; we are fo
 Will these turtles be gone ?

King. Hence, sirs ; aw Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the tr stay. [Exeunt Costard and Jaque.

Biron. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us em
 As true we are, as flesh and blood can his

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his Young blood will not obey an old decree

We cannot cross the cause why we were born
 Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rent lines show love of thine ?

Biron. Did they, quoth you ? Who sees the venly Rosaline,

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
 At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
 Bows not his vassal head ; and, stricken blind
 Kisses the base ground with obedient brea

What preempry eagle-sighted eye
 Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
 That is not blinded by her majesty ?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee
 My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon ;
 She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron,
 O, but for my love, day would turn to night

all complexions the cull'd sovereignty
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;
ere several worthies make one dignity;
Where nothing wants, that wantitself doth seek.
d me the flourish of all gentle tongues,— Fie, painted rhetoric! O, she needs it not:
things of sale a seller's praise belongs;
She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.
ither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:
ty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
tis the sun, that maketh all things shine!
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.
Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.

Who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear, beauty doth beauty lack,
as she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair, that is not full so black.
King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night;
beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.
Biron. Devils socnest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

in black my lady's brows be deckt,
t mourns, that painting, and usurping hair,
ld ravish doters with a false aspect;
And therefore is she born to make black fair.
favour turns the fashion of the days;
For native blood is counted painting now;
therefore red, that would avoid dispraise, Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.

m. To look like her, are chimney-sweepers black.

King. And, since her time, are colliers counted bright.

King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack.

m. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.
ow. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
r fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'Twere good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,

I find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.

ow. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.

King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.

m. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.

King. Look, here's thy love: my foot and her face see. [Showing his shoe.]

ow. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes, I'er feet were much too dainty for such tread!

m. O vile! then as she goes, what upward lies the street should see as she walk'd over head.

King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?

ow. O, nothing so sure: and thereby all for-sworn.

King. Then leave this chat; and, good Biron, now prove

our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.

n. Ay, marry, there;—some flattery for this evil.

King. O, some authority how to proceed; tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.

n. Some salve for perjury.

ow. O, 'tis more than need!— at you then, affection's men at arms:

der, what you first did swear unto;—

it,—to study,—and to see no woman;—

reason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.

can you fast? your stomachs are too young;
abstinence engenders maladies.

where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
each of you hath forsworn his book:

ou still dream, and pore, and thereon look?

hen would you, my lord, or you, or you, found the ground of study's excellence,

out the beauty of a woman's face?

owen's eyes this doctrine I derive:
are the ground, the books, the academes,

whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.

universal plodding prisons up limble spirits in the arteries;

otion, and long during-action, tires

The sinewy vigour of the traveller.

Now, for not looking on a woman's face,

You have in that forsworn the use of eyes;

And study too, the causer of your vow:

For where is any author in the world,

Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,

And where we are, our learning likewise is.

Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,

Do we not likewise see our learning there?

O, we have made a vow to study, lords;

And in that vow we have forsworn our books;

For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,

In leaden contemplation, have found out

Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes

Of beauteous tutors have enrich'd you with?

Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;

And therefore finding barren practisers,

Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil:

But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,

Lives not alone immured in the brain;

But with the motion of all elements,

Courses as swift as thought in every power;

And gives to every power a double power,

Above their functions and their offices.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye;

A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;

A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,

When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;

Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible;

Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;

Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste:

For valour, is not love a Hercules,

Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?

Subtle as sphinx; as sweet, and musical,

As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;

And, when love speaks, the voice of all the gods

Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Never durst poet touch a pen to write,

Until his ink were temper'd with love's sighs;

O, then his lines would ravish savage ears,

And plant in tyrants mild humility.

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:

They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;

They are the books, the arts, the academes,

That show, contain, and nourish all the world;

Else, none at all in aught proves excellent:

Then fools you were these women to forswear;

Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.

For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love;

Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men;

Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;

Or women's sake, by whom we men are men;

Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,

Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths:

It is religion to be thus forsworn:

For charity itself fulfils the law;

And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!

Biron. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords;

Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these gloses by:
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them
thither;

Then, homeward, every man attach the hand
Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon

We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;

For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours,
Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Biron. Allons! Allons!—Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;

And justice always whirls in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn;

If so, our copper buys no better-treasure.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Another part of the same.

Enter HOLOFERNES, SIR NATHANIEL, and DULL.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; and pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intitled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thronical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasms, such insociable and point-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak, dout, fine, when he should say, doubt; det, when he should pronounce, debt; d, e, b, t; not, d, e, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour, vocatur, nebour; neigh, abbreviated, ne: This is abominable, (which he would call abominable,) it insinuateth me of insanie; Ne intelligis domine? to make frantick lunatick.

Nath. Laus deo, bone intelligo.

Hol. Bone?—bone, for bene: Priscian a little scratch'd; 'twill serve.

Enter ARMADO, MOTH, and COSTARD.

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, & gaudeo.

Arm. Chirra!

[To Moth.

Hol. Quare Chirra, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encounter'd.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps. [To Costard aside.

Cost. O, they have lived long on the alms-basket of words! I marvel, thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Moth. Peace; the peal begins.

Arm. Monsieur, [To Hol.] are you not letter'd?

Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book:—What is a, b, spelt backward with a horn on his head?

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth. Ba, most silly sheep, with a horn:—You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them, a, e, i.—

Moth. The sheep: the other two concludes it; o, u.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick renew of wit: snip, snap, quick and home; it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit.

Moth. Offer'd by a child to an old man; which is wit-odd.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip thy fig.

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy circum circa: A gig of a cuckold's horn!

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, half-penny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of dition. O, an the heavens were so pleased, that wert but my bastard! what a joyful father would thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dum, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for ung. Arm. Arts-man, præambula; we will be si from the barbarous. Do you not educate you the charge-house on the top of the mountain.

Hol. Or, mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the moun

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet ple and affection, to congratulate the princess; whic rude multitude call, the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most genero is liable, congruent, and measurable for the noon: the word is well cull'd, chose; sweet apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman my familiar, I do assure you, very good frie For what is inward between us, let it pass: beseech thee, remember thy courtesy;—I b thee, apparel thy head;—and among other i tunate and most serious designs,—and of import indeed, too;—but let that pass:—for tell thee it will please his grace (by the s sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder with his royal finger, thus, dally with my ment, with my mustachio; but sweet hea that pass. By the world, I recount no fable: certain special honours it pleaseth his great impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of trave hath seen the world: but let that pass.—Th all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do imprecy,—that the king would have me prese princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful tation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire Now, understanding that the curate and you self are good at such eruptions, and sudden ing out of mirth, as it were, I have acquaint withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her th worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning soj tertainment of time, some show in the poste this day, to be rendered by our assistanc king's command, and this most gallant, illu and learned gentleman,—before the prin say, none so fit as to present the nine worth

Nath. Where will you find men worthy to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, t of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pomy great; the page Hercules.

Arm. Pardon, sir, error: he is not q enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall Hercules in minority: his enter and exit strangling a snake; and I will have an apl that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any audience hiss, you may cry: well done, Hen now thou crushest the snake! that is the make an offence gracious; though few ha grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the worthies?—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, Goodman Dull! thou hast spol word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Attens! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or on the tabor to the worthies, and let them e the hay.

J. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport, away.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Other part of the same. Before the Princess's pavilion.

Enter the PRINCESS, KATHARINE, ROSA-LINE, and MARIA.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart, Spirits come thus plentifully in :
My wall'd about with diamonds !

Kath. You, what I have from the loving king.

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that ?

Prin. Nothing but this ? yes, as much love in rhyme,

Would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper,
on both sides the leaf, margent and all ;
He was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his god-head wax ;
He hath been five thousand years a boy.

Prin. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him ; he kill'd your sister.

Prin. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy ;
so she died : had she been light, like you,
such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
might have been a grandam ere she died :
so may you ; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word ?

Prin. A light condition in a beauty dark.

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Prin. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff ;
before, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it still i' the dark.

Prin. So do not you ; for you are a light wench.

Ros. Indeed, I weigh not you ; and therefore light.

Prin. You weigh me not, — O, that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason ; for, Past cure is still past care.

Prin. Well bandied both ; a set of wit well play'd.

Ros. Rosaline, you have a favour to :

to sent it ? and what is it ?

Prin. I would, you knew :

if my face were but as fair as yours, favour were as great ; be witness this.

Ros. I have verses too, I thank Birón :

numbers true ; and, were the numb'ring too,
were the fairest goddess on the ground :

I compar'd to twenty thousand fairs ;
he hath drawn my picture in his letter !

Prin. Any thing like ?

Ros. Much, in the letters ; nothing in the praise.

Prin. Beauteous as ink ; a good conclusion.

Ros. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Prin. 'Ware pencils ! How ? let me not die your debtor,

red dominical, my golden letter :

that your face were not so full of O's !

Ros. A pox of that jest ! and beshrew all shrews !

Prin. But what was sent to you from fair Dumain ?

Ros. Madam, this glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain ?

Ros. Yes, madam ; and moreover,
a thousand verses of a faithful lover :

age translation of hypocrisy.

ly compil'd, profound simplicity.

Prin. This, and these pearls, to me sent Longaville ; letter is too long by half a mile.

Ros. I think no less : Dost thou not wish in heart, chain were longer, and the letter short ?

Prin. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

Ros. We are wise girls, to mock our lovers so.

Prin. They are worse folks to purchase mocking so.

It same Birón I'll torture ere I go.

That I knew he were bnt in by the week !

For I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek ;

wait the season, and observe the times,

spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes ;

shape his service wholly to my behests ;

make him proud to make me proud that jests !

So portent-like would I o'ersway his state,
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,

As wit turn'd fool : folly, in wisdom hatch'd,
Hath wisdom's warrant, and the help of school ;

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excess,
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note,
As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote ;

Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter BOYET.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter ! Where's her grace ?

Prin. Thy news, Boyet ?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare ! —

Arm, wench, arm ! encounters mounted are Against your peace : Love doth approach disguis'd,
Armed in arguments ; you'll be surpris'd :

Must your wits ; stand in your own defence ;
Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Dennis to saint Cupid ! What are they,
That charge their breath against us ? say, scout, say.

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore,
I thought to close my eyes some half an hour ;

When, lo ! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold address

The king and his companions : warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And overheard what you shall overhear ;

That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here.

Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath conn'd his embassage :

Action, and accent, did they teach him there ;
Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear :

And ever and anon they made a doubt,
Presence majestical must put him out ;

For, quoth the king, an angel shalt thou see ;
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.

The boy reply'd, An angel is not evil ;
I should have fear'd her, had she been a devil.

With that all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder ;

Making the hold wax by their praises bolder.

One rubb'd his elbow, thus ; and flier'd, and swore,
A better speech was never spoke before :

Another, with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd, Via ! we will do't, come what will come :

The third he caper'd, and cried, All goes well :

The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.

With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter, so profound,

That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us ?

Boyet. They do, they do ; and are apparel'd thus, —

Like Muscovites, or Russians : as I guess,
Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance :

And every one his love-feat will advance
Unto his several mistress ; which they'll know
By favours several, which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so ? the gallants shall be task'd : —

For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd ;
And not a man of them shall have the grace,
Despite of suit, to see a lady's face. —

Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear ;
And then the king will court thee for his dear ;

Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine ;
So shall Birón take me for Rosaline.

And change you favours too ; so shall your loves
Woo contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.

Ros. Come on then ; wear the favours most in sight.

Kath. But, in this changing, what is your intent ?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs :

They do it but in mocking merriment ;
And mock for mock is only my intent.

Their several counsels they unshom shall
To loves mistook ; and so be mock'd withal,
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk, and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?
Prin. No; to the death, we will not move a foot:
 Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace;
 But, while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
 And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and, I make no doubt,
 The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.
 There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'erthrown;
 To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own:
 So shall we stay, mocking intended game;
 And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.

Boyet. The trumpet sounds; he mask'd, the maskers come.
 [Trumpets sound within. [The ladies mask.

Enter the KING, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN, in Russian habits, and masked; MOTH, Musicians, and Attendants.

Moth. All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffata.

Moth. A holy parcel of the fairest dames,

[The ladies turn their backs to him.

That ever turn'd their backs—to mortal views!

Biron. Their eyes, villain, their eyes.

Moth. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!

Out—

Boyet. True; out, indeed.

Moth. Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouchsafe

Not to behold—

Biron. Once to behold, rogue.

Moth. Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes, —with your sun-beamed eyes—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;

You were best call it, daughter-beamed eyes.

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Biron. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue.

Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet:

If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
 That some plain man recount their purposes:
 Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?

Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boyet. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,
 To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say, that they have measur'd many a mile,

To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so: ask them, how many inches

Is in one mile; if they have measur'd many,

The measure then of one is easily told.

Boyet. If, to come hither you have measur'd miles,

And many miles; the princess bids you tell,

How many inches do fill up one mile.

Biron. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps.

Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary steps,

Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,

Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Biron. We number nothing, that we spend for you;

Our duty is so rich, so infinite,

That we may do it still without account.

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,

That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine

(Those clouds remov'd,) upon our wat'ry eyne.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;

Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure do but vouchsafe one change:

Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, musick, then: nay, you must do it soon.

Not yet;—no dance:—thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you estrang'd?

Ros. You took the moon at full; but now chang'd.

King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the The musick plays; vouchsafe some motion to Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come he chance,

We'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not do

King. Why take we hands then?

Ros. Only to part friends

Court'sy, sweet hearts; and so the measure

King. More measure of this measure; but rice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price

King. Prize you yourselves; what buys company?

Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be

Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so a Twice to your visor, and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more

Ros. In private then.

King. I am best pleas'd with Biron. White-handed mistress, one sweet with thee.

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is Biron. Nay then, two treys, (an if you gu

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey;—Well run,

There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, a

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you

Prin. Let it not be

Biron. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin. Gall? bitter.

Biron. Therefore

Mar. Name it.

Dum. Fair lady,—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord

Take that for your fair lady.

Dum. Please it you,

Boyet. The tongues of mocking venches are a

As is the razor's edge invisible,

Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen;

Above the sense of sense: so sensible

Ros. Not one word more, my maids; brea

Biron. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure

[Exeunt King, Lords, Moth, Musick

Attendants.

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovit these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

 et. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.
 Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross;
 fat, fat.
 O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!
 they not, think you, hang themselves tonight?
 ever, but in visors, show their faces?
 Bert Birón was out of countenance quite.
 O! they were all in lamentable cases!
 thing was weeping-ripe for a good word.
 Birón did swear himself out of all suit.
 Damaín was at my service, and his sword:
 at, quoth I; my servant straight was mute.
 Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;
 row you, what he call'd me?
 Qualm, perhaps.
 Yes, in good faith.
 Go, sickness as thou art!
 Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.
 Will you hear? the king is my love sworn.
 And quick Birón hath plighted faith to me.
 And Longaville was for my service born.
 Damaín is mine, as sure as bark on ear:
 Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:
 liately they will again be here in their own shapes; for it can never be, will digest this harsh indignity.
 Will they return?
 They will, they will, God knows;
 rap for joy, though they are lame with blows;
 ore, change favours; and, when they repair,
 like sweet roses in this summer air.
 How blow! how blow! speak to be understood.
 Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud;
 mask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,
 angels veiling clouds, or roses blown.
 Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do, return in their own shapes to woo?
 God madam, if by me you'll be advis'd, knock them still, as well known, as disguis'd:
 complain to them what fools were here,
 his'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;
 wonder, what they were; and to what end shallow shows, and prologue vilely penn'd, their rough carriage so ridiculous,
 not be presented at our tent to us.
 Ladies, withdraw; the gallants are at hand.
 Whip to our tents, as roes run over land.
 [Exit Princess, Ros. Kath. and Maria.]
 KING, BIRÓN, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAÍN, in their proper habits.
 Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?
 Gone to her tent: Please it your majesty,
 and me she vouchsafes to her thither?
 That she vouchsafes me audience for one word.
 I will; and so will she, I know, my lord.
 [Exit.]
 This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons peas;
 sters it again, when God doth please:
 wit's pedler; and retails his wares es, and wassels, meetings, markets, fairs;
 he that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,
 not the grace to grace it with such show.
 Allant pins the wench on his sleeve;
 been Adam, he had tempted Eve:
 carve too, and lip: Why, this is he,
 ess'd away his hand in courtesy;
 the ape of form, monsieur the nice,
 when he plays at tables, chides the dice ourable terms; nay, he can sing most meanly; and, in ushering, him who can: the ladies call him, sweet;
 airs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet:
 the flower that smiles on every one,
 w his teeth as white as whales bone:
 nsciences, that will not die in debt,
 n the due of honey-tongued Boyet.
 A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart,
 at Armado's page out of his part!

Enter the PRINCESS, usher'd by BOYET; ROSA-LINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, and Attendants.
 Biron. See where it comes!—Behaviour, what wert thou,
 Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou now?
 King. Ah-hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!
 Prin. Fair, in all hail, is foul, as I conceive.
 King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
 Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.
 King. We came to visit you; and purpose now
 To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it them.
 Prin. This field shall hold me; and so hold your vow:
 Nor God, nor I, delight in perjurd men.
 King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke;
 The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
 Prin. You nick-name virtue: vice you should have spoke.
 For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.
 Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
 As the unsullied lily, I protest,
 A world of torments though I should endure,
 I would not yield to be your house's guest:
 So much I hate a breaking-cause to be
 Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.
 King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,
 Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.
 Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear;
 We have had pastimes here, and pleasant game;
 A mess of Russians left us but of late.
 King. How, madam? Russians?
 Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
 Trim gallants, full of courtship, and of state.
 Ros. Madam, speak true:—It is not so, my lord;
 My lady, (to the manner of the days),
 In courtesy, gives undeserving praise.
 We four, indeed, confronted here with four
 In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,
 And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,
 They did not bless us with one happy word.
 I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
 When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.
 Biron. This jest is dry to me.—Fair, gentle sweet,
 Your wit makes wise things foolish; when we greet
 With eyes best seeing heaven's fiery eye,
 By light we lose light: Your capacity
 Is of that nature, that to your huge store
 Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.
 Ros. This proves you wise and rich; for in my eye,— Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
 Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
 It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
 Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.
 Ros. All the fool mine!
 Biron. I cannot give you less.
 Ros. Which of the visors was it, that you wore?
 Biron. Where? when? what visor? why demand
 you this?
 Ros. There, then, that visor; that superfluous case,
 That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.
 King. We are descried: they'll mock us now downright.
 Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
 Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
 Ros. Help, hold his brows! he'll swoon! Why look you pale!—
 Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.
 Biron. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.
 Can any face of brass hold longer out?—
 Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me;
 Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a fount;
 Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;
 Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
 And I will wish thee never more to dance,
 Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
 O! never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
 Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue;
 Nor never come in visor to my friend;
 Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song:
 Taffata phrases, silken terms precise,
 Figures pedantical; these summer-flies
 Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:

I do forswear them : and I here protest,
By this white glove, (how white the hand, God knows !)

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd

In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes :
And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, la !—
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.

Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.
Biron. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage :—Bear with me, I am sick ;
I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see ;—
Write, Lord have mercy on us, on those three ;
They are infected, in their hearts it lies ;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes :
These lords are visited : you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free, that gave these tokens to us.
Biron. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undo us.

Ros. It is not so ; For how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue ?

Biron. Peace ; for I will not have to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Biron. Speak for yourselves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression

Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession

Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd ?

King. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd ?

King. I was, fair madam.

Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear ?

King. That more than all the world I did respect
her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace, peace, forbear ;
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will ; and therefore keep it :—Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear ?

Ros. Madam, he swore, that he did hold me dear
As precious eye-sight ; and did value me Above this world : adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him ! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.

King. What mean you, madam ? by my life, my
troth,

I never swore this lady such an oath.

Ros. By heaven, you did ; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this : but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith, and this, the princess I did give ;
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.

Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear ;
And lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear :—

What ; will you have me, or your pearl again ?
Biron. Neither of either ; I remit both twain.—

I see the trick on't ;—Here was a consent, (Knowing aforehand of our merriment,)

To dash it like a Christmas comedy :
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,—

That smiles his cheek in years ; and knows the trick
To make my lady laugh, when she's dispos'd,—

Told our intents before : which once disclos'd,
The ladies did change favours ; and then we,
Following the signs, woo'd but the sign of she.

Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn ; in will, and error.

Much upon this it is :—And might not you [To Boyet.]

Forestal our sport, to make us thus untrue ?
Do you not know my lady's foot by the squire,

And laugh upon the apple of her eye ?
And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,

Holding a trencher, jesting merrily ?
You put our page out ; Go, you are allow'd ;

Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
You leer upon me, do you ? there's an eye,
Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily

Hath this brave manage, this career, been re-Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight ! Peace ;
done.

Enter COSTARD.

Welcome, pure wit ! thou partest a fair fray
Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know,

Whether the three worthies shall come in,
Biron. What, are there but three ?

Cost. No, sir ; but it is vary
For every one pursents three.

Biron. And three times thrice is ni-Cost. Not so, sir ; under correction, sir ; I

it is not so :
You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir,
know what we know :

I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know whe-it doth amount.

Biron. By Jove, I always took three thr-nine.

Cost. O Lord, sir, it were a pity you shot your living by reckoning, sir.

Biron. How much is it ?
Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth anfor my own part, I am, as they say, but to one man,—e'en one poor man ; Pompion the sir.

Biron. Art thou one of the worthies ?
Cost. It pleaseth them to think me wor-

Pompion the great : for mine own part, I knthe degree of the worthy ; but I am to stand fo-

Biron. Go, bid them prepare.
Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir ; wtake some care. [Exit C] King. Biron, they will shame us, let the approach.

Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord : s-

some policy
To have one show worse than the King's a company.

King. I say, they shall not come.

Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-ri-
now ;

That sport best pleases, that doth least know
Where zeal strives to content, and the conte-

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much exp-thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a b

[Armado converses with the King, and him a paper.]

Prin. Doth this man serve God ?

Biron. Why ask you ?
Prin. He speaks not like a man of God's n-

King. Here is like to be a good presence othies : He presents Hector of Troy ; the Pompey the great ; the parish curate, Alex-Armado's page, Hercules ; the pedant, Macchabæus.

And if these four worthies in their first show

These four will change habits, and present th-
fire.

Biron. There is five in the first show.
King. You are deceiv'd, 'tis not so.

Biron. The pedant, the braggart, the priest, the fool, and the boy ;—

Abate a throw at novum ; and the whole world Cannot prick out five such, take each one vein.

King. The ship is under sail, and here she Pageant of the Nine Worthies.

Enter COSTARD arm'd, for Pompey.

I Pompey am,—— You lie, you are not he.

I Pompey am,—— With libbard's head on knee.

Well said, old mocker; I must needs be s with thee.

I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big,——

The great.

It is great, sir;—Pompey surnam'd the great; sit in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat:

travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance;

my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France.

My ladyship would say, Thanks, Pompey, I had done.

Great thanks, great Pompey.

'Tis not so much worth; but, I hope, I perfect: I made a little fault in great.

My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves t worthy.

Enter NATHANIEL arm'd, for Alexander.

When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;

east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might:

the Arabian plain declares, that I am Ailsander.

Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Your nose smells, no, in this, most tender-smelling knight.

The conqueror is dismay'd: Proceed, good Alexander.

When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;——

Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Ailsander.

Pompey the great,——

Your servant, and Costard.

Take away the conqueror, take away Ailsander.

O, sir, [To Nath.] you have overthrown the conqueror! You will be scraped out painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds l-ax sitting on a close-stool, will be given x: he will be the ninth worthy. A con-and afeard to speak! run away for shame, er. [Nath. retires.] There, an't shall please foolish mild man; an honest man, look and soon dash'd! He is a marvellous good our insooth; and a very good howler: but, ander, alas, you see, how 'tis;—a little ed: But there are worthies a-coming will heir mind in some other sort.

Stand aside, good Pompey.

HOLOFERNES arm'd, for Judas, and MOTH arm'd, for Hercules.

Great Hercules is presented by this imp, use club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canns;

en he was a babe, a child, a shrimp, as did he strangle serpents in his manus:

n, he seemeth in minority;

come with this apology.—

ome state in thy exit, and vanish. [Exit Moth.]

Judas I am,——

A Judas!

Not Iscariot, sir.—

om, yeilded Machabæus.

Judas Machabæus clipt, is plain Judas.

A kissing traitor:—How art thou prov'd Judas?

Judas I am,——

The more shame for you, Judas.

What mean you, sir?

To make Judas hang himself.

Begin, sir; you are my elder.

Well follow'd: Judas was hang'd on an der.

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pummel of Caesar's Faulchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a flask.

Biron. St. George's half-cheek in a brooch.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer:

And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Biron. False; we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have out-faced them all.

Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Biron. For the ass to the Jude; give it him:—

Jud-as, away.

Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for monsieur Judas: it grows dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas, poor Machabæus, how hath he been baited!

Enter ARMADO arm'd, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles; here comes Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

Dum. I think, Hector was not so clean timber'd.

Long. His leg is too big for Hector.

Dum. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best ended in the small.

Biron. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,

Gave Hector a gift,——

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Biron. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven.

Arm. Peace!

The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,

Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;

A man so break'd, that certain he would fight, yea,

From morn till night, out of his pavilion.

I am that flower,——

Dum. That mint.

Long. That columbine.

Arm. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein; for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten;

sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried:

when he breath'd, he was a man—But I will forward with my device: Sweet royalty, [to the Princess] bestow on me the sense of hearing.

[Biron whispers Costard.]

Prin. Speak, brave Hector; we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Arm. This Hector far surmounted Hannibal,——

Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; and the child brags in her belly already; 'tis yours.

Arm. Dost thou infamously me among potentates?

thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipp'd for Jaquenetta that is quick by him; and hang'd, for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey!

Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Biron. Pompey is mov'd:—More Ates, more Ates; stir them on! stir them on!

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man; I'll flash; I'll do it by the sword!—I pray you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed worthies.

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey!

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat? What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen, and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt; I go woodward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen: since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none, but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's; and that 'a wears next his heart, for a favour.

Enter MERCADE.

Mer. God save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Mercade;

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring, is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life.

Mer. Even so; my tale is told.

Biron. Worthies, away; the scene begins to cloud.

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath: I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

[Exeunt Worthies.]

King. How fares your majesty?

Prin. Boyet, prepare; I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.

Prin. Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious lords,

For all your fair endeavours; and entreat,

Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe

In your rich wisdom, to excuse, or hide,

The liberal opposition of our spirits:

If over-boldly we have borne ourselves

In the converse of breath, your gentleness

Was guilty of it.—Farewell, worthy lord!

A heavy heart bears not as humble tongue:

Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks

For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely form

All causes to the purpose of his speed;

And often, at his very loose, decides

That, which long process could not arbitrate:

And though the morning brow of progeny

Forbid the smiling courtesy of love,

The holy suit, which fain it would convince;

Yet, since love's argument was first on foot,

Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it

From what it purpos'd; since, to wail friends lost,

Is not by much so wholesome, profitable,

As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not; my griefs are double.

Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;—

And by these badges understand the king.

For your fair sakes have we neglected time,

Play'd foul play with our oaths; your beauty,

ladies,

Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours

Even to the opposed end of our intents:

And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—

As love is full of unbefitting strains;

All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain;

Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye

Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms,

Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll

To every varied object in his glance:

Which party-coated presence of loose love

Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,

Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities,

Those heavenly eyes, that look into these

Suggested us to make: Therefore, ladies,

Our love being yours, the error that love

Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove

By being once false for ever to be true

To those, that make us both,—fair ladies,

And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,

Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters, full

Your favours, the ambassadors of love;

And, in our maiden council, rated them

At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,

As bombast, and as lining to the time:

But more devout than this, in our respect

Have we not been; and therefore met you

In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, show'd me than jest.

Long. So did our looks.

Ros. We did not quote

King. Now, at the latest minute of the Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, to

To make a world-without-end bargain in:

No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd

Full of dear guiltiness; and, therefore this

If for my love (as there is no such cause)

You will do aught, this shall you do for:

Your oath I will not trust; but go with

To some forlorn and naked hermitage

Remote from all the pleasures of the world

There stay, until the twelve celestial signs

Have brought about their annual reckoning;

If this austere insociable life

Change not your offer, made in heat of blood

If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and this

Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,

But that it bear this trial, and last love;

Then, at the expiration of the year,

Come challenge, challenge me by these

And, by this virgin palm, now kissing this

I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut

My woeful self up in a mourning house;

Raining the tears of lamentation

For the remembrance of my father's death

If this thou do deny, let our hands part;

Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would

To flatter up these powers of mine

The sudden hand of death close up mine

Hence ever then my heart is in thy Biron. And what to me, my love? and what

Ros. You must be purged too, your sins

You are ataint with faults and perjury;

Therefore, if you my favour mean to get,

A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never

But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what Kath. A wife!—A beard, fair health, and

With three-fold love I wish you all these

Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gent

Kath. Not so, my lord;—a twelvemonth

I'll mark no words, that smooth-fac'd

woe Come, when the king doth to my lady

Then, if I have much love, I'll give you

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully

Kath. Yet, swear not, lest you be forsworn

Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth

I'll change my black gown for a faithful

Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so Biron. Studies my lady? mistress, look

Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,

What humble suit attends thy answer that impose some service on me for thy love.

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my lord

Before I saw you: and the world's large

Proclaims you for a man replete with Full of comparisons and wounding flouts;

Which you on all estates will execute,

That lie within the mercy of your wit:

weed this wormwood from your faithful brain;
 I, therewithal, to win me, if you please,
 (without the which I am not to be won,) shall this twelvemonth term from day to day sit the speechless sick, and still converse with groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
 to kill all the fierce endeavour of your wit,
 to enforce the pained impotent to smile.
Iron. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
 Cannot be; it is impossible:
 I cannot move a soul in agony.
Pro. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit, whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
 which shallow laughing hearers give to fools:
 His prosperity lies in the ear of him, that hears it, never in the tongue of him, that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
 I'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,
 I'll hear your idle scorns, continue then,
 I will have you, and that fault withal;
 if they will not, throw away that spirit,
 I shall find you empty of that fault,
 yet joyful of your reformation.
Iron. A twelvemonth? well, befall what will befall,
 I'll best a twelvemonth in an hospital.
Pro. Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave. [To the King.]
Pro. No, madam: we will bring you on your way.
Iron. Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
 hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy shall well have made our sport a comedy.
Pro. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day, when 'twill end.
Iron. That's too long for a play.
Enter ARMADO.
Pro. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—
Pro. Was not that Hector?
Pro. The worthy knight of Troy.
Pro. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave:
 I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold my tongue for her sweet love three years. But, esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue between the two learned men have compiled, in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed the end of our show.
Pro. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Pro. Holla! approach.
HOLOFERNES, NATHANIEL, MOTH, COSTARD, and others.
Pro. This side is Hiems, winter; this Ver, the spring;

the one maintain'd by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue,
 And lady-smocks all silver white,
 And cuckoo buds of yellow hue,
 Do paint the meadows with delight,
 The cuckoo then, on every tree,
 Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
 Cuckoo;
 Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
 Unpleasing to a married ear!

II.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
 And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
 When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
 And maidens bleach their summer
 smocks,
 The cuckoo then, on every tree,
 Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
 Cuckoo;
 Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
 Unpleasing to a married ear!

III.

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall,
 And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
 And Tom bears logs into the hall,
 And milk comes frozen home in pail,
 When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,
 Then nightly sings the staring owl,
 To-who;
 Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
 While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

IV.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
 And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
 And birds sit brooding in the snow,
 And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
 When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
 Then nightly sings the staring owl,
 To-who;
 Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
 While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way.
[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Venice. A street.

Enter ANTONIO, SALARINO, and SALANIO.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad ;
 It wearies me ; you say, it wearies you ;
 But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
 What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
 I am to learn ;
 And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
 That I have much ado to know myself.

Salar. Your mind is tossing on the ocean ;
 There, where your argosies with partly sail,—
 Like signiors and rich burghers of the flood,
 Or, as it were the pageants of the sea,—
 Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
 That curt'sy to them, do them reverence,
 As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Sulan. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,
 The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind ;
 Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads ;
 And every object, that might make me fear
 Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt,
 Would make me sad.

Salar. My wind, cooling my broth,
 Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
 What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
 I should not see the sandy hour-glass run,
 But I should think of shallows and of flats ;
 And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
 Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs,
 To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
 And see the holy edifice of stone,
 And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks ?
 Which touching but my gentle vessel's side,
 Would scatter all her spices on the stream ;
 Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks ;
 And, in a word, but even now worth this,
 And now worth nothing ? Shall I have the thought
 To think on this ; and shall I lack the thought,
 That such a thing, bechanc'd, would make me sad ?
 But, tell not me ; I know, Antonio
 Is sad to think upon his merchandize.

Ant. Believe me, no : I thank my fortune for it,
 My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
 Nor to one place ; nor is my whole estate
 Upon the fortune of this present year :
 Therefore, my merchandize makes me not sad.

Salar. Why then you are in love.

Ant.

Salar. Not in love neither ? Then let's say, you are sad,

Because you are not merry : and 'twere as easy
 For you to laugh, and leap, and say, you are merry, Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus,

Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time :
 Some, that will evermore peep through their eyes,
 And laugh, like parrots, at a bag-piper ;
 And other of such vinegar aspect ;
 That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
 Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter BASSANIO, LORENZO, and GRATIANO.

Sulan. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman,
 Gratiano, and Lorenzo : Fare you well ;
 We leave you now with better company.

Salar. I would have staid till I had made you merry

If worthier friends had not prevented me.
Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
 I take it, your own business calls on you,
 And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salar. Good morrow, my good lords.
Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh ?
 Say, when ?

You grow exceeding strange : Must it be so ?
Salar. We'll make our pleasures to attend on yours.
 [Exit Salarino and Sclanio.]

Lor. My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,

We two will leave you : but, at dinner time,
 I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.
Bass. I will not fail you.

Gra. You look not well, signior Antonio ;
 You have too much respect upon the world :
 They lose it, that do buy it with much care.
 Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano ;
 A stage, where every man must play a part,
 And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the Fool :
 With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come ;
 And let my liver rather heat with wine,
 Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.
 Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
 Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster ?
 Sleep, when he wakes ? and creep into the jaundice
 By being peevish ? I tell thee what, Antonio,—
 I love thee, and it is my love that speaks ;—
 There are a sort of men, whose visages
 Do cream and mantle, like a standing pond ;
 And do a wilful stillness entertain,
 With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion
 Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit ;

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Act 4. Sc. 1.

Published by W. Pickering, Lincolns Inn Fields 1823.

As who should say, I am Sir Oracle,
And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark!
 O, my Antonio, I do know of these,
 That therefore only are reputed wise,
 For saying nothing; who, I am very sure,
 If they should speak, would almost damn those ears,
 Which, hearing them, would call their brothers, fools.

I'll tell thee more of this another time:
 But fish not, with this melancholy bait,
 For this fool's gudgeon, this opinion.—
Come, good Lorenzo:—Fare ye well, a while;
 I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-time:
 I must be one of these same dumb wise men,
 For Gratiano never lets me speak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years more,
 Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue.

Ant. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this gear.
Gra. Thanks, i' faith; for silence is only commendable

In a nest's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible.

[Exeunt Gratiano and Lorenzo.]

Ant. Is that any thing now?
Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice: His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff;
 you shall seek all day ere you find them: and,
 when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is this same,
 To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage,
 That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio,
 How much I have disabled mine estate
 By something showing a more swelling port,
 Than my faint means would grant continuance:
 Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
 From such a noble rate; but my chief care
 Is, to come fairly off from the great debts,
 Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
 Hath left me gaged: To you, Antonio,
 I owe the most, in money, and in love;
 And from your love I have a warranty
 To unburthen all my plots, and purposes,
 How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
 And, if it stand, as you yourself still do,
 Within the eye of honour, be assur'd,
 My purse, my person, my extremest means,
 Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
 I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
 The self-same way, with more advised watch,
 To find the other forth; and by advent'ring both,
 I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof,
 Because what follows is pure innocence.
 I owe you much; and, like a wilful youth,
 That, which I owe, is lost: but if you please
 To shoot another arrow that self way,
 Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
 As I will watch the aim, or to find both,
 Or bring your latter hazard back again,
 And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Ant. You know me well; and herein spend but time,

To wind about my love with circumstance;
 And, out of doubt, you do me now more wrong,
 In making question of my uttermost,
 Than if you had made waste of all I have:
 Then do but say to me what I should do,
 That in your knowledge may by me be done,
 And I am prest unto it: therefore, speak.

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
 And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
 Of wondrous virtues; sometimes from her eyes
 I did receive fair speechless messages:
 Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued
 To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia.
 Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth;
 For the four winds blow in from every coast
 Renewed suitors; and her sunny locks
 Hang on her temples like a golden fleece;
 Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchus' strand,
 And many Jasons come in quest of her.
 O my Antonio, had I but the means
 To hold a rival place with one of them,

I have a mind presages me such thrift,
 That I should questionless be fortunate.
Ant. Thou know'st, that all my fortunes are at sea;
 Nor have I money, nor commodity
 To raise a present sum: therefore go forth,
 Try what my credit can in Venice do;
 That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
 To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
 Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
 Where money is; and I no question make,
 To have it of my trust, or for my sake. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Belmont. A room in Portia's house.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is a weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your misfortunes were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: And, yet, for aught I see, they are as sick, that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing: It is no mean happiness therefore, to be seated in the mean; and superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced.

Ner. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages, princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood; but a hot temper leaps over a cold decree: such a hare is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband:—O me, the word choose!
 I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father:—Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations; therefore, the lottery, that he hath devised in these three chests, of gold, silver, and lead, (whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses you,) will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts, that he can shoe him himself: I am much afraid, my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then, is there the county Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown; as who should say, An if you will not love me, choose: he hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear, he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French Lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker; But, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's; a better bad habit of frowning than the count Palatine: he is every man in no man: if a throstle sing, he falls straight a capering;
 he will fence with his own shadow: if I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: for if he would despise me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know, I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear, that I have a poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; But, alas! who can converse with a dumb show? How oddly he is suited! I think, he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again, when he was able: I think, the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober; and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast: an the worst fall that ever fell, I hope, I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket: for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do any thing, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords; they have acquainted me with their determinations: which is indeed, to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit; unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will: I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar, and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Monterrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio; as I think, so was he called.

Ner. True, madam; he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.—How now! what news?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fifth, the prince of Morocco; who brings word, the prince, his master, will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me. Come, Nerissa.—Sirrah, go before.—Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Venice. A public place.

Enter BASSANIO and SHYLOCK.

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—well.

Bass. Ay, sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months,—well.

Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound,—well.

Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

Shy. Three thousand ducats, for three months, and Antonio bound.

Bass. Your answer to that?

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

Shy. Ho, no, no, no, no;—my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me, that he is sufficient: yet his means are in question: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, and to the Indies; I understand moreover upon Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England,—and other ventures he hath, squandered abroad: But ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-thieves, and water-rats, water-thieves, and land-thieves; I mean, pirates; and then, there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks: The more is, notwithstanding, sufficient;—three thousand ducats; I think, I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may.

Shy. I will be assured, I may; and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me: may I speak to Antonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Shy. Yes, to smell pork; to eat of the habit which your prophet, the Nazarite, conjured the devil into: I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so follow; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto?—is he comes here?

Enter ANTONIO.

Bass. This is signior Antonio.

Shy. [Aside.] How like a fawning publican looks!

I hate him for he is a christian: But more, for that, in low simplicity, He lends out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice.

If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation; and he rails, Even there where merchants most do congregate, On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift Which he calls interest: Cursed be my tribe If I forgive him!

Bass. Shylock, do you hear?

Shy. I am debating of my present store; And, by the near guess of my memory, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats: What of that Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe, Will furnish me: But soft; How many monies Do you desire?—Rest you fair, good signior;

Your worship was the last man in our world [To An]

Ant. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow By taking, nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I'll break a custom:—Is he yet possess'd, How much you would?

Shy. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot,—three months, you told me: Well then, your bond; and, let me see,—But you;

Methought, you said, you neither lend, nor borrow Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep This Jacob from our holy Abraham was (As his wise mother wrought in his behalf) The third possessor; ay, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest; not, as you would Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.

When Laban and himself were compromised, That all the earnings which were streak'd, and Should fall as Jacob's hire; the ewes, being in the end of autumn turned to the rams:

And when the work of generation was Between these woolly breeders in the act, The skilful shepherd peel'd 'm certain wands

And, in the doing of the deed of kind, He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes; Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's:

This was a way to thrive, and he was blest; And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd A thing not in his power to bring to pass, But sway'd, and fashioned, by the hand of heaven.

Was this inserted to make interest good?

your gold and silver, ewes and rams ?
 I cannot tell ; I make it breed as fast :—
 Note me, signior.
 Mark you this, Bassanio,
 Evil can cite scripture for his purpose.
 'Til soul, producing holy witness,
 A villain with a smiling cheek ;
 A dly apple rotten at the heart ;
 'Tis but a goodly outside falsehood hath !
 Three thousand ducats,—'tis a good round sum.
 Months from twelve, then let me see the rate.
 Well, Shylock, shall we be beholden to you ?
 Signior Antonio, many a time and oft Rialto you have rated me
 my monies, and my usances :
 I have borne it with a patient shrug ;
 Difference is the badge of all our tribe :
 All me—misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
 Pit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
 I'll for use of that which is mine own.
 Then, it now appears, you need my help :
 Then ; you come to me, and you say,
 'Tis but would have monies ; You say so ;
 'Tis but did void your rheum upon my beard,
 You spit on me, as you spurn a stranger cut your threshold ; monies is your suit.
 Should I say to you ? Should I not say, dog money ? is it possible can lend three thousand ducats ? or I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
 'Tis bated breath, and whispering humbleness, is,— er, you spit on me on Wednesday last ;
turn'd me such a day ; another time it'd me—dog ; and for these courtesies did you thus much monies.
 I am as like to call thee so again,
 To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.
 I will lend thee this money, lend it not thy friends ; (for when did friendship take 'Tis but barren metal of his friend ?)
 And it rather to thine enemy ;
 If he break, thou may'st with better face
 the penalty.
 Why, look you, how you storm !
 I did befriends with you, and have your love,

Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with,
 Supply your present wants, and take no doot
 Of usance for my monies, and you'll not hear me :
 This is kind I offer.

Ant. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show :—
 Go with me to a notary, seal me there
 Your single bond ; and, in a merry sport,
 If you repay me not on such a day,
 In such a place, such sum, or sums, as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
 Be nominated for an equal pound
 Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
 In what part of your body pleaseth me.

Ant. Content, in faith ; I'll seal to such a bond,
 And say, there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me,
 I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Ant. Why, fear not, man ; I will not forfeit it ;
 Within these two months, that's a month before
 This bond expires, I do expect return
 Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

Shy. O father Abraham, what these Christians
 are ;

Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
 The thoughts of others ! Pray you, tell me this ;
 If he should break his day, what should I gain
 By the exaction of the forfeiture ?

A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
 Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
 As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
 To buy his favour, I extend this friendship :
 If he will take it, so ; if not, adieu ;

And, for my love, I pray you, wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's ;
 Give him direction for this merry bond,
 And I will go and purse the ducats straight ;
 See to my house, left in the fearful guard
 Of an unthrifty knave ; and presently
 I will be with you. [Exit.

Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.

This Hebrew will turn Christian ; he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms, and a villain's mind.

Ant. Come on ; in this there can be no dismay,
 My ships come home a month before the day. [Exeunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Belmont. A room in Portia's house.
of cornets. Enter the Prince of Morocco, as Train ; PORTIA, NERISSA, and other Attendants.
 Mislake me not for my complexion,
 Adow'd livery of the burnish'd sun,
 For I am a neighbour, and near bred.
 None the fairest creature northward born,
 Whom Phoebus' fire scarce thaws the icicles,
 Can make incision for your love,
 Nor whose blood is reddest, his, or mine.
 Hee, lady, this aspect of mine
 Seem'd the valiant ; by my love, I swear,
 He regard'd virgins of our climate
 As he'd it too : I would not change this hue,
 To steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.
 In terms of choice I am not solely led In direction of a maiden's eyes :
 'Tis the lottery of my destiny
 To chuse the right of voluntary choosing :
 My father had not scanted me,
 He'd me by his will, to yield myself
 To him who wins me by that means I told you,
 He, renowned prince, then stood as fair,
 As comers I have look'd on yet,
 In affection.

Even for that I thank you ;
 For, I pray you, lead me to the caskets,
 My fortune. By this scimitar,—
 I swear the Sophy, and a Persian prince,
 On three fields of Sultan Solymán,— Did out-stare the sternest eyes that look,

Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth,
 Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
 Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
 To win thee, lady : But, alas the while !
 If Hercules, and Lichas, play at dice
 Which is the better man, the greater throw
 May turn by fortune from the weaker hand :
 So is Alcides beaten by his page ;
 And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
 Miss that, which one unworthier may attain,
 And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance ;
 And either not attempt to choose at all,
 Or swear, before you choose,—if you choose wrong,
 Never to speak to lady afterward
 In way of marriage : therefore be advised.

Mor. Nor will not ; come, bring me unto my chance.

Por. First, forward to the temple ; after dinner
 Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then ! [Cornets.
 To make me blest, or curs'd 'st among men. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Venice. A street.

Enter LAUNCELOT GOBBO.

Loun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master : The fiend is at mine elbow ; and tempts me, saying to me, Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away : My conscience says,—no ; take heed honest Launcelot ; take heed, honest Gobbo ; or, as aforsaid, honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; scorn running with thy heels: Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack; viva! says the fiend; away! says the fiend, for the heavens; youse up a brave mind, says the fiend, and run. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,—my honest friend Launcelot, being an honest man's son,—or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste;—well, my conscience says, Launcelot, budge not; budge, says the fiend; budge not, says my conscience: Conscience, say I, you counsel well; fiend, say I, you counsel well: to be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who, (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself: Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnation; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew: The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment, I will run.

Enter old GOBBO, with a basket.

Gob. Master, young man, you, I pray you; which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my true begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not:—I will try conclusions with him.

Gob. Master, young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand, at the next turning, but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn on the right hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sotties, 'twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me, whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him, or no?

Laun. Talk you of young master Launcelot?—Mark me now; [aside.] now will I raise the waters:—Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son; his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what he will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, sir. Laun. But I pray you ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you; Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. Of Launcelot, an't please your mastership. Laun. Ergo, master Launcelot; talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning,) is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say, in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgel, or a hovel-post, a staff, or a prop?—Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman: but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy, (God rest his soul!) alive, or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fall of the knowing me: it is a wise father, that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son: Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long, a man's son may; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up; I am sure, you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing; I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think, you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man; and, I am sure, Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord worshipp'd might he be! what a hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy than Dobbin my thill-horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem then, that Dobbin grows backward; I am sure he had more hair on his tail, than I have on my face, when I last saw Gob. Lord, how art thou changed! How thou and thy master agree? I have brought thee present; How 'gree you now?

Laun. Well, well; but, for mine own part, have set up my rest to run away, so I will not till I have run some ground: my master's a Jew; Give him a present! give him a halter: famish'd in his service; you may tell every

I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you come; give me your present to one master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries; if I serve him, I will run as far as God has any ground for rare fortune! here comes the man;—to him, for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter BASSANIO, with LEONARDO, and Followers.

Bass. You may do so;—but let it be so that supper be ready at the farthest by five o'clock: See these letters deliver'd; put the letters to making; and desire Gratiano to come an my lodging. [Exit a Servant.]

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy; Would't thou anight with me? Here's my son, sir, a poor boy.

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's that would, sir, as my father shall specify.

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one says, to serve.

Laun. Indeed the short and the long is, the Jew, and I have a desire, as my father specifies.

Gob. His master and he, (saving your worship's reverence,) are scarce cater-cousins.

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me, father, being I hope an old man, shall fruitfully say,—

Gob. I have here a dish of doves, that I bestow upon your worship; and my suit is,

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent myself, as your worship shall know by this old man; and, though I say it, though old yet, poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both;—What would you? Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter. Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd the Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, and hath preferr'd thee, if it be preferment, To leave a rich Jew's service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well par-tween my master Shylock and you, sir; you the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well: Go, father, with son:—

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire My lodging out: Give him a livery [To his Followers.]

More guarded than his fellows: See it done. Laun. Father, in:—I cannot get a service: I have ne'er a tongue in my head.—Well; [On his pain.]

if any man in Italy have a faire which doth offer to swear upon a book,—have good fortune; Go to, here's a simple life! here's a small trifle of wives: Alas, wives is nothing; eleven widows, and nine is a simple coming-in for one man: and 'scape drowning thrice; and to be in peril life with the edge of a feather-bed;—here are 'scapes! Well, if fortune be a woman, a good wench for this gear.—Father, come; I

my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye. [Exit Launcelot and old Bassanio.]

Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think of These things being brought and orderly best Return in haste, for I do feast to-night st-esteem'd acquaintance; hie thee, go.

 My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter GRATIANO.

Where is your master?

Yonder, sir, he walks.

[Exit Leonardo.]

Signior Bassanio,— Gratiano!
 I have a suit to you.

You have obtain'd it.
 You must not deny me; I must go with Belmont.

Why, then you must;—But hear thee, Gratiano;
 art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice;—
 that become thee happily enough, such eyes as ours appear not faults;
 ere thou art not known, why, there they show ting too liberal;—pray thee, take pain y with some cold drops of modesty ipping spirit; lest, through thy wild behaviour, instructed in the place I go to,
 ee my hopes.

Signior Bassanio, hear me:
 not put on a sober habit,
 ith respect, and swear but now and then,
 prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely;
 ore, while grace is saying, hood mine eyes irth my hat, and sigh, and say, amen;
 the observance of civility,
 ae well studied in a sad ostent use his grandam, never trust me more.
 Well, we shall see your hearing.

Nay, but I bar to-night; you shall not rage me at we do to-night.

No, that were pity;
 d entreat you rather to put on oldest suit of mirth, for we have friends, rpose merriment: But fare you well,
 some business.

And I must to Lorenzo, and the rest;
 will visit you at supper-time. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. A room in Shylock's house.

Enter JESSICA and LAUNCELOT.

I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so;
 use is hell, and thou, a merry devil,
 ob it of some taste of tediousness:
 e thee well; there is a ducat for thee.
 uncelot, soon at supper shalt thou see e, who is thy new master's guest:
 m this letter; do it secretly, farewell; I would not have my father talk with thee.

Adieu!—tears exhibit my tongue.— eautiful pagan,—most sweet Jew! If a u did not play the knave, and get thee, I h deceived: But, adieu! these foolish drops what drown my manly spirit; adieu! [Exit.]

Farewell, good Launcelot.—
 what heinous sin is it in me, sham'd to be my father's child!
 ough I am a daughter to his blood,
 st to his manners: O Lorenzo, keep promise, I shall end this strife;
 a Christian, and thy loving wife. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A street.

GRATIANO, LORENZO, SALARINO, and SALANIO.

Nay, we will slink away in supper-time;
 e us at my lodging, and return
 an hour.

We have not made good preparation.
 We have not spoke us yet of torch-bearers.
 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd;
 tier, in my mind, not undertook.
 Tis now but four a'clock; we have two hours
 ish us:—

Enter LAUNCELOT, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the news?
 Laun. An it shall please you to break up this,
 it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand: in faith, 'tis a fair hand;
 And whiter than the paper, it writ on,
 Is the fair hand, that writ.

Gra. Love-news, in faith.

Laun. By your leave, sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou?

Laun. Marry, sir, to bid my old master the Jew to sup to-night with my new master the Christian.

Lor. Hold here, take this:—tell gentle Jessica,
 I will not fail her;—speak it privately; go.—
 Gentlemen, [Exit Launcelot.]

Will you prepare you for this masque to-night?

I am provided of a torch-bearer.

Salar. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.

Salan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me, and Gratiano,

At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salar. 'Tis good we do so.

[Exeunt Salar. and Salan.]

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica?

Lor. I must needs tell thee all: She hath directed,

How I shall take her from her father's house;

What gold, and jewels, she is fureish'd with;

What page's suit she hath in readiness.

If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,

It will be for his gentle daughter's sake:

And never dare misfortune cross her foot,

Unless she do it under this excuse,—

That she is issue to a faithless Jew.

Come, go with me; peruse this, as thou goest:

Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same. Before Shylock's house.

Enter SHYLOCK and LAUNCELOT.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,

The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio:—

What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize,

As thou hast done with me;—What, Jessica!—

And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out;—

Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica!

Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me, I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter JESSICA.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica;

There are my keys:—But wherefore should I go?

I am not bid for love; they flatter me:

But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon

The prodigal Christian.—Jessica, my girl,

Look to my house:—I am right loath to go;

There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,

For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go; my young master doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together,—I will not say, you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock i'the morning, falling out that year on Ash-wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica:

Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum,

And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck'd fife,

Clamber not you up to the casements then,

Nor thrust your head into the public street,

To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces:

But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements;

Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter

My sober house.—By Jacob's staff I swear,

I have no mind of feasting forth to-night:

But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrah;

Say, I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir.—

Mistress, look out at window, for all this;

There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye. [Exit Lauan.]
Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?
Jes. His words were, Farewell, mistress; nothing else.
Shy. The patch is kind enough; but a huge feeder,
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat; drones hive not with me:
Therefore I part with him; and part with him
To one, that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in;
Perhaps, I will return immediately;
Do, as I bid you,
Shut doors after you: Fast bind, fast find;
A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. [Exit.]
Jes. Farewell; and if my fortune be not cross,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.

The same.

Enter GRATIANO and SALARINO, masqued.
Gra. This is the pent-house, under which Lorenzo Desir'd us to make stand.
Salar. His hour is almost past.
Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.
Salar. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new made, than they are wont,
To keep obliged faith unforfeited!
Gra. That ever holds: Who riseth from a feast,
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse, that doth untread again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things, that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.
How like a younker, or a prodigal,
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
How like the prodigal doth she return;
With over-weather'd ribs, and ragged sails,
Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!

Enter LORENZO.

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo;—more of this hereafter.
Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;
Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll watch as long for you then.—Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew:—Ho! who's within.

Enter JESSICA above, in boy's clothes.

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty, Albeit I'll swear, that I do know your tongue.
Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.
Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed;
For who love I so much? And now who knows,
But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
Lor. Heaven, and thy thoughts, are witness that thou art.
Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pains.
I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
For I am much ashamed of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit;
For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.
Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.
Jes. What, must I hold a candle to my shames?
They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love;
And I should be obscured.
Lor. So are you, sweet,
Even in the lovely garnish of a boy.
But come at once;
For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are staid for at Bassanio's feast.
Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.
[Exit, from above.]
Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentle, and no Jew.
Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily:
For she is wise, if I can judge of her;
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true;
And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself;

And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter JESSICA, below.

What, art thou come!—O, gentlemen, away
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.
[Exit with Jessica and Salarino.]

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Antonio!
Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the
'Tis nine o' clock; our friends all stay for you,
No masque to night; the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go aboard:
I have sent twenty out to seek for you.
Gra. I am glad on't; I desire no more delay
Than to be under sail, and gone to-night. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.

Belmont. A room in Portia's house.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter PORTIA, with Prince of Morocco, and both their Trains.
Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and disco-
The several caskets to this noble prince:—
Now make your choice.

Por. The one of them contains my picture, pri-

Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me
I will survey the inscriptions back again:
What says this leaden casket?
Who chooseth me, shall give and hazard all h

This casket threatens: Men, that hazard all,
Do it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross;
I'll then nor give, nor hazard, aught for lead
What says the silver, with her virgin hue?
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he dese
As much as he deserves?—Pause there, Mor
And weigh thy value with an even hand:
If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
'Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough
May not extend so far as to the lady;
And yet to be afraid of my deserving,
Were but a weak disabling of myself.
As much as I deserve!—Why, that's the lad
I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding;
But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I stray'd no further, but chose here?
Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold
Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men a
Why, that's the lady; all the world desires
From the four corners of the earth they come,
To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing sair
The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty wilds
Of wide Arabia, are as through-fares now,
For princes to come view fair Portia:
The watry kingdom, whose ambitious head
Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar
To stop the foreign spirits; but they come,
As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly pict
Is't like, that lead contains her? 'Twere damn
To think so base a thought; it were too gross
To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave.
Or shall I cherish, in silver she's immur'd,
Being ten times undervalued to try'd gold?
O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem
Was set in worse than gold. They have in Eng

SCENE VIII.

Venice. A street.

Enter SALARINO and SALANIO.

Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail;
in is Gratiano gone along;
their ship, I am sure, Lorenzo is not.
The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the duke;
sent him to search Bassanio's ship.
He came too late, the ship was under sail:
the duke was given to understand,
a gondola were seen together and his amorous Jessica:
Antonio certify'd the duke,
we not with Bassanio in his ship.
I never heard a passion so confus'd, ge, outrageous, and so variable,
og Jew did utter in the streets:
"Her!—O my ducats!—O my daughter!
Is a Christian?—O my christian ducats!—
the Jew! my ducats and my daughter!
bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
e ducats, stot a from me by my daughter!
his; two stones, two rich and precious stones,
my daughter!—Justice! find the girl!
the stones upon her, and the ducats!"
Why, all the boys in Venice follow him, his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
all pay for this.

Marry, well remember'd:
d with a Frenchman yesterday;
d me,—in the narrow seas, that part ch and English, there miscarried of our country, richly fraught:
upon Antonio, when he told me;
'd in silence, that it were not his.
You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;
od suddenly, for it may grieve him.
A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.
Bassanio and Antonio part:
told him, he would make some speed turn; he answer'd—*Do not so, ot business for my sake, Bassanio,
the very ripping o' the time;
he Jew's bond, which he hath of me,
enter in your mind of lore:
and employ your chiefest thoughts hip, and such fair ostents of love conveniently become you there:*
there, his eye being big with tears,
his face, he put his hand behind him, affection wondrous sensible
g Bassanio's hand, and so they parted.
I think, he only loves the world for him.
So, let us go, and find him out, ken his embraced heaviness
as delight or other.

Do we so. [Exit.

SCENE IX.

Belmont. A room in Portia's house.

Enter NERISSA, with a Servant.

Quick, quick, I pray thee, draw the curtain light;

The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon, PORTIA, and their Trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince:
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and begone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear,
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me: Fortune now
To my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath:
You shall look fairer, ere I give, or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire.
What many men desire.—That many may be meant
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the food eye doth teach;
Which prides not to the interior, but, like the martlet,
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title dost thou bear:
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves;
And well said too; For who shall go about
To cozen fortune, and be honourable Without the stamp of merit! Let none presume
To wear an undeserv'd dignity.

O, that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear honour
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover, that stand bare?
How many he commanded, that command?
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the true seed of honour? and how much honour
Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnish'd? Well, but to my choice:
Who chooseth me, shall yet as much as he deserves:
I will assume desert;—Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that, which you find there.

Ar. What's here? the portrait of a blinking idiot, Presenting me a schedule? I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia!
How much unlike my hopes, and my deservings!
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he deserves.
Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

*The fire seven times tried this;
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never choose amiss:
Some there he, that shadow's bliss:
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.*

*Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So hegone, sir, you are sped.*

Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.—
Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath, Patiently to bear my wroth.

[Exit Arrogan, and Trains.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy,— Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.
Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Where is my lady?

Por. Here; what would my lord?

Serv. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one, that comes before
To signify the approaching of his lord:
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;
To wit, besides commends, and courteous breath,

Gifts of rich value; yet I have not seen
So likely an ambassador of love:
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.
Por. No more, I pray thee; I am half afraid Thou wilt say anon, he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising!
Come, come, Nerissa; for I long to see Quick Cupid's post, that comes so mannerly Ner. Bassanio, lord love, if thy will it be

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Venice. A street.

Enter SALANIO and SALARINO.

Salan. Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salar. Why, yet it lives there uncheck'd, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wreck'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

Salan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapp'd ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband: But it is true,—without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain high-way of talk,— that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio,—O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha,—what say'st thou?—Why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his losses!

Salan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.—

Enter SHYLOCK.

How now, Shylock? what news among the merchants?

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain; I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Salan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fleg'd; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Salan. Out upon it, old carrion! rebels it at these years?

Shy. I say, my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Salar. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods, than there is between red wine and rhenish:—But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto;—a beggar, that used to come so smug upon the mart;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to call me usurer;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy;
—let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh; What's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me of half a million; laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew: Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions?
fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die?

if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? if we you in the rest, we will resemble you in that a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his hundredth part? If a Christian wrong a Jew, what his sufferance be by Christian example? we venge. The villany, you teach me, I will e-

SONG.

Tell me, where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head?
How begot, how nourished?

It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies:

Let us all ring fancy's knell;
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.
Ding, dong, bell.

Bass.—So may the outward shows be least them- selves;

The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some mark of virtue on its outward parts.
How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules, and frowning Mars;
Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk!
And these assume but valour's excrement,
To render them redoubted. Look on beauty,
And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight;
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that wear most of it:
So are those crisped snaky golden locks,
Which make such wanton gambols with the wind,
Upon supposed fairness, often known
To be the dowry of a second head,
The scull that bred them, in the sepulchre.
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf
Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold, Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee;
Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man: but thou, thou meager lead,
Which rather threat'nest, than doth promise aught,
Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence,
And here choose I; Joy be the consequence!
Por. How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embred despair,
And shudd'ring fear and green-ey'd jealousy!
O love, be moderate, allay thy ecstasy,
In measure rain thy joy, scant this excess;
I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
For fear I surfeit!

Bass.: What find I here?
[Opening the leaden casket.

Fair Portia's counterfeit? What demi-god
Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes?
Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips,
Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar Should sunder such sweet friends! Here in her hairs
The painter plays the spider; and hath woven
A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men, Faster than gnats in cobwebs! But her eyes,
How could he see to do them? having made one,
Methinks, it should have power to steal both his,
And leave itself unfurnish'd: Yet look, how far
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In underprizing it, so far this shadow
Doth limp behind the substance.—Here's the scroll,
The continent and summary of my fortune.

You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair, and choose as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.
If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss.

A gentle scroll;—Fair lady, by your leave;
[Kissing her.

I come by note, to give, and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
Hearing applause, and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing, in a doubt Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice fair lady, stand I, even so;
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.
Por. You see me, lord Bassanio, where I stand,
Such as I am: though, for my self alone,
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet, for you,

I would be trebled twenty times myself;
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
Mere rich;
That only to stand high on your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account; but the full sum of me
Is sum of something; which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd:
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; and happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all, is, that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself, and what is mine, to you, and yours
Is now converted; but now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours, my lord; I give them with this ring;
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Only my blood speaks to you in my veins:
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being hlent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy,
Express'd, and not express'd: But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence;
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry, good joy; Good joy, my lord, and lady!

Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure, you can wish none from me:
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship; you have got me one.
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there;
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing here, until I sweat again;
And swearing, till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love; at last,—if promise last,—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achiev'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, 'faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage.

Gra. We'll play with them, the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down.—

But who comes here? Lorenzo, and his infidel?
What, my old Venetian friend, Salerio?

Enter LORENZO, JESSICA, and SALERIO.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Salerio, welcome hither;
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome.—By your leave,
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord,
They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour:—For my part, my lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Sale. I did, my lord,
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio

Commends him to you. [Gives Bassanio

Venice. A street.

SHYLOCK, SALANIO, ANTONIO, and Gaoler.

Gaoler, look to him;—Tell not me of mercy;—

Antonio is the fool that lent out money gratis;—

Gaoler, look to him.

Antonio. Hear me yet, good Shylock.

Shylock. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond;

as I have sworn an oath, that I will have my bond;

as I call'dst me dog, before thou had'st a cause:

since I am a dog, beware my fangs;

duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder, that a naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond to come abroad with him at his request.

Antonio. I pray thee, hear me speak.

Shylock. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:

I will have my bond; and therefore speak no more.

Antonio. Not be made a soft and dull-ey'd fool, to shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield to Christian intercessors. Follow not;

and have no speaking; I will have my bond.

[Exit Shylock.]

Antonio. It is the most impenetrable cur, that ever kept with men.

Gaoler. Let him alone;

allow him no more with bootless prayers.

Antonio. He seeks my life; his reason well I know;

deliver'd from his forfeitures

the gaoler, that have at times made moan to me;

before he hates me.

Antonio. I am sure, the duke never grant this forfeiture to hold.

Gaoler. The duke cannot deny the course of law;

he commends that strangers have in us in Venice, if it be denied,

much impeach the justice of the state;

that the trade and profit of the city standeth of all nations. Therefore, go;

your griefs and losses have so 'bated me,

I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh

inorrow to my bloody creditor.—

Gaoler, on:—Pray God, Bassanio come

SCENE IV.

Belmont. A room in Portia's house.

PORTIA, NERISSA, LORENZO,
 JESSICA, and BALTHAZAR.

Portia. Madam, although I speak it in your presence, as I have a noble and a true conceit of a like amity; which appears most strongly in thus the absence of your lord.

Antonio. If you knew to whom you show this honour, how true a gentleman you send relief,

and dear a lover of my lord your husband,

how you would be prouder of the work, and customary bounty can enforce you.

Antonio. I never did repent for doing good,

and shall not now: for in companions

do converse and waste the time together, and our souls do bear an equal yoke of love,

There must be needs a like proportion
 Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
 Which makes me think, that this Antonio,
 Being the bosom lover of my lord,
 Must needs be like my lord: If it be so,
 How little is the cost I have bestow'd,
 In purchasing the semblance of my soul
 From out the state of hellish cruelty?
 This comes too near the praising of myself;
 Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.—
 Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
 The husbandry and manage of my house,
 Until my lord's return: for mine own part,
 I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow,
 To live in prayer and contemplation,
 Only attended by Nerissa here,
 Until her husband and my lord's return:
 There is a monastery two miles off,
 And there we will abide. I do desire you,
 Not to deny this imposition;
 The which my love, and some necessity,
 Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart;

I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people do already know my mind,

And will acknowledge you and Jessica

In place of lord Bassanio and myself.

So fare you well, till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on

you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd.

To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.—

[Exeunt Jessica and Lorenzo.]

Now, Balthazar,

As I have ever found thee honest, true,

So let me find thee still: Take this same letter,

And use thou all the endeavour of a man,

In speed to Padua; see thou render this

Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario;

And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee,

Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed

Unto the tranect, to the common ferry,

Which trades to Venice:—waste no time in words,

But get thee gone; I shall be there before thee.

Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

[Exit.]

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand,

That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands,

Before they think of us.

Ner. Shall they see us?

Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,

That they shall think we are accomplished

With what we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,

When we are both accouter'd like young men,

I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,

And wear my dagger with the braver grace;

And speak, between the change of man and boy,

With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps

Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,

Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lies,

How honourable ladies sought my love,

Which I denying, they fell sick and died;

I could not do with all;—then I'll repent,

And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them:

And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell,

That men shall swear, I have discontinued school

Above a twelvemonth:—I have within my mind

A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,

Which I will practise.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?

Por. Fie! what a question's that,

If thou wert near a lewd interpreter?

But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device,

When I am in my coach, which stays for us

At the park gate; and therefore haste away,

For we must measure twenty miles to-day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same. A garden.

Enter LAUNCELOT and JESSICA.

Launc. Yes, truly:—for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore,

I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: Therefore, be of good cheer; for, truly, I think, you are damn'd. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, J pray thee?

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed; so the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly then I fear you are damn'd both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: well, you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Laun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians enough before; e'en as many as could well live, one by another: This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs; if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Enter LORENZO.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say; here he comes.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo; Launcelot and I are out: he tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says, you are no good member of the commonwealth; for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is, indeed, more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think, the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence; and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots.—Go in, sirrah; bid them prepare or dinner.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomas.
Lor. Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir; only, cover it word.

Lor. Will you cover then, sir?

Laun. Not so, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarreling with occasion! thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them to the table, serve in the meat, and we will con to dinner.

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be served for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as hum and conceits shall govern. [Exit Laun]

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are! The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; And I do know A many fools, that stand in better place, Garnish'd like him, that for a tricky word Defy the matter. How cheer'st thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion, How dost thou like the lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing: It is very meet, The lord Bassanio live an upright life; For, having such a blessing in his lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth; And, if on earth he do not mean it, it Is reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly r And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portia one, there must be something else Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude w Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.

Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I h stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-t Then, howsoever thou speak'st, 'mong other I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. [E]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Venice. A court of justice.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes; ANTONIO, BASSANIO, GRATIANO, SALARINO, SALANIO, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio heré?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace.

Duke. I am sorry for thee; thou art come to answer

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard,
Your grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose
My patience to his fury; and am arm'd
To suffer, with a quietness of spirit,
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.

Salan. He's ready at the door: he comes, my lord.

Enter SHYLOCK.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.—

Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then, 'tis thought, Thou'lt show thy mercy, and remorse, more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty:
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,
(Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,)

Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture,
But touch'd with human gentleness and love
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,

Enough to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy bosoms, and rough hearts of fl
From stubborn Turks, and Tartars, never tr

We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd your grace of what pose;

And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn,
To have the due and forfeit of my bond:
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter, and your city's freedom.
You'll ask me, why I rather choose to have A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive Three thousand ducats: I'll not answer that
But, say, it is my humour; Is it answer'd?
What if my house be troubled with a rat,
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats
To have it baned? What, are you answer'd?
Some men there are, lovè not a gaping pig;
Some, that are mad, if they behold a cat;

1. I am not bound to please thee with my ss. Do all men kill the things, they do not

1. Hates any man the thing, he would not kill ?
 ss. Every offence is not a hate at first.

1. What, would'st thou have a serpent sting

1. I pray you, think you question with the Jew:

 1. If every ducat in six thousand ducats is in six parts, and every part a ducat,

ss. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rend'ring

1. What judgment shall I dread, doing no

ss. Have among you many a purchas'd slave, hem be free, marry them to your heirs ?

 sweat they under burdens ? let their beds

ade as soft as yours, and let their palates ason'd with such viands ? You will answer,

Javes are ours:—So do I answer you:
 ound of flesh, which I demand of him,

arly bought, is mine, and I will have it:
 deny me, fie upon your law !

ss. It is no force in the decrees of Venice:
 ud for judgment: answer; shall I have it ?

ss. Upon my power, I may dismiss this court, s Bellario, a learned doctor, in I have sent for to determine this,

 here to-day.

ss. My lord, here stays without ssenger with letters from the doctor, come from Padua.

ss. Bring us the letters; Call the messenger.
 ss. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man! courage yet!

ss. How shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
 ou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

ss. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
 est for death; the weakest kind of fruit

earliest to the ground, and so let me:
 cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,

to live still, and write mine epitaph.

ss. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
 est for death; the weakest kind of fruit

earliest to the ground, and so let me:
 cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,

Into the trunks of men: thy currish spirit
 Govern'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,
 Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,
 And, whilst thou lay'st in thy unhallow'd dam,
 Infus'd itself in thee; for thy desires
 Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.

Shy. Till thou can'st rail the sea' from off my bond,

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud:
 Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
 To cureless ruin.—I stand here for law.

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend
 A young and learned doctor to our court:—
 Where is he ?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by,
 To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart:—some three or four of you,

Go give him courteous conduct to this place.—
 Mean time, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Clerk reads.] Your grace shall understand, that, at the receipt of your letter, I am very sick; but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome, his name is Balthazar: I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turn'd o'er many books together: he is furnish'd with my opinion; which, better'd with his own learning, (the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend,) comes with him, at my importunity, to fill up your grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.

Duke. You hear the learn'd Bellario, what he writes:

And here, I take it, is the doctor come.—

Enter PORTIA, dressed like a doctor of laws.

Give me your hand: Came you from old Bellario ?
 Por. I did, my lord.

Duke. You are welcome: take your place.
 Are you acquainted with the difference
 That holds this present question in the court ?

Por. I am inform'd thoroughly of the cause.

Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew ?
 Duke. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylock ?
 Shy. Shylock is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;
 Yet in such rule, that the Venetian law
 Cannot impugn you, as you do proceed.—
 You stand within his danger, do you not ?

[To Antonio.]
 Ant. Ay, so he says.

Por. Do you confess the bond ?
 Ant. I do.

Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shy. On what compulsion must I? tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd;
 It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven
 Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd;
 It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes;
 'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
 The throned monarch better than his crown:
 His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
 The attribute to awe and majesty,
 Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
 But mercy is above this sceptre'd sway,
 It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
 It is an attribute to God himself;
 And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
 When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew, Though justice be thy plea, consider this,—
 That, in the course of justice, none of us Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy;
 And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
 The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much,
 To mitigate the justice of thy plea;
 Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
 Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
 The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money ?

Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court; Yea, twice the sum: if that will not suffice, I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er, On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart: If this will not suffice, it must appear, That malice bears down truth. And I beseech you, Wrest once the law to your authority: To do a great right, do a little wrong; And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Por. It must not be; there is no power in Venice Can alter a decree established: 'Twill be recorded for a precedent; And many an error, by the same example, Will rush into the state: it cannot be.

Sky. A Daniel come to judgment!—yea, a Daniel!

O wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Sky. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.

Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offer'd thee.

Sky. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven: Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?

No, not for Venice.

Por. Why, this bond is forfeit; And lawfully by this the Jew may claim A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off Nearest the merchant's heart:—Be merciful; Take thrice thy money; hid me tear the bond.

Sky. When it is paid according to the tenour.—

It doth appear, you are a worthy judge;

You know the law, your exposition

Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,

Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,

Proceed to judgment: By my soul I swear,

There is no power in the tongue of man

To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court

To give the judgment.

Por. Why then, thus it is.

You must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Sky. O noble judge! O excellent young man!

Por. For the intent and purpose of the law

Hath full relation to the penalty,

Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Sky. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge!

How much more elder art thou than thy looks!

Por. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Sky. Ay, his breast:

So says the bond;—Doth it not, noble judge?

Nearest his heart, those are the very words.

Por. It is so. Are there balance here, to weigh

The flesh?

Sky. I have them ready.

Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,

To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.

Sky. Is it not nominated in the bond?

Por. It is so express'd; But what of that?

'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Sky. I cannot find it; 'tis not in the bond.

Por. Come, merchant, have you any thing to say?

Ant. But little; I am arm'd, and well pre-par'd.—

Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well!

Grieve not, that I am fallen to this for you;

For herein fortune shows herself more kind

Than is her custom: it is still her use,

To let the wretched man out-live his wealth,

To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow,

An age of poverty; from which lingering penance

Of such a misery doth she cut me off.

Commend me to your honourable wife:

Tell her the process of Antonio's end;

Say how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;

And when the tale is told, bid her be judge,

Whether Bassanio had not once a love.

Repent not you, that you shall lose your friend;

And he repents not, that he pays your debt;

For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough,

I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife,

Which is as dear to me as life itself;

But life itself, my wife, and all the world,

Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:

I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all

Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would give you little thank

that,

If she were by, to hear you make the offer.

Gra. I have a wife, whom I protest, I love

I would she were in heaven, so she could

Entreat some power to change this curish Jew

Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;

The wish would make else an unquiet house.

Sky. These be the christian husbands: I have

daughter;

'Would any of the stock of Barrabas

Had been her husband, rather than a Christian

We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence.

Por. A pound of that same merchant's flethine;

The court awards it, and the law doth give it

Sky. Most rightful judge!

Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his back: The law allows it, and the court awards it.

Sky. Most learned judge!—A sentence; c-prepare.

Por. Tarry a little;—there is something els-

This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood:

The words expressly are, a pound of flesh:

Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of

But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed

One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and

Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate

Unto the state of Venice.

Gra. O upright judge!—Mark, Jew!—O let judge!

Sky. Is that the law?

Por. Thyself shalt see the

For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd,

Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desirest.

Gra. O learned judge!—Mark, Jew!—A let

judge!

Sky. I take this offer then;—pay the bond

And let the Christian go.

Bass. Here is the money.

Por. Soft!

The Jew shall have all justice;—soft!—no has

He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the:

Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor

But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more

Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so

As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,

Or the division of the twentieth part

Of one poor scruple; nay, if the scale do turn

But in the estimation of a hair,—

Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!

Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeit

Sky. Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.

Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court;

He shall have merely justice, and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel

I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word

Sky. Shall I not have barely my principal?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeit

To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

Sky. Why then the devil give him good

I'll stay no longer question.

Por. Tarry, Jew;

The law hath yet another hold on you.

It is enacted in the laws of Venice,—

If it be prov'd against an alien,

That by direct, or indirect, attempts

He seek the life of any citizen,

The party, 'gainst the which he doth contrive,

Shall seize one half his goods; the other half

Comes to the privy coffer of the state;

And the offender's life lies in the mercy

Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.

In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st.

For it appears by manifest proceeding,

That, indirectly, and directly too,

Thou hast contriv'd against the very life

Of the defendant; and thou hast incur'd

The danger formerly by me rebear'd.

therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.
 Beg, that thou may'st have leave to hang thyself:
 et, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
 hast not left the value of a cord;
 fore, thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.
 That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit,
 on thee thy life, before thou ask it:
 alf thy wealth, it is Antonio's;
 her half comes to the general state,
 a humbleness may drive unto a fine.
 Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.
 Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that:
 ake my house, when you do take the prop,
 loth sustain my house; you take my life,
 you do take the means whereby I live.
 What mercy can you render him, Antonio?
 A halter gratis; nothing else; for God's sake.
 So please my lord the duke, and all the court,
 t the fine for one half of his goods;
 ontent, so he will let me have her half in use,—to render it, is death, unto the gentleman,
 utely stole his daughter:
 ings provided more,—That, for this favour,
 gently become a Christian;
 her, that he do record a gift,
 a the court, of all he dies possess'd, is son Lorenzo, and his daughter.
 t. He shall do this; or else I do recant rdon, that I late pronounced here.
 Art thou contented, Jew, what dost thou say?
 I am content.

Clerk, draw a deed of gift.
 I pray you give me leave to go from hence;
 ot well; send the deed after me,
 will sign it.

Get thee gone, but do it.
 In christening thou shalt have two god-athers;
 een judge, thou should'st have had ten more,
 ug thee to the gallows, not the font.

[Exit Shylock.]
 Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.
 I humbly do desire your grace of pardon;
 away this night toward Padua, is meet I presently set forth.

I am sorry that your leisure serves you not,
 to gratify this gentleman;
 my mind, you are much bound to him.

[Exit Duke, Magnificoes, and Train.]
 Most worthy gentlemen, I and my friend
 y your wisdom been this day acquitted ous penalties; in lieu whereof, ousand ducats, due unto the Jew,
 ly cope your courteous pains withal.
 And stand indebted, over and above,
 and service to you evermore.
 He is well paid, that is well satisfied;
 delivering you, am satisfied,
 rein do account myself well paid;
 d was never yet more mercenary.
 ou, know me, when we meet again;
 you well, and so I take my leave.
 Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further;
 me remembrance of us, as a tribute,
 a fee: grant me two things, I pray you,
 deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield.
 Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake;
 And, for your love, I'll take this ring from you:—
 Do not draw back your hand; I'll take no more;
 And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir,—alas, it is a trifle;
 I will not shame myself to give you this.
 Por. I will have nothing else but only this;
 And now, methinks, I have a mind to it.

Bass. There's more depends on this, than on the value.

The dearest ring in Venice will I give you,
 And fir'd it out by proclamation;
 Only for this, I pray you pardon me.

Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers:
 You taught me first to beg; and now, methinks,
 You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.

Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;

And, when she put it on, she made me vow,
 That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.

Por. That 'scuse serves many men to save their gifts.

An if your wife be not a mad woman,
 And know how well I have deserv'd this ring,
 She would not hold out enemy for ever,
 For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you!

[Exit Portia and Nerissa.]
 Ant. My lord Bassanio, let him have the ring;
 Let his deservings, and my love withal,
 Be valued 'gainst your wife's commandment.

Bass. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him,
 Give him the ring; and bring him, if thou can'st,
 Unto Antonio's house:—away, make haste.

[Exit Gratiano.]
 Come, you and I will thither presently;
 And in the morning early will we both Fly toward Belmont: Come, Antonio. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The same. A street.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed,

And let him sign it; we'll away to night,
 And he a day before our husbands home:
 This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter GRATIANO.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well overtaken:
 My lord Bassanio, upon more advice,
 Hath sent you here this ring; and doth entreat
 Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be:
 This ring I do accept most thankfully,
 And so, I pray you, tell him: Furthermore,
 I pray you show my youth old Shylock's house.

Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:—
 I'll see if I can get my husband's ring, [To Portia.]
 Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou may'st, I warrant; We shall have old swearing,

That they did give the rings away to men;
 But we'll outface them, and outswear them too.

Away, make haste; thou know'st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house? [Exit.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Belmont. Avenue to Portia's house.

Enter LORENZO and JESSICA.

The moon shines bright:—In such a night as this,

the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
 y did make no noise; in such a night,
 methinks, mounted the Trojan walls,
 h'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
 Cressid lay that night.

Jes. In such a night
 Did Thisbe fearfully o'ertrip the dew;
 And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
 And ran dismay'd away.

Lor. In such a night
 Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
 Upon the wild sea-banks, and wav'd her love
 To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night
 Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs,
 That did renew old Æson.

Lor. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew ;
And with an unbrift love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jes. And in such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well ;
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.

Lor. And in such a night
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slander her love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would out-night you, did nobody come :
But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter STEPHANO.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night ?

Steph. A friend.

Lor. A friend ? what friend ? your name, I pray you, friend ?

Steph. Stephano is my name ; and I bring word,
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont : she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her ?

Steph. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd ?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.—

But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter LAUNCELOT.

Laun. Sola, sola, wo ha, ho, sola, sola !

Lor. Who calls ?

Laun. Sola ! did you see master Lorenzo, and mistress Lorenzo ! sola, sola !

Lor. Leave hollaing, man ; here.

Laun. Sola ! where ? where ?

Lor. Here.

Laun. Tell him, there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news ; my master will be here ere morning. [Exit.]

Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter :—Why should we go in ?

My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,

Within the house, your mistress is at hand ;

And bring your musick forth into the air.—

[Exit Stephano.]

How sweet the moon-light sleeps upon this bank !
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of musick
Creep in our ears ; soft stillness, and the night,
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica : Look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold ;

There's not the smallest orb, which thou behold'st,

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-ey'd cherubins :

Such harmony is in immortal souls ;

But, whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.—

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn ;
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with musick.

Jes. I am never merry, when I hear sweet music. [Music.]

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive :

For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,

Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,

If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of musick touch their ears,

You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of musick : Therefore, the poet Did feign, that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods ;

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musick for the time doth change his nature :

The man, that hath no musick in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,

Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils ;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus :
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA, at a distance.

Por. That light, we see, is burning in my eye !
How far that little candle throws his beams !
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less
A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by ; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Musick ! hark !

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect
Methinks, it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
When neither is attended ; and, I think,
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.

How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection !—
Peace, ho ! the moon sleeps with Endymion
And would not be awak'd ! [Music.]

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind man knot cuckoo,

By the bad voice.

Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husband's welfare,

Which speed, we hope, the better for our w-
Are they return'd ?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Por. Go in, Nerissa,
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence ;—
Nor you, Lorenzo ;—Jessica, nor you.

[A tucket is heard.]

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I hear trumpet :

We are no tell-tales, madam ; fear you not.

Por. This night, methinks, is but the dayling
It looks a little paler ; 'tis a day,
Such as the day is, when the sun is hid.

Enter BASSANIO, ANTONIO, GRATIANO, and their Followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Ant
If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband
And never be Bassanio so for me ;
But God sort all !—You are welcome home, n-Bass. I thank you, madam : give welcome friend.—

This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sense be much be-
him.

For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy.

[Gratiano and Nerissa seem to talk]

Gra. By yonder moon, I swear you wrong,

In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk :

Would he were gelt that had it, for my part
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already ? what's the matter ?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring,
That she did give me ; whose posy was
For all the world, like cutler's poetry
Upon a knife, Love me, and leave me not.

Ner. What talk you of the posy, or the w-
You swore to me, when I did give it you,

you would wear it till your hour of death ;
that it should lie with you in your grave ;
that not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
should have been respectful, and have kept it.
it a judge's clerk !—but well I know, clerk will ne'er wear hair on his face, that had it.

He will, an if he live to be a man.
Ay, if a woman live to be a man.
Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,—
I of boy ; a little scrubbed boy, rather than thyself, the judge's clerk ;
that boy, that begg'd it as a fee ;
did not for my heart deny it him.

You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
not so slightly with your wife's first gift ;
I was stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
I was devoted so with faith unto your flesh.

My love a ring, and made him swear to part with it ; and here he stands ;
I have sworn for him, he would not leave it,
I took it from his finger, for the wealth of the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
I give your wife too unkind a cause of grief ;
I care not for me, I should be mad at it.

Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
I wear, I lost the ring defending it. [Aside.]
My lord Bassanio gave his ring away to judge, that begg'd it, and, indeed,
I took it too ; and then the boy, his clerk, took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine :
either man, nor master, would take aught of two rings.

What ring gave you, my lord ?
I hope, which you receiv'd of me ?
If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I deny it ; but you see, my finger is not the ring upon it, it is gone.
Even so void is your false heart of truth :
I have sworn, I will ne'er come in your bed,
I see the ring.

Nor I in yours,
I shall again see mine.

Sweet Portia,
I did know to whom I gave the ring,
I did know for whom I gave the ring,
I could conceive for what I gave the ring,
I gave it unwillingly I left the ring,
I thought nought would be accepted but the ring,
I could abate the strength of your displeasure.

If you had known the virtue of the ring,
I had her worthiness that gave the ring,
I had my own honour to contain the ring,
I could not then have parted with the ring.
A man is there so much unreasonable,
I had pleas'd to have defended it in any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty to be the thing held as a ceremony ?
I teaches me what to believe ;
I am for't, but some woman had the ring.

No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul,
no man had it, but a civil doctor,

I did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
I begg'd the ring ; the which I did deny him,
I offer'd him to go displeas'd away ;
I was that had held up the very life of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady ?
I enforc'd to send it after him,
I beset with shame and courtesy ;
I honour would not let ingratitude out of his besmear it : Pardon me, good lady ;
I have these blessed candles of the night,
I have seen there, I think, you would have begged of me to give the worthy doctor.

Let not that doctor e'er come near my house :
I have heath got the jewel that I lov'd,
I have that which you did swear to keep for me,
I have become as liberal as you ;
I will not deny him any thing I have,
I will not deny my body, nor my husband's bed :
I will not deny him I shall, I am well sure of it :
I will not deny a night from home ; watch me, like Argus :
I will not deny to do, if I be left alone,
I will not deny by mine honour, which is yet my own.

I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And I his clerk ; therefore be well advis'd,
How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, do you so : let me not take him then ;
For, if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.
Por. Sir, grieve not you ; You are welcome notwithstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong ;
And, in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself,— Mark you but that !

Por. In both my eyes he doubly sees himself :
In each eye, one ;—swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me :
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth ;
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,

Had quite miscarried : I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety : Give him this ;
And bid him keep it better than the other.

Ant. Here, lord Bassanio ; swear to keep this ring.

Bass. By heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor !
Por. I had it of him : pardon me, Bassanio ;
For by this ring the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano ;
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough :
What ! are we cuckolds, ere we have deserv'd it ?

Por. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amaz'd :
Here is a letter, read it at your leisure ;
It comes from Padua, from Bellario ;

There you shall find, that Portia was the doctor ;
Nerissa there, her clerk : Lorenzo here
Shall witness, I set forth as soon as you,
And but even now return'd ; I have not yet
Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome ;
And I have better news in store for you,
Than you expect : unseal this letter soon ;
There you shall find, three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly :
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.
Bass. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not ?
Gra. Were you the clerk, that is to make me cuckold !

Ner. Ay ; but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow ;
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life, and living ;

For here I read for certain, that my ships
Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo ?
My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.—
There do I give to you, and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,
And yet, I am sure, you are not satisfied
Of these events at full : Let us go in ;
And charge us there upon interrogatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so : The first interrogatory, That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay ;
Or go to bed now, being two hours to-day :
But were the day come, I should wish it dark,
That I were couching with the doctor's clerk.

Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing
So sore, as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

An orchard, near Oliver's house.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me: By will, but a poor thousand crowns; and, as thou say'st, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept: For call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hired: but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth; for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing, that he so plentifully gives me, the something, that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, hars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter OLIVER.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.
Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Oli. Now, sir! what make you here?

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What mar you then, sir?

Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness!

Oli. Marry, sir, be better employ'd, and be naught awhile.

Orl. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are, sir?

Orl. O, sir, very well, here in your orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom, sir?

Orl. Ay, better than he, I am before, knows me. I know, you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me:

The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What, boy!

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orl. I am no villain; I am the youngest son of sir Rowland de Bois; he was my father; and he is thrice a villain, that says, such a father begets villains: Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this band from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so; thou hast railed on thyself.

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient; for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go, I say.

Orl. I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

[Exit Orlando and Adam.]
Oli. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physick your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Hold, Dennis!

Enter DENNIS.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.—] 'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Act 2 Sc. 4.

Published by W. Pickering Lincoln's Inn Fields 1823.

Enter CHARLES.

a. Good morrow to your worship.
 i. Good monsieur Charles!—what's the new at the new court!

a. There's no news at the court, sir, but the news: that is, the old duke is banished by his brother the new duke; and three or four lords have put themselves into voluntary with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave and order.

a. Can you tell, if Rosalind, the duke's sister, be banished with her father?

i. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, and her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or died to stay behind her. She is at the court, no less beloved of her uncle than his own sister; and never two ladies loved as they do.

a. Where will the old duke live?

i. They say, he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and they live like the old Robin Hood of England: as many young gentlemen flock to him every day and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the idle world.

a. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the duke?

i. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your younger brother, Orlando, disposition to come in disguise'd against me to fall: To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my life; and he, that escapes me without some limb, shall acquit him well. Your brother young and tender; and, for your love, I would I could foil him, as I must, for my own honour, some in: therefore, out of my love to you, I desire to acquaint you withal; that either you stay him from his intendment, or brook such a fall as he shall run into; in that it is a fall of his own search, and altogether against my

Charles, I think thee for thy love to me, thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Orlando,—it is the stubborn young fellow of Arden; full of ambition, an envious emulaturer of his own good parts, a secret and villainous conspirator against me his natural brother; therefore use caution; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger: And thou wert best look to't; or dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do but disgrace himself on thee, he will practise thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee, till he hath thy life by some indirect means or other: for, Orlando, thee, and almost with tears I speak it, not one so young and so villainous this day I speak but brotherly of him; but should I name him to thee as he is, I must blush and blush and thou must look pale and wonder.

I am heartily glad I came hither to you: If to-morrow, I'll give him his payment: If he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize with him; and so, God keep your worship! [Exit.]
 Farewell, good Charles.—Now will I stir my sister: I hope I shall see an end of him; and, yet I know not why, hates nothing on earth. Yet he's gentle; never school'd, learned; full of noble device; of all sorts of loves beloved; and, indeed, so much in the world, and especially of my own people, best know him, that I am altogether mis-taken: it shall not be so long; this wrestler or all: nothing remains, but that I kindle him, which now I'll go about. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A lawn before the Duke's palace.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

ay thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein, I see, thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee: if my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know, my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection; by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, let me turn monster: therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports: let me see; What think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry, I pr'ythee, do, to make sport withal: but love no man in good earnest; nor no further in sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou may'st in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune, from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced: and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true: for those, that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest; and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favouredly.

Ros. Nay, now thou goest from fortune's office to nature's: fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of nature.

Enter TOUCHSTONE.

Cel. No? When nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by fortune fall into the fire?—Though nature hath given us wit to flout at fortune, hath not fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature; when fortune makes nature's natural the cutter off of nature's wit.

Cel. Peradventure, this is not fortune's work neither, but nature's; who perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of his wits.—How now, wit? whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught, and the mustard was good; and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry; now unmanly your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards, that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were; but, if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or, if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Pr'ythee, who is't, that thou mean'st?

Touch. One, that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him. Enough! speak no more of him; you'll be whip'd for taxation, one of these days.

Touch. The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, thou say'st true: for since the little wit, that fools have, was silenced, the little foolery, that wise men have, makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter LE BEAU.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau: What's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Ros. Sport? Of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said; that was laid on with a trowel.

Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,—

Ros. Thou lovest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons,—

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—

Ros. With bills on their necks,—Be it known unto all men by these presents,—

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third: Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time, that ever I heard, breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken musick in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here: for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke FREDERICK, Lords, ORLANDO, CHARLES, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on; since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin? are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my liege: so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the men: In pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated: Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by. [Duke goes apart.]

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attended them, with all respect and Ros. Young man, have you challenged the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: You have seen cruel proof of man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to equal enterprise. We pray you, for your sake, to embrace your own safety, and give up this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation should therefore be misapplied: we will make it known to the duke, that the wrestling might not be forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with hard thoughts; wherein I confess me much bound to deny so fair and excellent ladies any thing: let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes, go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is no shame, that was never gracious; if kill but one dead, that is willing to be so: I shall not be friends no wrong, for I have none to lament the world no injury, for in it I have nothing in the world I fill up a place, which may be supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I will give you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven, I be not in you.

Cel. Your heart's desires he with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace; you shall entreat him to a second, that have so persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you shall have mocked me before: but come your way.

Ros. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the fellow by the leg. [Charles and Orlando]

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye to tell who should down. [Charles is thrown.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am well breath'd.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. [Charles is borne off.]

What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; and the youngest son Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been some other man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable; But I did find him still mine enemy:

Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with death,

Hadst thou descended from another house; But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth;

I would, thou hadst told me of another fall.

[Exeunt Duke Fred. Train, and Orlando.]

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I did!

Orl. I am more proud to be sir Rowland's youngest son;—and would not change calling,

To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd sir Rowland as his own; And all the world was of my father's mind;

Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreat;

Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle! Let us go thank him, and encourage him: My father's rough and envious disposition Sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well doted; If you do keep your promises in love, thly, as you have exceeded promise, mistress shall be happy.

Gentleman,

[Giving him a chain from her neck.
his for me; out of suits with fortune, uld give more, but that her hand lacks ceans.—
re go, coz?

Ay:—Fare you well, fair gentleman.
Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts hrown down; and that, which here stands up, a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

He calls us back: My pride fell with my rtunes:
him what he would:—Did you call, sir?—
I have wrestled well, and overthrown an your enemies.

Will you go, coz?

Have with you:—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

What passion hangs these weights upon my ngue?

I speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Re-enter LE BEAU.

Orlando! thou art overthrown;
les, or something weaker, masters thee.
u. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you this place: Albeit you have deserv'd mmendation, true applause, and love,
h is now the duke's condition,
miconstrues all that you have done.
e is humorous; what he is, indeed, its you to conceive, than me to speak of.
thank you, sir: and, pray you, tell me this;
of the two was daughter of the duke,
re was at the wrestling?

u. Neither his daughter, if we judge by anners;

indeed, the shorter is his daughter:
r is daughter to the banish'd duke,
e detain'd by her usurping uncle, his daughter company; whose loves er than the natural bond of sisters.
n tell you, that of late this duke en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece;
d upon no other argument,
the people praise her for her virtues,
her for her good father's sake;
my life, his malice 'gainst the lady lidenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well;
r, in a better world than this,
esire more love and knowledge of you.
rest much bounden to you: fare you well!

[Exit Le Beau.

ist I from the smoke into the smother;
rant duke, unto a tyrant brother:—
venly Rosalind!

[Exit.

SCENE III.

A room in the palace.

Enter CELIA and ROSALIND.

Why, cousin; why, Rosalind:—Cupid have Not a word?
lot one to throw at a dog.
o, thy words are too precious to be cast on curs, throw some of them at me; come, with reasons.

hen there were two cousins laid up; when ould be lamed with reasons, and the other out any.

ut is all this for your father?
o, some of it for my child's father: O,
of briars is this working-day world!
hey are but burs, cousin, thrown upon oliday foolery; if we walk not in the aths, our very petticoats will catch them.
ould shake them off my coat; these burs
y heart.

em them away.
ould try; if I could cry hem, and have me, come, wrestle with thy affections.

, they take the part of a better wrestler elf.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall.—But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: Is it possible on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ros. The duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue, that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No 'faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve
well?

Ros. Let me love him for that; and do you love him, because I do:—Look, here comes the duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, despatch you with your safest haste,
And get you from our court.

Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke F. You, cousin:

Within these ten days if that thou be'st found
So near our publick court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantick,
(As I do trust I am not,) then, dear uncle,
Never, so much as in a thought unborn,
Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors;

If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:—
Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
Tell me, whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter, there's enough.

Ros. So was I, when your highness took his dukedom;

So was I, when your highness banish'd him:

Treason is not inherited, my lord;

Or, if we did derive it from our friends,

What's that to me? my father was no traitor:

Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much,

To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake, Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay:

It was your pleasure, and your own remorse;

I was too young that time to value her,

But now I know her: if she be a traitor,

Why so am I; we still have slept together,

Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;

And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,

Her very silence, and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.

Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;

And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,

When she is gone: then open not thy lips;

Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege;

I cannot live out of her company.

Duke F. You are a fool:—You, niece, provide yourself;

If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke Frederick and Lords.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?

Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.

I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;

Pr'ythee, be cheerful: know'st thou not the duke
Hath banish'd me his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.
 Cel. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
 Which teacheth thee, that thou and I am one:
 Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?
 No; let my father seek another heir.

Therefore devise with me, how we may fly,
 Whither to go, and what to bear with us:
 And do not seek to take your change upon you,
 To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out;
 For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
 Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?
 Cel. To seek my uncle.
 Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
 Maids as we are, to travel forth so far?
 Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
 And with a kind of umber smirch my face;
 The like do you; so shall we pass along,
 And never stir assailables.

Ros. Were it not better,
 Because that I am more than common tall,
 That I did suit me all points like a man?

A gallant curtle-ax upon my thigh,
 A boar-spear in my hand; and (in my heel)
 Lie there what hidden woman's fear there
 We'll have a swashing and a martial out
 As many other mannish cowards have,
 That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee, when thou art Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jovian page,
 And therefore look you call me Ganymede
 But what will you be call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to
 No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we assay'd to The clownish fool out of your father's court
 Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world
 Leave me alone to woo him: Let's away,
 And get our jewels and our wealth together
 Devise the fittest time, and safest way
 To hide us from pursuit that will be made After my flight: Now go we in content,
 To liberty, and not to banishment.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke senior, AMIENS, and other Lords, in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates, and brothers in exile,
 Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
 Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
 More free from peril than the envious court?
 Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
 The seasons' difference; as, the icy fang,
 And churlish chiding of the winter's wind;
 Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,
 Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,—
 This is no flattery: these are counsellors,
 That feelingly persuade me what I am.
 Sweet are the uses of adversity;

Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
 Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
 And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
 Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
 Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Ami. I would not change it: Happy is your grace,
 That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
 Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
 And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,—
 Being native burghers of this desert city,—
 Should, in their own confines, with forked heads
 Have their round haunches gor'd.

1 Lord. Indeed, my lord,

The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
 And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
 Than doth your brother, that hath banish'd you.
 To-day, my lord of Amiens, and myself,
 Did steal behind him, as he lay along
 Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out Upon the brook, that brawls along this wood:
 To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
 That from the hunters' aim had ta'en a hurt,
 Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord,
 The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
 That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
 Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
 Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
 In piteous chase; and thus the hairy fool,
 Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
 Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
 Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
 Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord. O, yes, into a thousand similes.
 First, for his weeping in the needless stream;
 Poor deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
 As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
 To that which had too much: Then, being alone, Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends;
 'Tis right, quoth he; this misery doth part

The flux of company: Anon, a careless herd
 Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
 And never stays to greet him; Ay, quoth Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
 'Tis just the fashion: Wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
 Thus most invectively he pierceth through
 The body of the country, city, court,
 Yea, and of this our life: swearing, that Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's To fright the animals, and to kill them
 In their assign'd and native dwelling place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this plation?
 2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place
 I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
 For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight.

SCENE II.

A room in the palace.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, Lords, and Ad

Duke F. Can it be possible, that no man
 It cannot be: some villains of my court
 Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1 Lord. I cannot hear of any, that did
 The ladies, her attendants of her chamber Saw her a-bed; and, in the morning earl
 They found the bed untreasur'd of their

2 Lord. My lord, the roynish clown, at Your grace was wont to laugh, is also mi
 Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
 Confesses, that she secretly o'er-heard
 Your daughter and her cousin much com
 The parts and graces of the wrestler,
 That did but lately foil the sinewy Char
 And she believes, wherever they are gone,
 That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch the
 hither;

If he be absent, bring his brother to me,
 I'll make him find him: do this suddenly
 And let not search and inquisition quail
 To bring again these foolish runaways.

SCENE III.

Before Oliver's house.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM, meet

Orl. Who's there?

Adam. What! my young master?—O, m master,

O, my sweet master, O you memory
 Of old sir Rowland? why, what make you Why are you virtuous? Why do people wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?

 y would you be so fond to overcome bony priser of the humorous duke?
 r praise is come too swiftly home before you.
 rv you not, master, to some kind of men ir graces serve them but as enemies?
 more do yours; your virtues, gentle master, sanctified and holy traitors to you.
 what a world is this, when what is comely enoms him that bears it!

Why, what's the matter?

O unhappy youth,
 e not within these doors; within this roof enemy of all your graces lives:
 r brother—(no, no brother; yet the son—not the son;—I will not call him son—tim I was about to call his father.)— a heard your praises; and this night he means am the lodging where you use to lie, you within it: if he fail of that,
 will have other means to cut you off:
 e heard him, and his practices.

is no place, this house is but a butchery;
 r it, fear it, do not enter it.

Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?

Now. No matter whither, so you come not here.
 What, wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

with a base and boisterous sword, enforce ieivish living on the common road?

I must do, or know not what to do:
 this I will not do, do how I can;

her will subject me to the malice diverted blood, and bloody brother.

But do not so: I have five hundred crowns, thrifty hire I sav'd under your father,

sh I did store, to be my foster-nurse,
 a service should in my old limbs lie lame, unregarded age in corners thrown;

 that: and He, that doth the ravens feed, providently caters for the sparrow, mfort to my age! Here is the gold;

via I give you: Let me be your servant;
 gh I look old, yet I am strong and lusty:

a my youth I never did apply und rebellious liquors in my blood;

lid not with unbashful forehead woo means of weakness and debility;

fore my age is as a lusty winter,
 y, but kindly: let me go with you;

o the service of a younger man your business and necessities.

O good old man; how well in thee appears onstant service of the antique world,

i service sweat for duty, not for meed!
 art not for the fashion of these times,

e none will sweat, but for promotion;
 aving that, do choke their service up with the having: it is not so with thee.

 or old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,

cannot so much as a blossom yield,
 u of all thy pains and husbandry:

ome thy ways, we'll go along together;
 re we have thy youthful wages spent,

light upon some settled low content.
 m. Master, go on; and I will follow thee,

s last gasp, with truth and loyalty.—
 seventeen years till now almost fourscore lived I, but now live here no more.

 enteen years many their fortunes seek;

t fourscore, it is too late a week:
 rtune cannot recompense me better,

to die well, and not my master's debtor.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The Forest of Arden.

ROSALIND in boy's clothes, CELIA dressed as a Shepherdess, and TOUCHSTONE.

O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!

Oh, I care not for my spirits, if my legs were weary.

I could find in my heart to disgrace my apparel, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doubteth and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat:

 therefore, courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you, bear with me; I cannot go no further.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you: yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you; for, I think, you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden.

Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool
 I; when I was at home, I was in a better place;
 but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone:—Look you, who comes here; a young man, and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter CORIN and SILVIUS.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess;
 Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover

As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:
 But, if thy love were ever like to mine,

(As sure I think did never man love so,)
 How many actions most ridiculous

Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?
 Cor. Into a thousand, that I have forgotten.

Sil. O, thou didst then ne'er love so heartily:
 If thou remember'st not the slightest folly,

That ever love did make thee run into,
 Thou hast not lov'd:

Or, if thou hast not sat as I do now,
 Wearing thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,

Thou hast not lov'd:
 Or, if thou hast not broke from company,

Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,
 Thou hast not lov'd: O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe!

[Exit Silvius.]

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,
 I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine: I remember, when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming anight to Jane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chop'd hands had milk'd: and

I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her;
 from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said with weeping tears, Wear these for my sake. We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser, than thou art 'ware of.

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove! Jove! this shepherd's passion
 Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man,
 If he for gold will give us any food;

I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla; you, clown!

Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say:—
 Good even to you, friend.

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

Ros. I prythee, shepherd, if that love, or gold,
 Can in this desert place buy entertainment,

Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed:
 Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,

And fainfs for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,
 And wish for her sake, more than for mine own,

My fortunes were more able to relieve her:
 But I am shepherd to another man,
 And do not shear the fleeces, that I graze;
 My master is of charlish disposition,
 And little recks to find the way to heaven
 By doing deeds of hospitality:
 Besides, his cote, his hocks, and bounds of feed,
 Are now on sale, and at our sheeppcote now,

By reason of his absence, there is nothing,
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he, that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain, that you saw here but
erewhile,

That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages: I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold:

Go with me; if you like, upon report,

The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,

I will your very faithful feeder be,

And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

The same.

Enter AMIENS, JAQUES, and others.

SONG.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And tune his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I pr'ythee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weazel sucks eggs: More, I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged; I know, I cannot please
you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire you to sing: Come, more; another stanza;
Call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing: Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request, than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you: but that, they call compliment, is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and, when a man thanks me heartily, methinks, I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks.
Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover the while; the duke will drink under this tree:—he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him.
He is too disputable for my company: I think of as many matters as he; but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

SONG.

Who doth ambition shun, [All together here.]
And loves to live i' the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither!
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in spite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:

If it do come to pass,
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame;
Here shall he see
Gross fools as he,
An if he will come to Ami.

Ami. What's that ducdame?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools by a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll against all the first-born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke; his banquet prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.

The same.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further: I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure out grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer t a little: If this uncouth forest yield any savage, I will either be food for it, or bring food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than powers. For my sake, be comfortable; hold awhile at the arm's end; I will here be with presently; and if I bring thee not something I'll give thee leave to die: but if thou diest
I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.
said! thou look'st cheerily: and I'll be wit quickly.—Yet thou liest in the bleak air: C I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt die for lack of a dinner, if there live any th this desert. Cheerly, good Adam! [E.]

SCENE VII.

The same.

A table set out. Enter Duke senior, AMIENS, Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a
For I can no where find him like a man.

I Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone
Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow must
We shall have shortly discord in the sphere Go, seek him; tell him, I would speak with

Enter JAQUES.

I Lord. He saves my labour by his own app Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur: what is this,

That your poor friends must woo your comp
What! you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool! the

A motley fool;—a miserable world!—

As I do live by food, I met a fool;

Who laid him down and bask'd him in the

And rail'd on lady Fortune in good terms,

In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool.

Good morrow, fool, quoth I: No, sir, quoth he

Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune

And then he drew a dial from his poke;

And looking on it with lack-lustre eye,

Says, very wisely, It is ten o'clock:

Thus may we see, quoth he, how the world woe

'Tis but an hour ago, since it was nine;

And after an hour more, 'twill be eleven;

And so, from hour to hour, we rot and ripe,

And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot,

And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear

The motley fool thus moral on the time,

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer,

That fools should be so deep-contemplative;

And I did laugh, sans intermission,

An hour by his dial.—O noble fool!

A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.

Duke S. What fool is this?

Jaq. O worthy fool!—One, that hath been a co

And says, if ladies be but young, and fair,

They have the gift to know it: and in his hr

Which is as dry as the remainder bisket

After a voyage,—he hath strange places eraz

With observation, the which he vents

In mangled forms:—O, that I were a fool!

I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq. It is my only

Provided, that you weed your better judgment

Of all opinion, that grows rank in them,

That I am wise. I must have liberty

Withal, as large a charter as the wind,

To blow on whom I please; for so fools hav

7.
 i they, that are most galled with my folly,
 y most must laugh : And why, sir, must they so?
 y why is plain as way to parish church :
 y that a fool doth very wisely hit,
 h very foolishly, although he smart,
 o seem senseless of the hob : if not,
 wise man's folly is anatomiz'd
 n by the squandering glances of the fool.
 est me in my motley ; give me leave speak my mind, and I will through and through use the foul body of the infected world, hey will patiently receive my medicine.
 Duke S. Fie on thee ! I can tell what thou wouldst do.

sp. What, for a counter, would I do, but good?
 Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin :
 thou thyself hast been a libertine, sensual as the brutish sting itself ;
 all the embossed sores, and headed evils,
 all thou with licence of free foot hast caught,
 wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.
 sp. Why, who cries out on pride, can therein tax any private party ?
 it not flow as hugely as the sea,
 that the very very means do ebb ?
 at woman in the city do I name, en that I say, The city-woman bears cost of princes on unworthy shoulders ?
 can come in, and say, that I mean her,
 en such a one as she, such is her neighbour ?
 what is he of basest function, says, his bravery is not on my cost, asking that I mean him,) but therein suits folly to the mettle of my speech ?
 ven then ; How, what then ? Let me see wherein tongue hath wrong'd him : if it do him right, he hath wrong'd himself ; if he be free,
 then, my taxing like a wild goose flies,
 aim'd of any man.—But who comes here ?

Enter ORLANDO, with his sword drawn.

l. Forbear, and eat no more.
 p. Why, I have eat none yet.
 l. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.
 p. Of what kind should this cock come of ?
 Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress ;
 use a rude despiser of good manners,
 in civility thou seem'st so empty ?
 l. You touch'd my vein at first ; the thorny point do distress hath ta'en from me the show mouth civility : yet am I inland bred, know some nurture : But forbear, I say ;
 jes, that touches any of this fruit,
 I and my affairs are answered.
 i. An you will not be answered with reason, sit die.
 Duke S. What would you have ? Your gentleness shall force,
 than your force move us to gentleness.
 I almost die for food, and let me have it.
 Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.
 l. Speak you so gently ? Pardon me, I pray you :
 ought that all things had been savage here ;
 therefore put I on the countenance stern commandment : But whate'er you are,
 in this desert inaccessible,
 r the shade of melancholy boughs,
 and neglect the creeping hours of time ;
 r you have look'd on better days ;
 n been, where bells have knoll'd to church ;
 n sat at any good man's feast ;
 r from your eye-lids wip'd a tear,
 know what 'tis to pity, and be pitied ;
 entleness my strong enforcement be :
 e which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.
 Duke S. True is it, that we have seen better days ;
 have with holy bell been knoll'd to church ;
 sat at good men's feasts ; and wip'd our eyes ops, that sacred pity hath engender'd :
 therefore sit you down in gentleness, take upon command what help we have,
 to your wanting may be ministered.
 l. Then, but forbear your food a little while,
 es, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,

And give it food. There is an old poor man,
 Who after me hath many a weary step Limp'd in pure love ; till he be first suffic'd,— Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,—
 I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,
 And we will nothing waste, till you return.
 Or. I thank ye ; and be bless'd for your good comfort ! [Exit.]

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy :
 This wide and universal theatre
 Presents more woeful pageants than this scene, Wherein we play in.

Jaq. All the world's a stage,
 And all the men and women merely players :
 They have their exits, and their entrances ;
 And one man in his time plays many parts,
 His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant, Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms ;
 And then, the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
 And shining morning face, creeping like snail
 Unwillingly to school : And then, the lover ;
 Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
 Made to his mistress' eye-brow : Then, a soldier ;
 Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
 Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
 Seeking the bubble reputation
 Even in the cannon's mouth : And then, the justice ;
 In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,
 With eyes severe, and beard of formal out,
 Full of wise saws and modern instances,
 And so he plays his part : the sixth age shifts
 Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon ;
 With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side ;
 His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
 For his shrunk shank ; and his big many voice,
 Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
 And whistles in his sound : Last scene of all,
 That ends this strange eventful history,
 Is second childishness, and mere oblivion ;
 Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter ORLANDO, with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome : Set down your venerable burden,
 And let him feed.

Or. I thank you most for him.
 Adam. So had you need ;
 I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome, fall to : I will not trouble you
 As yet, to question you about your fortunes :—
 Give us some musick ; and, good cousin, sing.

AMIEENS sings.

SONG.

I.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
 Thou art not so unkind
 As man's ingratitude ;
 Thy tooth is not so keen,
 Because thou art not seen,
 Although thy breath be rude.
 Heigh, ho ! sing, heigh, ho ! unto the green holly :
 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly :
 Then, heigh, ho, the holly !
 This life is most jolly.

II.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
 That dost not bite so nigh
 As benefits forgot :
 Though thou the waters warp,
 Thy sting is not so sharp
 As friend remember'd not.
 Heigh, ho ! sing, heigh, ho ! &c.

Duke S. If that you were the good sir Rowland's son,—

As you have whisper'd faithfully, you were ;
 And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
 Most truly limn'd, and living in your face,—
 Be truly welcome hither : I am the duke,
 That lov'd your father ! The residue of your fortune,
 Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man,
 Thou art right welcome as thy master is :
 Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand,
 And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A room in the palace.Enter Duke FREDERICK, OLIVER, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:

But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present: But look to it;
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is;
Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living,
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.
Thy lands, and all things, that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands;
Till thou can'st quit thee by thy brother's mouth,
Of what we think against thee.

Off. O, that your highness knew my heart in this!
I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors;

And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his house and lands:
Do this expediently, and turn him going.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The forest.Enter ORLANDO, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love:
And thou, thrice crowned queen of night, survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character;
That every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.
Run, run, Orlando; carve, on every tree,
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. [Exit.]

Enter CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends:—That the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn: That good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun: That he, that hath learned no wit by nature nor art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher.
Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope,—

Touch. Truly, thou art damn'd; like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked;
and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation:
Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those, that are good manners at the court, are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me, you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands;

courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes;
they fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtiers' hands sv and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: A b instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. S low, again: A more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd over with surgery of our sheep; And would you have us tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with Touch. Most shallow man! Thou worms-in respect of a good piece of flesh: Indeed!—I of the wise, and perpend: Civet is of a baser than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat.

the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me; I'll Touch. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God help shallow man! God make incision in thee!

art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer; I earn t eat; get that I wear; owe no man hate; en man's happiness; glad of other men's good; tent with my harm; and the greatest of my is, to see my ewes graze, and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in yo bring the ewes and the rams together, and to to get your living by the copulation of cattl be hawd to a bell-wether; and to betray a lamb of a twelvemonth, to a crooked-pated cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If be'st not damn'd for this, the devil himsel have no shepherds; I cannot see else how shouldst 'scape.

Cor. Here comes young master Ganymede new mistress's brother.

Enter ROSALIND, reading a paper.

Ros. From the east to western Ind,

No jewel is like Rosalind.

Her worth, being mounted on the wind,

Through all the world bears Rosalind.

All the pictures, fairest lin'd,

Are but black to Rosalind.

Let no face be kept in mind,

But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so, eight years toge dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours exce it is the right butter-woman's rank to market

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:—

If a hart do lack a kind,

Let him seek out Rosalind.

If the cat will after kind,

So, be sure, will Rosalind.

Winter-garments must be fin'd,

So must slender Rosalind.

They that reap must sheaf and bind;

Then to cart with Rosalind.

Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,

Such a nut is Rosalind.

He that sweetest rose will find,

Must find love's prick, and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses; Wh you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool; I found them tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graft it with you, and then I shall it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest in the country: for you'll be rotten ere you be ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wise no, let the forest judge.

Enter CELIA, reading a paper.

Peace!
comes my sister, reading; stand aside.

Why should this desert silent be?

For it is unpeopled? No;
Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings show.
Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage;
That the stretching of a span Buckles in his sum of age.

Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence's end,

Will I Rosalinda write;
Teaching all, that read, to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show.

Therefore heaven nature charg'd,
That one body should be fill'd
With all graces wide enlarg'd:

Nature presently distill'd
Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;

Atalanta's better part;
Sad Lucretia's modesty.

Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devis'd;
Of many faces, eyes and hearts,
To have the touches dearest priz'd.

Hea would that she these gifts should have,
I to live and die her slave.

O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily have you wearied your parishioners withal, er cry'd, Have patience, good people!

How now! back friends;—Shepherd, go off
—Go with him, sirrah.

Come, shepherd, let us make an honourreast; though not with bag and baggage,
I scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt Corin and Touchstone.
Didst thou hear these verses?

O, yes, I heard them all, and more too;
of them had in them more feet than the ould bear.

That's no matter; the feet might bear the ly, but the feet were lame, and could not mselves without the verses, and therefore mely in the verse.

But didst thou hear, without wondering name should be hang'd and carved upon es?

was seven of the nine days out of the before you came; for look here what I a palm-tree: I was never so be-rhymed thagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, can hardly remember.

row you, who hath done this?
s it a man?

nd a chain, that you once wore, about his hange you colour?
pr'ythee, who?

lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends
; but mountains may be removed with kes, and so encounter.

ay, but who is it?
it possible?

ay, I pray thee now, with most petitionary ce, tell me who it is.

wonderful, wonderful, and most wondererful, and yet again wonderful, and after of all whooping!

ood my complexion! dost thou think,
I am caparison'd like a man, I have a nd hose in my disposition? One inch of re is a South-sea-off discovery. I pr'y-me, who is it? quickly, and speak apace;
thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine t of a narrow-mouth'd bottle; either too once, or none at all. I pr'ythee take the of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando; that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking; speak sad brow, and true maid.

Cel. I' faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose?—What did he, when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he?
Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again?
Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Garagantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size: To say, ay, and no, to these particulars, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know, that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as fresh as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, as to resolve the propositions of a lover:—but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with a good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropp'd acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along, like a wounded
knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it will become the ground.

Cel. Cry, holla! to thy tongue, I pr'ythee; it curvets very unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden:
thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter ORLANDO and JAQUES.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he; slink by, and note him.

[Celia and Rosalind retire.
Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet for fashion sake, I thank you too for your society.

Jaq. God be with you; let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more of my verses with reading them ill-favourably.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you, when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers: Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conan'd them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit; I think it was made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me?
and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world, but myself; against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook; look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There shall I see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool, or a cypher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you: farewell, good signior love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure; adieu, good monsieur melancholy.

[Exit Jaques.—Celia and Rosalind come forward.]

Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lacquey, and under that habit play the knave with him.—Do you hear, forester?

Orl. Very well; What would you?

Ros. I pray, what isn't a clock?

Orl. You should ask me, what time o' day; there's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of time, as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time? had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir: Time travels in divers paces with divers persons: I'll tell you who time ambles withal, who time trots withal, who time gallops withal, and he who stands still withal.

Orl. I pr'ythee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a se'nnight, time's pace is so hard, that it seems the length of seven years.

Orl. Who ambles time withal?

Ros. With a priest, that lacks Latin, and a rich man, that hath not the gout: for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury: These time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows: for though he goes as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherd, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you can purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man; one, that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God, I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another, as half-pence are: every one fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I pr'ythee, recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaked; I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love;

in which cage of rushes, I am sure, you are prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not: a l' eye, and sunken; which you have not: an questionable spirit; which you have not: a neglected; which you have not:—but I pardon for that; for, simply, your having a beard, younger brother's revenue:—Then your hose shall be ungarter'd, and your bonnet unbanded, sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and e thing about you demonstrating a careless desolay. But you are no such man; you are rather p device in your accoutrements; as loving your than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee lieve I love.

Ros. Me believe it? you may as soon make that you love believe it; which, I warrant, sl apter to do, than to confess she does: that is of the points, in the which women still give th to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are he, that hangs the verses on the trees, wh Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rh speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell deserves as well a dark house and a whip, as men do: and the reason why they are n punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so nary, that the whippers are in love too: profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He w imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set every day to woo me: At which time wou being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effem changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantas apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, fr smiles; for every passion something, and f passion truly any thing, as boys and wome for the most part cattle of this colour: would like him, now loath him; then entertain him, forswear him; now weep for him, then sp him; that I drave my suitor from his mad hu of love, to a living humour of madness; w was, to forswear the full stream of the world to live in a nook merely monastick: And cured him; and this way will I take upon wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's t that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but c Rosalind, and come every day to my cot woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it and, by the way, you shall tell me where i forest you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind:— sister, will you go? [E.]

SCENE III.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY; JAQ at a distance, observing them.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey; I will up your goats, Audrey: And how, Audrey? the man yet? Doth my simple feature c you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us! features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was amon Goths.

Jaq. O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than in a thatch'd house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be stood, nor a man's good wit seconded with forward child, understanding, it strikes a man than a great reckoning in a little room:—

; I would the gods had made thee poetical.

d. I do not know what poetical is: Is it t in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

sch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, to feign.

f. Do you wish then, that the gods had made satirical?

ch. I do, truly: for thou swear'st to me, art honest; now, if thou wert a poet, I might some hope thou didst feign.

f. Would you not have me honest?

ch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd:
nasty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a to sugar.

A material fool! [Aside.]

f. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray d'st make me honest!

ch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a lut, were to put good meat into an unclean

I. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I
l.

ch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness!
hness may come hereafter. But be it as it e, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the vicar of the next

; who hath promised to meet me in this of the forest, and to couple us.

I would fain see this meeting. [Aside.]

Well, the gods give us joy!

A. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful stagger in this attempt; for here we have no but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts.

hat though? Courage! As horns are odious, e necessary. It is said,—Many a man knows of his goods: right; many a man has good and knows no end of them. Well, that is wry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting,

Even so:—Poor men alone!—No, no;
olest deer hath them as huge as the rascal.

single man therefore blessed! No: as a town is more worthier than a village, so is head of a married man more honourable he bare brow of a bachelor: and by how ference is better than no skill, by so much rn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir OLIVER MAR-TEXT.

comes sir Oliver:—Sir Oliver Mar-text, you ll met: Will you despatch us here under e, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

W. Is there none here to give the woman?

A. I will not take her on gift of any man.

W. Truly, she must be given, or the mar-rriage not lawful.

[Discovering himself.] Proceed, proceed; I'll
r.

f. Good even, good master What ye call't:
o you, sir? You are very well met: God'll'd your last company: I am very glad to see Even a toy in hand here, sir:—Nay; pray, r'd.

Will you be married, modley?

f. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his nd the falcon her bells, so man hath his
; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be g.

And will you, being a man of your breeding, ried under a bush, like a beggar? Get you ch, and have a good priest, that can tell you rriage is: this fellow will but join you r as they join wainscot; then one of you will r shrunk pannel, and, like green timber, varp.

I. I am not in the mind but I were better to died of him than of another: for he is not marry me well; and not being well married, be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave e.

Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

i. Come, sweet Audrey;
st be married, or we must live in bawdry.
ll, good master Oliver!

Not—O sweet Oliver,
O brave Oliver,
Leave me not behi' thee;
But—Wind away,
Begone, I say,

I will not to wedding wi' thee.
[Exeunt Jaques, Touchstone, and Audrey.]

Sir Oli. 'Tis no matter; ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. Before a cottage.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. Never talk to me, I will weep.

Cel. Do, I pr'ythee, but yet have the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's: marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I'faith his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour: your chesnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana:
a nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes: I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a cover'd goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but, I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright, he was.

Cel. Was is not is: besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmers of false reckonings: He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much question with him: He asked me, of what parentage
I was; I told him, of as good as he; so he laugh'd, and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart
the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose: but all's brave, that youth mounts, and folly guides:—Who comes here?

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft inquired
After the shepherd, that complain'd of love;

Who you saw sitting by me on the turf,
Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess,
That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd,
Between the pale complexion of true love
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain,
Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove;
The sight of lovers feedeth those in love:—
Bring us unto this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another part of the forest.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe:
Say, that you love me not; but say not so
In bitterness: The common executioner, Whose heart the accustom'd sight of death makes hard,

Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But first begs pardon; Will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and CORIN, at a distance.

Ph. I would not be thy executioner;
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.
Thou tell'st me, there is murder in mine eye;
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,
That eyes,—that are the frail'st and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,—
Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers!
Now do I frown on thee with all my heart;
And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee;
Now counterfeit to swoon; why now fall down;
Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee:
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure
Thy palm some moment keeps; but now mine eyes,
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not;
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever, (as that ever may be near,)
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,
Then shall you know the wounds invisible,
That love's keen arrows make.

Ph. But, till that time,
Come not thou near me: and, when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not;
As, till that time, I shall not pity thee.

Ros. And why, I pray you? [Advancing.] Who might be your mother,
That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What though you have more beauty,

(As, by my faith, I see no more in you Than without candle may go dark to bed),
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you, than in the ordinary
Of nature's sale-work:—Od's my little life!
I think, she means to tangle my eyes too!—
No, 'faith, proud mistress, hope not after it;
'Tis not your inky brows, your black-silk hair,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame my spirits to your worship.—
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her,
Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a properer man,
Than she a woman: 'Tis such fools as you,
That make the world full of ill-favour'd children:
'Tis not her glass, but you that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper,
Than any of her lineaments can show her.—
But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love:
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,—
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer;
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So, take her to thee, shepherd!—fare you well.

Ph. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together;

I had rather hear you chide, than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with her foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger: If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Ph. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with
For I am false than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: If you will know my
'Tis at the tuft of olives, here hard by:—
Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard Come, sister:—Shepherdess, look on him be
And be not proud: though all the world could None could be so abus'd in sight as he.
Come, to our flock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and
Ph. Dead shepherd! now I find thy saw of Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—
Ph. Ha! what say'st thou, Sil?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.
Ph. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Sil!
Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be;
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief
Were both exterrin'd.

Ph. Thou hast my love; Is not that neighb'ring
Sil. I would have you.

Ph. Why, that were covetous Silvius, the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love:
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompense,
Than thine own gladness, that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man,
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and
A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Ph. Know'st thou the youth that spoke
erewhile?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him of
And he hath bought the cottage, and the boy
That the old carlot once was master of.

Ph. Think not I love him, though I ask for
'Tis but a peevish boy:—yet he talks well;
But what care I for words? yet words do well
When he that speaks them, pleases those that hear:
It is a pretty youth:—not very pretty:—
But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride he
him:

He'll make a proper man: The best thing in
Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.
He is not tall; yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so; and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip;
A little ripier and more lusty red Than that mix'd in his cheek; 'twas just the ference

Between the constant red, and mingled damask:
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but, for my part,
I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet
I have more cause to hate him than to love:
For what had he to do to chide at me?

He said, mine eyes were black, and my hair
And, now I am remember'd, scorn'd at me:
I marvel, why I answer'd not again:
But that's all one; omittance is no quitance
I'll write to him a very taunting letter,
And thou shalt bear it; Wilt thou, Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Ph. I'll write it straight
The matter's in my head, and in my heart:
I will be bitter with him, and passing short
Go with me, Silvius. [E]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

The same.

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and JAUQUES.

Jaq. I pr'ythee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say, you are a melancholy fellow Jaq. I am so; I do love it better than laugh Ros. Those, that are in extremity of either abominable fellows; and betray themselves to modern censure, worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say no

Why then, 'tis good to be a post.

I have neither the scholar's melancholy, s emulation; nor the musician's, which is all; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the lawyer's, which is ambitious; nor the politician's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy own, compounded of many simples, drawn from many objects; and, indeed, the contemplation of my travels, in which my imagination wraps me, is a most humorous traveller! By my faith, you have great cause to be sad: I fear, you have sold your own eyes to other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor ears, I have gained my experience.

Enter ORLANDO.

And your experience makes you sad: I had thought you a fool to make me merry, than expect me to be sad; and to travel for it too. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind! I say then, God be wi' you, an you talk in jest.

[Exit.] Farewell, monsieur traveller: Look, you wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your own almost chide God for making you so tenacious you are; or I will scarce think you swam in a gondola.—Why, how now, where have you been all this while?—An you serve me such another trick, I will be in my sight more.

Why fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of your promise in love? He, that takes a minute into a thousand parts, and a part of the thousandth part of a minute into a million of parts, it may be said of him, that I clapp'd him o' the shoulder, but I warrant not whole.

Why, I warrant not whole. I warrant not whole, dear Rosalind. I warrant not whole, dear Rosalind. I warrant not whole, dear Rosalind. I warrant not whole, dear Rosalind.

Why, an you be so tardy, come no more in my way, I had as lief be woo'd of a snail.

Why, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, his house on his head; a better jointure, than you can make a woman: Besides, he is his own destiny with him.

Why, horns; which such as you are fain to wear, to your wives for; but he comes with his fortune, and prevents the slander of his horns.

Why, true is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is no horn-maker.

Why, I am your Rosalind.

Why, please him to call you so; but he hath a better leer than you.

Why, me, woo me, woo me; for now I am in humour; and like enough to consent:—I would say to me now, an I were your Rosalind?

Why, would kiss, before I spoke.

Why, you were better speak first; and when you have gavelled for lack of matter, you might as well kiss. Very good orators, when they are in love; and for lovers, lacking God's matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Why, if the kiss be denied?

Why, then she puts you to entreaty, and there is the matter.

Why, could be out, being before his beloved.

Why, why, that should you, if I were your own, I should think my honesty ranker than mine.

Why, what, of my suit?

Why, t out of your apparel, and yet out of your pocket. Am not I your Rosalind?

Why, like some joy to say you are, because I have said so of her.

Why, well, in her person, I say—I will not have you to be a fool.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night: for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned; and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this kind, for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly: But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays, and Saturdays, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando:—What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin.—Will you, Orlando,—

Cel. Go to:—Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but, I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: There a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me, how long you would have her, after you have possessed her?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are wives, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder: Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man, that had a wife with such a wit, he might say,—Wit, whither wilt?

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say,—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman, that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner; by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways;—I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:—that flattering tongue of yours won me:—'tis but one cast away, and so,—come, death.—Two o'clock is your hour?

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths, that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathetic break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: So, adieu.

Ros. Well, time is the old justice, that examines all such offenders, and let time try: Adieu!

[Exit Orlando.]

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird bath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love:—I'll tell thee, Ariana, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another part of the forest.

Enter JAQUES and Lords, in the habit of Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he, that killed the deer?

1 Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory:—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it; 'tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

1. What shall he have that kill'd the deer?

2. His leather skin, and horns to wear.

1. Then sing him home:

Take thou no scorn, to wear the horn;

It was a crest ere thou wast born.

1. Thy father's father wore it;

2. And thy father bore it:

All. The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The forest.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth—to sleep: Look, who comes here.

Enter SILVIUS.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;—My gentle Phebe bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter.]

I know not the contents; but, as I guess, By the stern brow, and waspish action, Which she did use as she was writing it, It bears an angry tenour: pardon me, I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this And play the swaggerer; hear this, bear all She says, I am not fair, that I lack manner She calls me proud; and, that she could not Were man as rare as phoenix; Od's my will Her love is not the hare, that I do hunt: Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd This is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the content Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a And turn'd into the extremity of love.

I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, A freestone-colour'd hand; I verily did think That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her She has a huswife's hand: but that's no matter I say, she never did invent this letter; This is a man's invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterous and cruel style A style for challengers; why, she defies me Like Turk to Christian: woman's gentle br Can not drop forth such giant-rude inven Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect Than in their countenance:—Will you be letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet Heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.

Ros. She Phebe's me: Mark how the writes.

*Art thou god to shepherd turn'd,
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?*

Can a woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?

Did you ever hear such railing?—

*Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.*

Meaning me a beast.—

*If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine, Attack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move?
He, that brings this love to thee,
Little knows this love in me:
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.*

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? no, he deserves —Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, thee an instrument, and play false strain thee! not to be endured!—Well, go your her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tamer) and say this to her:—That if she love me, her to love thee: if she will not, I will never, unless thou entreat for her.—If you be lover, hence, and not a word; for here com company. [Exeunt.]

Enter OLIVER.

Ol. Good-morrow, fair ones: Pray you know

Orlando did approach the man,

And well he might do so,
I know he was unnatural.

Ros. Was it you, he rescu'd?
Cel. Was't you, that did so oft contrive to kill him?
Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin!
Oli. By, and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As, how I came into that desert place;—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cry'd, in fainting, upon Rosalind.
Brief, I recover'd him; bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His promise, and to give this napkin,
Dy'd in this blood, unto the shepherd youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede? sweet Ganymede?
[Rosalind faints.]
Oli. Many will swoon, when they do look on blood.
Cel. There is more in it:—Cousin—Ganymede!
Oli. Look, he recovers.

Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither:—
I pray you, will you take him by the arm?
Oli. Be of good cheer, youth:—You a man?—
You lack a man's heart.

Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sir, a body would think this was well counterfeited: I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeited.—Heigh ho!
Oli. This was not counterfeit; there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
Ros. So I do: but, i'faith I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler; pray you, draw homewards:—Good sir, go with us.
Oli. That will I, for I must bear answer back
How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
Ros. I shall devise something: But I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him:—Will you go?
[Exeunt.]

Will. William, sir.
Touch. A fair name: Was't born i' the forest here?
Will. Ay, sir, I thank God.
Touch. Thank God;—a good answer: Art rich?
Will. 'Faith, sir, so, so.
Touch. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good:—and yet it is not; it is but so so.
Art thou wise?

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.
Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying; The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool. The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips, when he put it into his mouth; meaning thereby, that grapes were made to eat and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do, sir.
Touch. Give me your band: Art thou learned?
Will. No, sir.
Touch. Then learn this of me; To have, is to have: For it is a figure in rhetoric, that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other: For all your writers do consent, that ipse is he; now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he, sir?

Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore, you clown, abandon,—which is in the vulgar, leave,—the society,—which in the boorish is, company, of this female,—which in the common is,—woman, which together is, abandon the society of this female; or, clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; to wit, I will kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways; therefore tremble, and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, sir.

[Exit.]

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Our master and mistress seek you; come, away, away.

Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey;—I attend, I attend.

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter ORLANDO and OLIVER.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? and, loving, woo? and wooing, she should grant? and will you persevere to enjoy her?

Oliv. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old sir Rowland's, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Enter ROSALIND.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Orl. And you, fair sister.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf!

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he showed me your handkerchief?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are:—Nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the fight of two rams, and Cæsar's thrasonical brag of—I came, saw, and overcame: For your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow; and I will bid the duke to the nuptials. But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you no longer then with idle talking. Know of me then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch, I say, I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little draw a belief from you, to do yourself good not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, I can do strange things: I have, since I was years old, conversed with a magician, as found in this art, and yet not damnable. do love Rosalind so near the heart as you cries it out, when your brother marries shall you marry her: I know into what fortune she is driven; and it is not impo me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, t before your eyes to-morrow, human as sh without any danger.

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender though I say I am a magician: Therefore, in your best array, bid your friends; for if be married to-morrow, you shall; and to l if you will.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungu To show the letter that I writ to you.

SONG.

I.

A lover, and his lass,
 In a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
 Ere the green corn-field did pass
 In the spring time, the only pretty rank time,
 When the birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
 And lovers love the spring.

II.

In the acres of the rye,
 In a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
 Pretty country folks would lie,
 In the ring time, &c.

III.

When they began that hour,
 In a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
 At a life was but a flower
 In the ring time, &c.

IV.

Therefore take the present time,
 In a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
 As is crowned with the prime
 In the ring time, &c.

A truly, young gentlemen, though there great matter in the ditty, yet the note was

Duke senior, AMIENS, JAQUES, ORLANDO, OLIVER, and CELIA.

Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
 If she refuse me:—and from hence I go,
 To make these doubts all even.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.]

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd-boy
 Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
 Methought he was a brother to your daughter:
 But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born;
 And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
 Of many desperate studies by his uncle,
 Whom he reports to be a great magician,
 Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark! Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all!

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome: This is the motley-minded gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: He hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. 'Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How seventh cause?—Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God'ild you, sir; I desire you of the like.
 I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear, and to forswear; according as marriage binds, and blood breaks:—A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that, that no man else will: Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house; as your pearl, in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's halt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed;—Bear your body more seeming, Audrey:—as thus, sir,
 I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard;
 he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called the Retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: This is called the Quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he said my judgment: This is called the Reply churlish. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: This is called the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: This is called the Countercheck quarrelsome: and so to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the Lie cir- cumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords, and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book;
 as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous;
 the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew, when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as, If you said so, then
I said so; and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Enter HYMEN, leading ROSALIND in woman's clothes; and CELIA.

Still Musick.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.

Good duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,

Ye, brought her hither;
That thou might'st join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Ros. To you I give myself, for I am yours.

[To Duke S.]

To you I give myself, for I am yours.

[To Orlando.]

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true,
Why then,—my love adieu!

Ros. I'll have no father, if you be not he:—

[To Duke S.]

I'll have no husband, if you be not he:—

[To Orlando.]

Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

[To Phebe.]

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:

'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.

You and you no cross shall part:

[To Orlando and Rosalind.]

You and you are heart in heart:

[To Oliver and Celia.]

You [To Phebe.] to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord:—

You and you are sure together,

[To Touchstone and Audrey.]

As the winter to foul weather.

Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning;
That reason wonder may diminish,
How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown;
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock then be honoured:
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me;
Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou art mi
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

[To Side]

Enter JAQUES DE BOIS.

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word, two;

I am the second son of old sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly—
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Address'd a mighty power; which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take His brother here, and put him to the sword;
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world:
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again,
That were with him exil'd: This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one, his lands with-held; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.

First, in this forest, let us do those ends,
That here were well begun, and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.

Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry:—
Play, musick;—and you brides and bridegroom
all,

With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures fit
Jaq. Sir, by your patience; if I heard you right
The duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court?

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd.—
You to your former honour I bequeath;

[To Duke]

Your patience, and your virtue, well deserves it;
You [To Orlando.] to a love, that your true faith doth merit:—

You [To Oliver.] to your land, and love, and good allies:—

You [To Silvius.] to a long and well deserv'd bed;—

And you [To Touchstone.] to wrangling; for t loving voyage

is but for two months victual'd:—So to yo pleasures;

I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I:—what you would ha
I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. [Ex

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin the rites,

And we do trust they'll end in true delights.

[A drum]

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue: but it is no more unhandsome, than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true, that a good play needs no epilogue: Yet to good wine they do use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play! I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me: my way is to conjure you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like much of this play as please them: and so I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women, (as perceive by your simpering, none of you hate them) that between you and the women, the play was please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defied not: and I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind office when I make curt'sy, bid me farewell.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

King of France.
 Duke of Florence.
BERTRAM, count of Rousillon.
LAFEU, an old lord.
PAROLLES, a follower of Bertram.
 Several young French lords, that serve with Bertram in the Florentine war.
 Steward, }
 Clown, } Servants to the countess of Rousillon.

A Page.

Countess of Rousillon, mother to Bertram.
HELENA, a gentlewoman protected by the countess.
 An old widow of Florence.
DIANA, daughter to the widow.
VIOLENTA, { neighbours and friends to the MARIANA, { widow.

Lords, attending on the King; Officers, Soldiers, &c. French and Florentine.

Scene,—partly in France, and partly in Tuscany.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Rousillon. A room in the Countess's palace.

Enter BERTRAM, the Countess of Rousillon, HELENA, and LAFEU, in mourning.

Count. In delivering my son from me I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam;—you, sir, a father: He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you; whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope; and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, O, that had! how sad a passage 'tis! whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. 'Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think, it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam; the king very lately spoke of him, admiringly, and mourningly; he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious.—Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good, that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, these commendations go with pity, they are virtues and traitors too; in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all liveliness from her cheek. No more of this, Helena, go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow, indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram! and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! thy blood, and virtue, Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness Share with thy birth-right! Love all, trust a few, Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power, than use; and keep thy friend Under thy own life's key: be check'd for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What heaven moves will, That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down, Fall on thy head! Farewell.—My lord, 'Tis an unseason'd courtier; good my lord, Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best

That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram.

[Exit Countess.]

Ber. The best wishes, that can be forged in your thoughts, [To Helena.] be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: You must hold the credit of your father.

[Exeunt Bertram and Lafeu.]

Hel. O, were that all!—I think not on my father; And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. What was he like?

I have forgot him: my imagination Carries no favour in it, but Bertram's. I am undone; there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. It were all one, That I should love a bright particular star, And think to wed it, he is so above me; In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. The ambition in my love thus plagues itself: The hind, that would be mated by the lion, Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague, To see him every hour; to sit and draw His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls, In our heart's table; heart, too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour:

But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here?

Enter PAROLLES.

One, that goes with him: I love him for his sake;
And yet I know him a notorious liar,
Think him a great way fool, solely a coward;
Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when virtue's steely bones
Look bleak in the cold wind: withal, full oft we see Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen.

Hel. And you, monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you;
let me ask you a question: Man is enemy to virginity;
how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak: unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none; man, sitting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers, and blowers up!—Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity, being blown down, man will quickerlier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature, to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase; and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost. That, you were made of, is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion;
away with it.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He, that hangs himself, is a virgin: virginity murders itself; and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offense against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese; consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding its own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by't: Out with't: within ten years it will make itself ten, which is a good increase; and the principal itself not much the worse: Away with't!

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: Marry, ill, to like him, that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth; off with't, while 'tis vendible: answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable:
just like the brooch and tooth-pick, which wear not now: Your date is better in your pie and your porridge, than in your cheek: And your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears; it looks ill, it eats dryly; marry, 'tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet
'tis a withered pear: Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There shall your master have a thousand loves,
A mother, and a mistress, and a friend,
A phoenix, captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign,
A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear;
His humble ambition, proud humility,
His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet,
His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world
Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall:—God send him well!—
The court's a learning-place;—and he is one—
Par. What one, i'faith?

Hel. That I wish well.—'Tis pity—

Par. What's the pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body
Which might be felt: that we, the poorer Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes
Might with effects of them follow our frier
And show what we alone must think; which Returns us thanks.

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

1 Lord. It is the count Rousillon, my g-Young Bertram.

g. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face; nature, rather curious than in haste, well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

My thanks and duty are your majesty's. g. I would I had that corporal soundness now, on thy father, and myself, in friendship try'd our soldiership! He did look far as service of the time, and was led of the bravest: he lasted long; us both did baggish age steal on, tore us out of act. It much repairs me of your good father: In his youth d the wit, which I can well observe y in our young lords; but they may jest, air own scorn return to them unnoted, ey can hide their levity in honour. a courtier, contempt nor bitterness in his pride or sharpness; if they were, nal had awak'd them; and his honour, to itself, knew the true minute, when ion bid him speak, and, at this time, ague obey'd his hand: who were below him d as creatures of another place; w'd his eminent top to their low ranks, r them proud of his humility, r poor praise he humbled: Such a man be a copy to these younger times; follow'd well, would demonst'rate them now ers backward.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Cl. I do beg your good-will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Cl. In Isbel's case, and mine own. Service is no heritage: and, I think, I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body; for, they say, bearns are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Cl. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Cl. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Cl. I have beer, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry, that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Cl. I am out of friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Cl. You are shallow, madam; e'en great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am a-weary of. He that ears my land, spares my team, and gives me leave to inn the crop: if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge: He, that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he, that cherishes my flesh and blood, loves my flesh and blood; he, that loves my flesh and blood, is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife, is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist, howso'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one, they may joll horns together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouth'd and calumnious knave?

Cl. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

Count. Get you gone, sir; I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid Helen come to you; of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman, I would speak with her; Helen I mean.

Cl. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
[Singing.]

Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this king Priam's joy?
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Cl. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song: 'Would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tythe-woman, if I were the parson: One in ten, quoth a! an we might have a good woman born but every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well; a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you?

Cl. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.—I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither. [Exit Clown.]

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeath'd her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her, than is paid; and more shall be paid her, than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wish'd me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touch'd not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she lov'd your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight to be surpris'd without rescue, in the first assault, or ransom'd afterward: This she deliver'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in: which I held my duty, speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself: many likelihoods inform'd me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt: Pray you, leave me: still this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you further anon. [Exit Steward.]

Enter HELENA.

Count. Even so it was with me, when I was young:

If we are nature's, these are ours; this thorn
Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born;
It is the show and seal of nature's truth,
Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth:
By our remembrances of days foregone,
Such were our faults;—or then we thought them none.

Her eye is sick on't; I observe her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen,
I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother;

Why not a mother? When I said, a mother,
Methought you saw a serpent: What's in mother,
That you start at it? I say, I am your mother;
And put you in the catalogue of those,
That were enwomb'd mine: 'Tis often seen,
Adoption strives with nature; and choice breeds
A native slip to us from foreign seeds:
You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care:—
God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood,
To say, I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this distemper'd messenger of wet,
The many colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?

Why?—that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;

The count Rousillon cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, his all noble:
My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?

Hel. You are my mother, madam; 'Would you were (So that my lord, your son, were not my brother,)
Indeed, my mother!—or, were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister: Can't no other,
But, I your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law;

God shield, you mean it not! daughter, and mother,
So strive upon your pulse: What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness: Now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find Your salt tears' head. Now to all sense 'tis gross,
You love my son; invention is asham'd,

Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say, thou dost not: therefore tell me true
But, tell me then, 'tis so:—for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, one to the other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it: only sin
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected: Speak, is't
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clue;
If it be not, forswear't: howe'er, I charge thee
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam?

Count. Go not about; my love hath in't a Whereof the world takes note; come, come, do
The state of your affection; for your passion
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess

Here on my knee, before high heaven and you
That before you, and next unto high heaven
I love your son:—

My friends were poor, but honest; so's my

Be not offended; for it hurts not him,

That he is lov'd of me: I follow him not

By any token of presumptuous suit;

Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him

Yet never know how that desert should be.

I know I love in vain, strive against hope;

Yet, in this captious and intenable sieve,

I still pour in the waters of my love,

And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like

Religious in mine error, I adore

The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,

But knows of him no more. My dearest man

Let not your hate encounter with my love,

For loving where you do: but, if yourself,

Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,

Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,

Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your

Was both herself and love; O then, give

To her, whose state is such, that cannot chide

But lend and give, where she is sure to lose

That seeks not to find that her search imply

But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she die

Count. Had you not lately an intent, special

To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Count. Wherefore? tell me

Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself, I see

You know, my father left me some prescript

Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his read:

And manifest experience, had collected

For general sovereignty; and that he will'd

In heedfullest reservation to bestow them,

As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,

More than they were in note: amongst the

There is a remedy, approv'd, set down,

To cure the desperate languishes, whereof

The king is render'd lost.

Count. This was your

For Paris, was it? speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think

Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king

Had, from the conversation of my thoughts

Haply, been absent then.

Count. But think you,

If you should tender your supposed aid,

He would receive it? He and his physician

Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help

They, that they cannot help: How shall the

A poor unlearn'd virgin, when the schools,

Embovell'd of their doctrine, have left off

The danger to itself?

Hel. There's something in More than my father's skill, which was the

Of his profession, that his good receipt

Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified

By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would

But give me leave to try success, I'd venture

The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure

By such a day, and hour.

nt. Dost thou believe't?
nt. Ay, madam, knowingly.
nt. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave,
 and love,
 and attendants, and my loving greetings

To those of mine in court; I'll stay at home,
 And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:
 Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
 What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Paris. A room in the King's palace.

sk. Enter King, with young Lords taking for the Florentine war; BERTRAM, PA-LLES, and Attendants.

g. Farewell, young lord, these warlike principles
 I throw from you:—and you, my lord, farewell:—
 the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
 it doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd, enough for both.

rd. It is our hope, sir, well-enter'd soldiers, to return and your grace in health.

g. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart not confess, he owes the malady both my life besiege. Farewell, young lords; here I live or die, be you the sons of France: let higher Italy be that, that inherit but the fall of last monarchy, see, that you come with honour, but to wed it; when the questant shrinks, find what you seek, some may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

rd. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

g. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them;
 say, our French lack language to deny, demand: beware of being captives,
 you serve.

Our hearts receive your warnings.
g. Farewell.—Come hither to me.

[The King retires to a couch.]

rd. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

'Tis not his fault; the spark—
rd. O, 'tis brave wars!

Most admirable: I have seen those wars.
 I am commanded here, and kept a coil with;
ng. and the next year, and 'tis too early.

An thy mind stand to it, bey, steal away bravely.

I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
 my shoes on the plain masonry,
 pour be brought up, and no sword worn,
 e to dance with! By heaven, I'll steal away.
rd. There's honour in the theft.

Commit it, count.

rd. I am your accessory; and so farewell.
 I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured rd. Farewell, captain.

rd. Sweet monsieur Parolles!

Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin.
 parks and lustrous, a word, good metals:—
 I'll find in the regiment of the Spinili, one Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of ire on his sinister cheek; it was this very entrenched it: say to him, I live; and ob-is reports for me.

rd. We shall, noble captain.

Mars dote on you for his novices! [Exeunt]

What will you do?

Stay: the king— [Seeing him rise.]

Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble you have restrained yourself within the list hold an adieu: be more expressive to them;
 y wear themselves in the cap of the time,
 o master true gait, eat, speak, and move the influence of the most received star; and the devil lead the measure, such are to be d: after them, and take a more dilated
 l.

And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy sword-men. [Exeunt Bertram and Parolles.]

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. Pardon, my lord, [Kneeling.] for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man Stands, that has brought his pardon. I would you Had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy; and That, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,
 And ask'd thee mercy for't.

Laf. Good faith, across:
 But, my good lord, 'tis thus; Will you be cur'd
 Of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat
 No grapes, my royal fox? yes, but you will,
 My noble grapes, and if my royal fox
 Could reach them: I have seen a medicine,
 That's able to breathe life into a stone;
 Quicken a rock, and make you dance cleanly,
 With sprightly fire and motion; whose simple touch
 Is powerful to arise king Pepin, nay,
 To give great Charlemain a pen in his hand,
 And write to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why, doctor she: My lord, there's one arriv'd,
 If you will see her,—now, by my faith and honour,
 If seriously I may convey my thoughts
 In this my right deliverance, I have spoke With one, that, in her sex, her years, profession, Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness; Will you see her (For that is her demand,) and know her business?
 That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafeu,
 Bring in the admiration; that we with thee
 May spend our wonder too, or take off thine,
 By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you,
 And not be all day neither. [Exit Lafeu.]

King. Thus he is special, nothing ever prologues.

Re-enter LAFEU with HELENA.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways;
 This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
 A traitor you do look like; but such traitors
 His majesty seldom fears: I am Cressid's uncle,
 That dare leave two together; fare you well. [Exit.]

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord. Gerard de Narbon was My father; in what he did profess, well found.

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards
 him;

Knowing him, is enough. On his bed of death
 Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
 Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
 And of his old experience the only darling,
 He bade me store up, as a triple eye,
 Safer than mine own two, more dear; I have so:
 And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
 With that malignant cause wherein the honour
 Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
 I come to tender it, and my appliance,
 With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden;
 But may not be so credulous of cure,—
 When our most learned doctors leave us; and
 The congregated college have concluded,
 That labouring art can never ransom nature
 From her inaidable estate,—I say, we must not

So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empiricks; or to disserve so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when shall past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful:
Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks I give,
As one near death to those, that wish him live:
But, what at full I know, thou know'st no part;
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hel. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
When judges have been babes. Great floods have flow'd

From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there,
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most sits.

King. I must not hear thee; fare thee well, kind
maid;

Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
Professors, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd:
It is not so with Him, that all things knows,
As 'tis with us, that square our guess by shows:
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim Myself against the level of mine aim;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor your past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring;
Ere twice in murk and accidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quenched his sleepy lamp;
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass;
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,—
A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,— Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Sear'd otherwise; no worse of worst extended,
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth speak;

His powerful sound, within an organ weak:

And what impossibility would slay

In common sense, sense saves another way.

Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate

Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;

Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, virtue, all

That happiness and prime can happy call:

Thou thus to hazard, needs must intimate

Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.

Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try;

That ministers thine own death, if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property

Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die;

And well deserv'd: Not helping, death's my fee;

But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me, with thy kingly hand,

What husband in thy power I will command:

Exempted be from me the arrogance

To choose from forth the royal blood of France;

My low and humble name to propagate

With any branch or image of thy state.

But such a one, thy vassal whom I know

Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises obs'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd
So make the choice of thy own time; for I, Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
More should I question thee, and more I m'nd Though, more to know, could not be more to
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on,— Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted bliss
Give me some help here, ho!—If thou protest
As high as word, my deed shall match thy

SCENE II.

Rousillon. A room in the Countess's palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, sir; I shall now put you height of your breeding.

Clow. I will show myself highly fed, and taught: I know my business is but to the Count. To the court! why, what place men special, when you put off that with such count

Clow. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man

SCENE III.

BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

Paris. A room in the King's palace.

They say, miracles are past; and we have philosophical persons, to make modern and us things, supernatural and causeless. Hence hat we make trifles of terrors; and ensconcing res into seeming knowledge, when we should ourselves to an unknown fear.

Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder,
 ash shot out in our latter times.

And so 'tis.

To be relinquish'd of the artists,—

So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Of all the learned and authentick fellows,—

Right, so I say.

That gave him out incurable,—

Why, there 'tis; so say I too.

Not to be helped,—

Right: as 'twere a man assured of an—

Uncertain life, and sure death.

Just, you say well; so would I have said.

I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

It is, indeed: if you will have it in show—

—shall read it in,—What do you call

A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly

That's it I would have said; the very same.

Why, your dolphin is not lustier; 'fore me in respect—

Nay, 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is of and the tedious of it; and he is of a most us spirit, that will not acknowledge it to Very hand of heaven.

Ay, so I say.

In a most weak—

And debile minister, great power, great adence: which should, indeed, give us a use to be made, than alone the recovery of g, as to be—

Generally thankful.

Enter King, HELENA, and Attendants.

I would have said it; you say well: Here

he king.

Lustick, as the Dutchman says: I'll like a etter, whilst I have a tooth in my head:

he's able to lead her a coranto.

Mort du Vainqueur! Is not this Helen?

'Fore God, I think so.

Go, call before me all the lords in court.—

[Exit an Attendant.]

preserver, by thy patient's side;

but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

id, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel

e bachelors stand at my bestowing, om both sovereign power and father's voice

o use: thy frank election make;

st power to choose, and they none to forsake.

o each of you one fair and virtuous mistress hen love please!—marry, to each, but one!

I'd give bay Curtal, and his furniture,

th no more were broken than these boys,

Peruse them well:

Gentlemen,

hath, through me, restor'd the king to health.

Ve understand it, and thank heaven for you.

am a simple maid; and therein wealthiest, protest, I simply am a maid:—

t your majesty, I have done already:

shes in my cheeks thus whisper me,

white death sit on thy cheek for ever;

We'll ne'er come there again.

King. Make choice; and, see,
 Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly;

And to imperial Love, that god most high,

Do my sighs stream.—Sir, will you hear my suit?

1 Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,

Before I speak, too threateningly replies:

Love make your fortunes twenty times above

Her, that so wishes, and her humble love!

2 Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,

Which great love grant! and so I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipped; or I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs of.

Hel. Be not afraid [To a Lord.] that I your hand should take;

I'll never do you wrong for your own sake:

Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed

Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English;

the French ne'er got them.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good,

To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4 Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There's one grape yet,—I am sure, thy father drank wine.—But if thou he'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.

Hel. I dare not say, I take you; [To Bertram.]

but I give

Me, and my service, ever whilst I live,

Into your guiding power.—This is the man.

King. Why then, young Bertram, take her, she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege? I shall beseech your highness,

In such a business give me leave to use

The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram,

What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;

But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st, she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down

Must answer for your raising? I know her well;

She had her breeding at my father's charge:

A poor physician's daughter my wife!—Disdain

Rather corrupt me ever!

King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which

I can build up. Strange is it, that our bloods,

Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,

Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off

In differences so mighty: if she be

All, that is virtuous, (save what thou dislik'st,

A poor physician's daughter,) thou dislik'st

Of virtue for the name: but do not so:

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed:

Where great additions swell, and virtue none,

It is a dropsied honour: good alone

Is good, without a name; vileness is so:

The property by what it is should go,

Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;

In these to nature she's immediate heir;

And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn,

Which challenges itself as honour's born,

And is not like the sire: Honours best thrive,

When rather from our acts we them derive

Than our fore-goers: the mere word 's a slave,

Debauch'd on every tomb; on every grave,

A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb,

Where dust, and damn'd oblivion, is the tomb

Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?

If thou canst like this creature as a maid,

I can create the rest: virtue, and she,

Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm glad; Let the rest go.

King. My honour's at the stake; which to defeat, I must produce my power: Here, take her hand, Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift; That dost in vile misprision shackle up My love, and her desert; that canst not dream, We, poisoning us in her defective scale, Shall weigh thee to the beam: that wilt not know, It is in us to plant thine honour, where We please to have it grow: Check thy contempt: Obey our will, which travails in thy good: Believe not thy disdain, but presently Do thine own fortunes that obedient right, Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims; Or I will throw thee from my care for ever, Into the staggers, and the careless lapse Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate, Loosing upon thee in the name of justice, Without all terms of pity: speak; thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit My fancy to your eyes: When I consider, Wit at great creation, and what dole of honour, Flies where you bid it, I find, that she, which late Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now The praised of the king; who, so ennobled, Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand, And tell her, she is thine: to whom I promise A counterpoise; if not to thy estate, A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.
King. Good fortune, and the favour of the king, Smile upon this contræct; whose ceremony Shall seem expedient on the new-born brief, And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast Shall more attend upon the coming space, Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her, Thy love's to me religious; else, do err.

[Exeunt King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants.]

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir?

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation?—My lord? my master?

Laf. Ay; Is it not a language, I speak?

Par. A most harsh one; and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master?

Laf. Are you companion to the count Rousillon?

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what's man.

Laf. To what is count's man; count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow; thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass: yet the scarfs, and the banners, about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee; when I lose thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up; and that thou art scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee,—

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if—Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well; thy easement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf, and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or my knowledge; that I may say, in the default, is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy soul my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past will by thee, in what motion age will give leave.

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take thy grace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord! Well, I must be patient; there is no fette authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I catch him with any convenience, an he were and double a lord. I'll have no more pity, age, than I would have of—I'll beat him, could but meet him again.

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's news there's news for you; you have a new mist

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lord make some reservation of your wrongs: How good lord: whom I serve above, is my master?

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is, that's thy master. dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? make hose of thy sleeves? do other servants Thou wert best set thy lower part where thou stands. By mine honour, if I were but thy younger, I'd beat thee: methinks, thou a neral offence, and every man should beat thee, think, thou wast created for men to breathe selves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you're a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are saucy with lords, and honourable personages, the heraldry of your hirth and virtue give commission. You are not worth another else I'd call you knave. I leave you.

Enter BERTRAM.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then, very good; let it be concealed a while.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever.

Par. What is the matter, sweet heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I've I will not bed her.

Par. What? what, sweet heart?

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it is no more: The tread of a man's foot; to the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother; I import is,

I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known: To tell my boy, to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box unseen, That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home

Spending his manly marrow in her arms, Which should sustain the bound and high

Of Mars's fiery steed: To other regions! France is a stable; we, that dwell in't, ja!

Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so; I'll send her to my Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,

And wherefore I am fled; write to the king

That, which I durst not speak: his presence Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,

Where noble fellows strike: War is no st To the dark house, and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capricio hold in thee, at

Ber. Go with me to my chamber and ad I'll send her straight away: To-morrow

I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Enter HELENA and Clown.

My mother greets me kindly: Is she well? She is not well; but yet she has her health: sry merry; but yet she is not well: but be given, she's very well, and wants no the world; but yet she is not well. If she be very well, what does she all, that it very well?

Truly, she's very well, indeed, but for two

What two things?

One, that she's not in heaven, whither God r quickly! the other, that she's in earth, hence God send her quickly!

Enter PAROLLES.

Bless you, my fortunate lady!

I hope, sir, I have your good-will to have n good fortunes.

You had my prayers to lead them on; and them on, have them still.—O, my knave! es my old lady?

So that you had her wrinkles, and I her I would she did as you say.

Why, I say nothing.

Marry, you are the wiser man: for many a tongue shakes out his master's undoing: To sing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and nothing, is to be a great part of your title; within a very little of nothing.

Away, thou'rt a knave.

You should have said, sir, before a knave: a knave; that is, before me thou art a his had been truth, sir.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. These things shall be done, sir. [To Bertram.]

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well: Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. Is she gone to the king? [Aside to Parolles.]

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure, Given orders for our horses; and to-night, When I should take possession of the bride,—

And, ere I do begin,—

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one, that lies three-thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten.—God save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into't, boots and spurs and all, like him, that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be, you have mistaken him, my lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, There can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures.—Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.]

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter HELENA.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave For present parting; only, he desires Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will. You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does The ministration and required office.

On my particular: prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found So much unsettled: This drives me to entreat you, That presently you take your way for home; And rather muse, than ask, why I entreat you: For my respects are better than they seem; And my appointments have in them a need, Greater than shows itself, at the first view, To you that know them not. This to my mother: [Giving a letter.]

'Twill be two days ere I shall see you; so I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say, But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall With true observance seek to eke out that, Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go: My haste is very great: Farewell; his home.

Hel. Pray, sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe; Nor dare I say, 'tis mine; and yet it is; But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something; and scarce so much:—nothing, indeed.—

I would not tell you what I would: my lord—'faith, yes;— Strangers, and foes, do sunder, and not kiss.

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

Ber. Where are my other men, monsieur?—
Farewell. [Exit Helena.]

Go thou toward home; where I will never Whilst I can shake my sword, or hear the drum
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, coragio!

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Florence. A room in the Duke's palace.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, attended;
two French lords, and others.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war;
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.

1 Lord. Holy seems the quarrel Upon your grace's part; black and fearful
On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much, our cousin France
Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom
Against our borrowing prayers.

2 Lord. Good my lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a council frames
By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it; since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fall
As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.
2 Lord. But I am sure, the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will, day by day,
Come here for physick.

Duke. Welcome shall they be;
And all the honours, that can fly from us,
Shall on them settle. You know your places well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell:
To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rousillon. A room in the Countess's palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save, that he comes not along with her.

Clow. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you?

Clow. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing;
mend the ruff, and sing; ask questions, and sing;
pick his teeth, and sing: I know a man that had this trick of melancholy, sold a goodly manor for a
song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. [Opening a letter.]

Clow. I have no mind to Isabel, since I was at court: our old ling and our Isbels o'the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o'the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked out; and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clow. E'en that you have there. [Exit.]

Count. [Reads.] I have sent you a daughter-in-law: she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make know it, before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,

BERTRAM.

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a king;
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprizing of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Clow. O, madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clow. Nay, there is some comfort in the some comfort; your son will not be killed as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd?

Clow. So say I, madam, if he run away, and he does: the danger is in standing to't; the

SCENE III.

Florence. Before the Duke's palace.

Enter the Duke of Florence, BERTRAM, Lords, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

The general of our horse thou art; and we,
our hope, lay our best love and credence,
y promising fortune.

Sir, it is too heavy for my strength; but yet strive to bear it for your worthy sake extreme edge of hazard.

Then go thou forth;
tune play upon thy prosperous helm,
auspicious mistress!

This very day,
ars, I put myself into thy file:

SCENE IV.

Rousillon. A room in the Countess's palace.

Enter Countess and Steward.

Alas! and would you take the letter of ou not know, she would do as she has done,

*I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone;
tious love hath so in me offended,

Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest

you did never lack advice so much,

thus she hath prevented.

Stew.

Pardon me, madam:
If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,
Pursuit would be in vain.

Count.

What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, relieve him from the wrath
Of greatest justice.—Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife;
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Despatch the most convenient messenger:—
When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may, that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction:—Provide this messenger:—
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Without the walls of Florence.

A tucket afar off. Enter an old Widow of Florence, DIANA, VIOLENTA, MARIANA, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say, the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander: and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid is her name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour, how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under:
many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope, I need not to advise you further; but, I hope, your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter HELENA, in the dress of a pilgrim.

Wid. I hope so.—Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house: thither they send one another: I'll question her.— God save you, pilgrim! Whither are you bound?
Hel. To Saint Jaques le Grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is it.—Hark you!

[A march afar off.]
They come this way:—If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
The rather, for, I think, I know your hostess
As ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel.

I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,
That has done worthy service.

Hel.

His name, I pray you?

Dia. The count Rousillon; Know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him:
His face I know not.

R

Dia. Whatso'er he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 'tis reported, for the king had married him Against his liking: Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth; I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman, that serves the count,
Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel.

O, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated; all her deserving Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!
'Tis a hard bondage, to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. A right good creature: whereso'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might do her

A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?
May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Enter with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, BERTRAM, and PAROLLES.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come:—
That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son,
That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He; He;
That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest,
He were much goodlier:—Is't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity, he is not honest: Yond's that same knave,
That leads him to these places; were I his lady,
I'd poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That jack-an-apes with scarfs: Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something: Look,
he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!
[Exeunt Bertram, Parolles, Officers, and Soldiers.]

Wid. The troop is past: Come, pilgrim, I will bring you
Where you shall host: of enjoind penitents
There's four or five, to great Saint Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
Please it this matron, and this gentle maid,
To eat with us to-night, the charge, and thanking,
Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Camp before Florence.

Enter BERTRAM, and the two French lords.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to't; let him have his way.

2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?
1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly-promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality your lordship's entertainment.

2 Lord. It were fit you knew him; lest, re-too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he at some great and trusty business, in a main ger, fall you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular to try him.

2 Lord. None better than to let him fetch drum, which you hear him so confidently take to do.

1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will denly surprise him; such I will have, whom sure, he knows not from the enemy: we will and hood-wink him so, that he shall suppo-other but that he is carried into the leaguer adversaries, when we bring him to our tent, but your lordship present at his examination do not, for the promise of his life, and in the compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you deliver all the intelligence in his power to you, and that with the divine forfeit of hi-upon oath, never trust my judgment in any.

2 Lord. O for the love of laughter, let him his drum; he says, he has a stratagem when your lordship sees the bottom of his in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump will be melted, if you give him not John I entertainment, your inclining cannot be re-Here he comes.

Enter PAROLLES.

1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, him the humour of his design; let him fetch drum in any hand.

Ber. How now, monsieur? 'this drum sticks in your disposition.

2 Lord. A pax on't, let it go; 'tis but a d-Par. But a drum! Is't but a drum? A so lost!—There was an excellent comma-charge in with our horse upon our own wing to rend our own soldiers.

2 Lord. That was not to be blamed in the mand of the service; it was a disaster of w-Cæsar himself could not have prevented, if been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn cess: some dishonour we had in the loss drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered: but that the service is seldom attributed to the true performer, I would have that drum or ano-hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to't, me-if you think your mystery in stratagem ca-this instrument of honour again into his quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy e-if you speed well in it, the duke shall bot-of it, and extend to you what further becogreatness, even to the utmost syllable of yothiness.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will unde-

Ber. But you must not now slumber in i-

Par. I'll about it this evening: and I wsently pen down my dilemmas, encourage in my certainty, put myself into my mortal ration, and, by midnight, look to hear furth-
me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his graare gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thee art valiant; and, to f-sibility of thy soldiiership, will subscribe fo-Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

1 Lord. No more than a fish loves water—this a strange fellow, my lord? that so con-seems to undertake this business, which his not to be done; damns himself to do, an-better he damned than to do't.

2 Lord. You do not know him, my lord do: certain it is, that he will steal himsel-avour, and, for a week, escape a great deal varies; but when you find him out, you my ever after.

Why, do you think, he will make no deed of this, that so seriously he does address unto?

d. Nouse in the world; but return with an on, and clap upon you two or three probable at we have almost embossed him, you shall fall to-night; for, indeed, he is not for rdship's respect.

d. We'll make you some sport with the fox, case him. He was first smoked by the old few: when his disguise and he is parted, what a sprat you shall find him; which ll see this very night.

d. I must go look my twigs; he shall be aught.

Your brother, he shall go along with me.

i. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you.

Now will I lead you to the house, and show ou

s. I spoke of.

t. But, you say, she's honest.
That's all the fault: I spoke with her but oce,

and her wondrous cold; but I sent to her,
same coxcomb that we have i'the wind, and letters which she did re-send;

s is all I have done: She's a fair creature;
a go see her?

t. With all my heart, my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

Scene. A room in the Widow's house.

Enter HELENA and Widow.

If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
not how I shall assure you further, all lose the grounds I work upon.
Though my estate be fallen, I was well born, acquainted with these businesses;
ld not put my reputation now staining act.

Nor would I wish you.

First, give me trust, the count he is my husband;
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken,
Is so, from word to word; and then you cannot,
By the good aid that I of you shall borrow,
Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you;
For you have show'd me that, which well approves
You are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far,
Which I will over-pay, and pay again.

When I have found it. The count he wooses your
daughter,

Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolves to carry her; let her, in fine, consent,
As we'll direct her how 'tis best to bear it,
Now his important blood will nought deny

That she'll demand: A ring the county wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house,
From son to son, some four or five descents,

Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds
In most rich-choice; yet, in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear, Howe'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see
The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then: It is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she sees as won,
Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent: after this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded;
Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere,
That time and place, with this deceit so lawful,
May prove coherent. Every night he comes

With musicks of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us, after this,
To chide him from our eaves; for he persists,
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then, to-night
Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act;

Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact:
But let's about it.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Without the Florentine camp.

Lord, with five or six soldiers in ambush.

He can come no other way but by this corner: When you sally upon him, speak rrible language you will; though you uo-it not yourselves, no matter: for we must to understand him; unless some one among we must produce for an interpreter.

Good captain, let me be the interpreter.
Art not acquainted with him? knows he voice?

No, sir, I warrant you.
But what linsy-woolsy hast thou to speak
ain?

Even such as you speak to me.

He must think us some band of strangers rersary's entertainment. Now he hath a f all neighbouring languages; therefore we ry one be a man of his own fancy, not to at we speak one to another; so we seem to to know straight our purpose: chough's gabble enough, and good enough. As for rpreter, you must seem very politick. But, o! here he comes; to beguile two hours in and then to return and swear the lies he

Enter PAROLLES.

Ten o'clock: within three hours 'twill enough to go home. What shall I say I ie? It must be a very plausible invention ies it: They begin to smoke me; and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door.

I find, my tongue is too fool-hardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lord. This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. [Aside.]

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum; being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say, I got them in exploit: Yet slight ones will not carry it: They will say, Came you off with so little? and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore? what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

Lord. Is it possible, he should know what he is, and be that he is? [Aside.]

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn; or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lord. We cannot afford you so. [Aside.]

Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say, it was in stratagem.

Lord. 'Twould not do. [Aside.]

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say, I was stripped.

Lord. Hardly serve. [Aside.]

Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

Lord. How deep? [Aside.]

Par. Thirty fathom.

Lord. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed. [Aside.]

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's;

I would swear I recovered it.

1 Lord. You shall hear one anon. [Aside.]

Par. A drum now of the enemies! [Alarum within.]

1 Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All cargo, cargo, viltianda par corbo, cargo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom:—Do not hide mine eyes. [They seize him and blindfold him.]

1 Sold. Boskos throumido boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment, And I shall lose my life for want of language: If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me, I will discover that, which shall undo The Florentine.

1 Sold. Boskos vauvado—

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:—Kerelybonto:—Sir, Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards Are at thy bosom.

Par. Oh!

1 Sold. O, pray, pray, pray.—

Manka revanua dutche.

1 Lord. Oscorbi dutchos volivorca.

1 Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet; And, hood-wink'd as thou art, will lead thee on To gather from thee: haply, thou may'st inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live,

And all the secrets of our camp I'll show, Their force, their purposes: nay, I'll speak that, Which you will wonder at.

1 Sold. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1 Sold. Acordo linta.— Come on, thou art granted space.

1 Lord. Go, tell the count Rousillon, and my brother,

We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled, Till we do hear from them.

2 Sold. Captain, I will.

1 Lord. He will betray us all unto ourselves;— Inform 'em that.

2 Sold. So I will, sir.

1 Lord. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Florence. A room in the Widow's house.

Enter BERTRAM and DIANA.

Ber. They told me that that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess;

And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul, In your fine frame hath love no quality? If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,

You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was,

When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord,

As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more of that!

I pry'thee, do not strive against my vows: I was compell'd to her; but I love thee By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us,

Till we serve you: but when you have our roses, You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves, And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn?

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth; But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true. What is not holy, that we swear not by, But take the Highest to witness: Then, pray you, tell me,

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes, I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,

When I do love you ill? this has no holding To swear by him, whom I protest to love, That I will work against him: Therefore, you Are words, and poor conditions; but unseal At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change

Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;

And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts,

That you do charge men with: Stand no more

But give thyself unto my sick desires,

Who then recover: say, thou art mine, and

My love, as it begins, shall so perséver.

Dia. I see, that men make hopes, in such

That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear, but have not

To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour 'longing to our house

Bequeathed down from many ancestors:

Which were the greatest obloquy i'the world

In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour's such a ring:

My chastity's the jewel of our house,

Bequeathed down from many ancestors:

Which were the greatest obloquy in the world

In me to lose: Thus your own proper ward

Brings in the champion honour on my part,

Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my

I'll order take, my mother shall not hear.

Now will I charge you in the band of truth

SCENE III.

The Florentine camp.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three

1 Lord. You have not given him his letter?

2 Lord. I have delivered it an hour since; is something in't, that stings his nature; the reading it, he changed almost into another.

1 Lord. He has much worthy blame lay him, for shaking off so good a wife, and a lady.

2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the eating displeasure of the king, who had ever his bounty to sing happiness to him. I give you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly on you.

1 Lord. When you have spoken it 'tis dead I am the grave of it.

2 Lord. He hath perverted a young gentleman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of honour: he hath given her his monument, and thinks himself made in the unchaste position.

1 Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion are ourselves, what things are we!

nd. Merely our own traitors. And as in the a course of all treasons, we still see them themselves, till they attain to their abhorred so he, that in this action contrives against n nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows

d. Is it not mesnt damnable in us, to be ters of our unlawful intents? We shall not ve his company to-night?

d. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted our.

d. That approaches apace: I would gladly im see his company anatomized; that he ake a measure of his own judgments, where- riously he had set this counterfeit.

d. We will not meddle with him, till he for his presence must be the whip of the

d. In the mean time, what hear you of ars?

d. I hear, there is an overture of peace.

d. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

d. What will count Rousillon do then? will el higher, or return again into France?

d. I perceive, by this demand, you are not er of his council.

d. Let it be forbid, sir! so should I be a sal of his act.

d. Sir, his wife, some two months since, n his house; her pretence is a pilgrimage : Jaques le Grand; which holy undertaking, ost austere sanctimony, she accomplished: ere residing, the tenderness of her nature as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan ast breath, and now she sings in heaven.

d. How is this justified?

d. The stronger part of it by her own let- hich makes her story true, even to the point eath: her death itself, which could not be e to say, is come, was faithfully confirmed rector of the place.

d. Hath the count all this intelligence?

d. Ay, and the particular confirmations, on point, to the full arming of the verity.

d. I am heartily sorry, that he'll be glad of

d. How mightily, sometimes, we make us s of our losses!

d. And how mightily, some other times, we ur gain in tears! The great dignity, that ur hath here acquired for him, shall at s encountered with a shame as ample.

d. They shall be no more than needful y they were more than they can commend.

Enter BERTRAM.

d. They cannot be too sweet for the king's e. Here's his lordship now. How now, my ot after midnight?

I have to night despatched sixteen husi- a month's length-a-piece, by an abstract of

d. If the business be of any difficulty, and rning your departure hence, it requires your lordship.

I mean, the business is not ended, as fear- ear of it hereafter: But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?— Come, bring forth this counterfeit module; he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophesier.

2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Exeunt Soldiers.] he has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps, like a wench that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his setting i'the stocks: And what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

2 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me; hush! hush!

1 Lord. Hoodman comes!—Porto tartarassa.

1 Sold. He calls for the tortures; What will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint; if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

1 Sold. Bosko chimurcho.

2 Lord. Bobitindo chicurmurco.

1 Sold. You are a merciful general:—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1 Sold. First demand of him how many horse the duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

1 Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do; I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this!

1 Lord. You are deceived, my lord; this is monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist, (that was his own phrase,) that had the whole theorick of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

2 Lord. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his apparel neatly.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truth.

1 Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for't in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir: a truth's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.

1 Sold. Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio a hundred and fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many; Gaultian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred and fifty each: mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred and fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1 Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my conditions, and what credit I have with the duke.

1 Sold. Well, that's set down. You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i'the camp, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighting sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt. What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories: Demand them singly.

I Sold. Do you know this captain Dumain?

Par. I know him: he was a butcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the sheriff's fool with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.

[Dumain lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

I Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

I Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

I Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day, to turn him out o'the band: I think, I have his letter in my pocket.

I Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

I Sold. Here 'tis; here's a paper; Shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know, if it be it, or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

I Lord. Excellently.

I Sold. Dian. The count's a fool, and full of gold,

Par. That is not the duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but for all that, very ruttish: I pray you, sir, put it up again.

I Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy; who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable, both sides rogue!

I Sold. When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score:

Half won, is match well made; match, and well make it;

He ne'er pays after debts, take it before!

And say, a soldier, Dian, told thee this,

Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss:

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it,

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine, as he vow'd a thee in thine ear,

PAROLLES.

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in his forehead.

2 Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist, and the ardent soldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

I Sold. I perceive, sir, by the general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: not that I am afraid to die; but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature: let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

I Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this captain Dumain: you have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister; for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk; and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty: he has every thing, that an honest man should not have;

what an honest man should have, he hathing.

I Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honest pox upon him for me, he is more and more.

I Sold. What say you to his expertness in Par. Faith, sir, he has led the drum before English tragedians,—to belie him, I will not more of his soldiery I know not; except in country, he had the honour to be the office place there called Mile-end, to instruct in doubling of files: I would do the man what I can, but of this I am not certain.

I Lord. He hath out-villain'd villainy so fit the rarity redeems him!

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

I Sold. His qualities being at this poor need not ask you if gold will corrupt him to Par. Sir, for a quart d'ecu he will sell the simple of his salvation, the inheritance of cut the entail from all remainders, and a poor succession for it perpetually.

I Sold. What's his brother, the other Dumain?

2 Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

I Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow of the same nest; not ther so great as the first in goodness, but great deal in evil. He excels his brother coward, yet his brother is reputed one of that is: in a retreat he outruns any lackey in coming on he has the cramp.

I Sold. If your life be saved, will you not to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse Rousillon.

I Sold. I'll whisper with the general, at his pleasure.

Par. I'll no more drumming; a plagu'd drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and guile the supposition of that lascivious you the count, have I run into this danger: I would have suspected an ambush where taken?

I Sold. There is no remedy, sir; but you die: the general says, you, that have so tra discovered the secrets of your army, as such pestiferous reports of men very not can serve the world for no honest use; you must die. Come, headsman, off head!

Par. O Lord, sir; let me live, or let me death!

I Sold. That shall you, and take you all your friends. [Unmus.]

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2 Lord. God bless you, captain Parolles.

I Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you lord Lafen? I am for France.

I Lord. Good captain, will you give me of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf count Rousillon? an I were not a very I'd compel it of you: but fare you well.

[Exeunt Bertram, I]

I Sold. You are undone, captain: all scarf, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a pl.

I Sold. If you could find out a count but women were that had received so much you might begin an impudent nation. well, sir; I am for France, too; we shall you there.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart w 'Twould burst at this: Captain I'll be no But I will eat and drink, and sleep as so As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself gart, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass That every bragart shall be found an ass Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery There's place, and means, for every man I'll after them.

SCENE IV.

Scene. A room in the Widow's house.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

That you may well perceive I have not roog'd you, the greatest in the Christian world my surety: 'fore whose throne, 'tis needful, an perfect mine intents, to kneel: as, I did him a desired office, most as his life; which gratitude i flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth, swer, thanks: I duly am inform'd, ce is at Marseilles: to which place e convenient convoy. You must know, pposed dead: the army breaking, and hies him home; where, heaven aiding, the leave of my good lord the king, e, before our welcome.

Gentle madam, er had a servant, to whose trust iness was more welcome.

Nor you, mistress, riend, whose thoughts more truly labour ppende your love; doubt not, but heaven ought me up to be your daughter's dower, th fated her to be my motive per to a husband. But O strange men! a such sweet use make of what they hate, aucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts the pitchy night! so lust doth play hat it loaths, for that which is away: e of this hereafter:—Yon, Diana, y poor instructions yet must suffer ng in my behalf.

Let death and honesty your impositions, I am yours ur will to suffer.

Yet, I pray you,— i the word, the time will bring on summer, riars shall have leaves as well as thorns, as sweet as sharp. We must away; gon is prepar'd, and time revives us: i that ends well: still the fine's the crown; r the course, the end is the renewan.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Scene. A room in the Countess's palace.

Enter Countess, LAFEU, and Clown.

No, no, no, your son was misled with a fata fellow there; whose villanous saffron ave made all the unbaked and doughy a nation in his colour: your daughter-in- been alive at this hour; and your son ome, more advanced by the king, than by -tailed humble-bee I speak of.

I would I had not known him! it was of the most virtuous gentlewoman, that ure had praise for creating; if she had of my flesh, and cost me; the dearest a mother, I could not have owed her a sted love.

'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we t a thousand salads, ere we light on such herb.

Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of l, or, rather, the herb of grace. hey are not salad-herbs, you knave, they -herbs.

I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir, I have a skill in grass.

Whether dost thou profess thyself; a knave, A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a man's.

Your distinction?

Could cozen the man of his wife, and do ce.

So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee; thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, sir, he has an English name; but his phisnomy is more hotter in France, than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir, alias, the prince of darkness: alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse: I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world, let his nobility remain in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some, that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender; and they'll be for the flowery way, that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a-weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways; let my horses be well looked to without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall he jades' tricks; which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Count. So he is. My lord, that's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss: and I was about to tell you. Since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it: and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty; he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters, that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship, to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking, with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honorable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O, madam, yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so, belike, is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you; I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. 'Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Marseilles. A street.Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it;
But, since you have made the days and nights as one
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Be bold, you do so grow in my requital,
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time;—

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power.—God save you, sir.

Gent. And you.Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen
From the report, that goes upon your goodness;
And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gent. And what will? What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the king;
And aid me with that store of power you have,
To come into his presence.

Gent. The king's not here.Hel. Not here, sir?Gent. Not, indeed:
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.
Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!

Hel. All's well that ends well; yet;
Though time seem so adverse, and means unfit.—
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon; Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand;
Which, I presume, shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it:
I will come after you, with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd,
Whate'er falls more.—We must to horse again;—
Go, go, provide. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Rousillon. The inner court of the Countess's palace.Enter Clown and PAROLLES.

Par. Good monsieur Lavatch, give my lord Lafeu this letter: I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddied in fortune's moot, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clow. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strong as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering. Pr'ythee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not stop your nose, sir; I spake but by a metaphor.

Clow. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor.
Pr'ythee, get thee further.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clow. Foh, pr'ythee, stand away: A paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter LAFEU.

Here is a pur of fortune's sir, or of fortune's cat, (but not a musk-cat,) that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied withal: Pray you, sir, use the you may; for he looks like a poor, decay genious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity tress in my smiles of comfort, and leave your lordship. [Exit.]

Par. My lord, I am a man, whom Fortucruelly scratched.

Lof. And what would you have me to do too late to pare her nails now. Wherein he played the knave with Fortune, that she scratch you, who of herself is a good lad would not have knaves thrive long under There's a quart d'ecu for you: Let the make you and fortune friends; I am fo-

Par. I beseech your honour, to hear single word.

Lof. You beg a single penny more: 'cor shall ha't; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolle.

Lof. You beg more than one word then my passion! give me your hand:—How do drum?

Par. O my good lord, you were the fi-found me.

Lof. Was I, in sooth? and I was the fi-lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me grace, for you did bring me out.

Lof. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou me at once both the office of God and the one brings thee in grace, and the other thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's I know by his trumpets.—Sirrah, inquire after me; I had talk of you last night:
you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat

Par. I praise God for you.

Enter BERTRAM.

He looks well on't.

I am not a day of season, a may'st see a sun-shine and a hail once: But to the brightest beams ed clouds give way; so stand thou forth, e is fair again.

My high-repent'd blames, reign, pardon to me.

All is whole; word more of the consumed time. ke the instant by the forward top; are old, and on our quick'st decrees adible and noiseless foot of time re we can effect them: You remember ghter of this lord?

Admiringly, my liege: at first my choice upon her, ere my heart ake too bold a herald of my tongue: he impression of mine eye infixing, t his scornful perspective did lend me, vapp'd the line of every other favour; a fair colour, or express'd it stol'n; d or contracted all proportions, st hideous object: Thence it came, , whom all men prais'd, and whom myself, ave lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye t that did offend it.

Well excus'd: u didst love her, strikes some scores away : great contempt: But love, that comes too late, morseful pardon slowly carried, reat sender turns a sour offence, That's good that's gone: our rash faults vial price of serious things we have, ving them, until we know their grave: lispleasures, to ourselves unjust, our friends, and after weep their dust: love waking cries to see what's done, nameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. weet Helen's knell, and now forget her. h your amorous token for fair Maudlin: e consents are had; and here we'll stay r widower's second marriage-day.

Which better than the first, O dear hea- s, bless! hey meet, in me, O nature, cease! me on, my son, in whom my house's name digested, give a favour from you, ie in the spirits of my daughter, may quickly come.—By my old beard, y hair that's on't, Helen, that's dead, weet creature; such a ring as this, that e'er I took her leave at court, ou her finger.

My gracious sovereign, it pleases you to take it so, was never her's.

Son, on my life, en her wear it; and she reckon'd it e's rate.

I am sure, I saw her wear it. ou are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it: ce was it from a casement thrown me, in a paper, which contain'd the name hat threw it: noble she was, and thought agag'd: but when I had subscrib'd own fortune, and inform'd her fully, ot answer in that course of honour d made the overture, she ceas'd, satisfaction, and would never he ring again.

Plutus himself, wa the tinct and multiplying medicine,

Hath not in nature's mystery more science, Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's, Whoever gave it you: Then, if you know That you are well acquainted with yourself, Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement You got it from her: she call'd the saints to surety, That she would never put it from her finger, Unless she gave it to yourself in bed, (Where you have never come,) or sent it us Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it. King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour;

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me, Which I would fain shut out: If it should prove That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove so;— And yet I know not:—Thou didst hate her deadly, And she is dead; which nothing, but to close Her eyes myself, could win me to believe, More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—

[Guards seize Bertram.] My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall, Shall tax my fears of little vanity, Having vainly fear'd too little.—Away with him;— We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove, This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy Prove, that I husbanded her bed in Florence, Where yet she never was.

[Exit Bertram, guarded.]

Enter a Gentleman.

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thoughts. Gent. Gracious sovereign, Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not;

Here's a petition from a Florentine, Who hath, for four or five removes, come short To tender it herself. I undertook it, Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know, Is here attending: her business looks in her With an importing visage; and she told me, In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.] Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Roussillon a widower; his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice: Grant it me, O king; in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.

DIANA CAPULET.

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll him: for this, I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafen, To bring forth this discovery. Seek these suitors:— Go, speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exeunt Gentleman, and some Attendants.] I am afraid, the life of Heien, lady, Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, since wives are monsters to you, And that you fly them as you swear them lordship, Yet you desire to marry.—What woman's that?

Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow, and Diana.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine, Derived from the ancient Capulet; My suit, as I do understand, you know, And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour Both suffer under this complaint we bring, And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; Do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can, nor will deny But that I know them: Do they charge me further?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.
Dia. If you shall marry,
 You give away this hand, and that is mine.
 You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine;
 You give away myself, which is known mine;
 For I by vow am so embodied yours,
 That she, which marries you, must marry me,
 Either both, or none.

Laf. Your reputation [To Bertram] comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: let your highness

Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
 Than for to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,

Till your deeds gain them: Fairer prove your honour,

Than in my thought it lies!

Dia. Good my lord,
 Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
 He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent, my lord;
 And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so,
 He might have bought me at a common price:
 Do not believe him: O, behold this ring,
 Whose high respect, and rich validity,
 Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
 He gave it to a commoner o' the camp,
 If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis it
 Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
 Confer'd by testament to the sequent issue, Hath it been ow'd, and worn. This is his wife;
 That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought you said,
 You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my lord, but loth am to produce
 So had an instrument; his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.
King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Ber. What of him?
 He's quoted for a most perfidious slave,
 With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debosh'd;
 Whose nature sickens, but to speak the truth:
 Am I or that, or this, for what he'll utter,
 That will speak any thing?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think, she has; certain it is, I lik'd her,
 And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth:
 She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
 Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
 As all impediments in fancy's course
 Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine,
 Her insult coming with her modern grace,
 Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring;
 And I had that, which any inferior might
 At market-price have bought.

Dian. I must be patient;
 You that turn'd off a first so noble wife,
 May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
 (Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,)
 Send for your ring, I will return it home,
 And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like

The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
 Out of a casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth.

Enter PAROLLES.

Ber. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers.

King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts
 you.—

Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but, tell me true, I charge

INDUCTION.

SCENE I.

Before an alehouse on a heath.

Enter Hostess and SLY.

Sly. I'll pheeese you, in faith.

Host. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly. Y'are a haggage; the Slies are no rogues: Look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore, paucas pallabris; let the world slide: Sessa!

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Sly. No, not a denier: Go by, says Jeronimy;—Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host. I know my remedy, I must go fetch the thirdborough.

Sly. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law: I'll not budge an inch, boy; let him come, and kindly.

[Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds.

Brach Merriman,—the poor cur is emboss'd, And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach. Sav'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault? I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord; He cried upon it at the merest loss, And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent: Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool; if Echo were as fleet, I would esteem him worth a dozen such. But sup them well, and look unto them all; To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

Hun. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

Hun. He breathes, my lord: Were he not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies! Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!

Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.—

What think you, if he were convey'd to bed, Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers, A most delicious banquet by his bed,

And brave attendants near him when he wakes, Would not the beggar then forget himself?

Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy. Then take him up, and manage well the jest:— Carry him gently to my fairest chamber, And hang it round with all my wanton pictures: Balm his foul head with warm distilled waters, And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet: Procure me musick ready when he wakes, To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound; And if he chance to speak, be ready straight, And, with a low submissive reverence, Say,—What is it your honour will command? Let one attend him with a silver basin, Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers; Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper, And say,—Will't please your lordship cool your hands?

Some one be ready with a costly suit, And ask him what apparel he will wear; Another tell him of his hounds and horse, And that his lady mourns at his disease; Persuade him, that he hath been lunatick; And, when he says he is,—say, that he dreams, For he is nothing but a mighty lord. This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs; It will be pastime passing excellent, If it be husbanded with modesty.

Hun. My lord, I warrant you, we'll play our part, As he shall think, by our true diligence, He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him. And each one to his office, when he wakes.—

[Some bear out Sly. A trumpet sounds.— Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds.—

Belike, some noble gentleman; that means, Travelling some journey, to repose him here.—

Re-enter a Servant.

How now? who is it?

Serv. An it please your honour, Players, that offer service to your lordship.

Lord. Bid them come near:—

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

1 Play. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

2 Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart.—This fellow remembers Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son;— 'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well.

TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Act 4. Sc. 3.

Published by W. Pickering 57. Chancery Lane 1823

I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.
1 Play. I think, 'twas Soto that your honour means.
Lord. 'Tis very true;—thou didst it excellent.—
Well, you are come to me in happy time;
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play to-night:
But I am doubtful of your modesties;
Lest over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play),
You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.
1 Play. Fear not, my lord; we can contain ourselves,
Were he the veriest antic in the world.
Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing, that my house affords.—

[Exit Servant and Players.]

Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew my page,
[To a Servant.]
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber,
And call him—madam, do him obeisance.
Tell him from me. (as he will win my love),
He bear himself with honourable action,
Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy;
And say,—What is't your honour will command,
Wherein your lady, and your humble wife,
May show her duty, and make known her love?
And then—with kind embraces, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,— Bid him shed tears, as being overjoyed
To see her noble lord restor'd to health,
Who, for twice seven years, hath esteem'd him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar:
And if the boy have not a woman's gift,
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift;
Which in a napkin being close convey'd,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this despatch'd with all the haste thou canst;
And, I'll give thee more instructions.—

[Exit Servant.]

I know, the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentleman;
I long to hear him call the drunkard, husband;
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

A bedchamber in the Lord's house.

Sly is discovered in a rich night-gown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with bason, ewer, and other appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a Servant.

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.
1 Serv. Will't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?
2 Serv. Will't please your honour taste of these conserves?
3 Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?
Sly. I am Christophero Sly; call not me—honour, nor lordship: I never drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef: Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear; for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometimes more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.
Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour!
O, that a mighty man, of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be infused with so foul a spirit!
Sly. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Burton-heath;

by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom.

What, I am not bestrought: Here's—

1 Serv. O, this it is, that makes your lady mourn.

2 Serv. O, this it is, that makes your servants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it, that your kindred shun your house,

As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.

O, noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth;

Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,

And banish hence these abject lowly dreams:

Look how thy servants do attend on thee,

Each in his office ready at thy beck,

Wilt thou have musick? hark! Apollo plays,

[Justick.]

And twenty caged nightingales do sing:

Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch,

Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed

On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.

Say, thou wilt walk; and we will bestrew the ground:

Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,

Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.

Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar

Above the morning lark: Or wilt thou hunt?

Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,

And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Serv. Say, thou wilt course; thy greyhounds are as swift

As breathed stags, ay, fleetier than the roe.

2 Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight

Adonis painted by a running brook:

And Cytherea all in sedges hid;

Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,

Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee I^o, as she was a maid;

And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,

As lively painted as the deed was done.

3 Serv. Or Daphne, roaming through a thorny

wood;

Scratching her legs that one shall swear she bleeds:

And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,

So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:

Thou hast a lady far more beautiful

Than any woman in this waning age.

1 Serv. And till the tears, that she hath shed for

thee,

Like envious floods, o'er-ran her lovely face,

She was the fairest creature in the world;

And yet she is inferior to none.

Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?

Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?

I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;

I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things:—

Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed;

And not a tinker, nor Christophero Sly.—

Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;

And once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

2 Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

[Servants present an ewer, bason, and napkin.]

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!

O, that once more you knew but what you are!

These fifteen years you have been in a dream;

Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Serv. O, yes, my lord; but very idle words:—

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,

Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;

And rail upon the hostess of the house;

And say, you would present her at the leet,

Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts;

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid;

Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up,—

As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,

And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell;

And twenty more such names and men as these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!

All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a Lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer enough. Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord; What is thy will with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me—husband?

My men should call me—lord; I am your good man.
Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;

I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well:—What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Al'ce madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else; so lords call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say, that I have dream'd, and slept

Above some fifteen year and more.

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me;

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Sly. 'Tis much;—Servants, leave me and her alone.—

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of you,

To pardon me yet for a night or two;

Or, if not so, until the sun be set:

For your physicians have expressly charg'd,
In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed:
I hope, this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly so long. But I would be loath to fall into dreams again; I will therefore tarry, in desir'
the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your ment,

Are come to play a pleasant comedy,
For so your doctors hold it very meet;
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment
Which bars a thousand harms, and lengtheneth your life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it: Is commonly a Christmas gambol, or a tum-trick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasur' than a tum-trick.

Sly. What, household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see't: Come, madam, undress by my side, and let the world slip; we shall be younger. [They sit]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Padua. A public place.

Enter LUCENTIO and TRANIO.

Luc. Tranio, since—for the great desire I had To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,—
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
Most trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffick through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii.
Vincentio his son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness,
By virtue 'specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind: for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come; as he, that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. Mi perdonate, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoicks, nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Talk logic with acquaintance, that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk:
Musick and poesy use to quicken you;
The mathematicks, and the metaphisicks,
Fall to them, as you find your stomach serves you:
No profit grows, where is no pleasure ta'en;—
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness;
And take a lodging, fit to entertain
Such friends, as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: What company is this?

Tra. Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

Enter BAPTISTA, KATHARINA, BIONDELLO, GREMIO, and HORTENSIO. LUCENTIO and TRANIO stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, imp'rtune me no further
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is,—not to bestow my youngest daughter
Before I have a husband for the elder:
It either of you both love Katharina, Because I know you well, and love you we Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gre. To cart her rather: She's too rough for There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife Kath. I pray you, sir, [To Bap.] is it yet
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that? I mean for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

Kath. I'faith, sir, you shall never need to
I wis, it is not half way to her heart:
But, if it were, doubt not her care should
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd staff,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.
Hor. From all such devils, good Lord, deliver us!
Gre. And me too, good Lord!

Tra. Hush, master! here is some good toward;

That wench is stark mad, or wonderful fro
Luc. But in the other's silence I do see Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.
Peace, Tranio.

Tra. Well said, master; mum! and gaze!
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make What I have said,—Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displeas thee, good Bianca
For I will love thee ne'er the lass, my girl.
Kath. A pretty peat! 'tis best Put finger in the eye,—an she know why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discountenance,
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books, and instruments, shall be my company.
On them to look, and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou may'st hear
speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so stur'd?
Sorry am I, that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why, will you mew her up
Signior Baptista, for this fiasco of bell,
And make her bear the penance of her ton?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd Go in, Bianca. [Exit

r I know, she taketh most delight
 ick, instruments, and poetry, masters will I keep within my house, instruct her youth.—If you, Hortensio, nor Gremio, you,—know any such,
 them hither; for to cunning men be very kind, and liberal e own children in good bringing-up; farewell. Katharina, you may stay;
 are more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.
 . Why, and I trust, I may go too; may I not?
 shall I be appointed hours; as though, belike, not what to take, and what to leave? Ha!

[Exit.
 You may go to the devil's dam; your gifts good, here is none will hold you. Their love so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our igher, and fast it fairly out; our cake's on both sides. Farewell:—Yet, for the love my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means e a fit man, to teach her that wherein she s, I will wish him to her father.

So will I, signior Gremio: But a word, I Though the nature of our quarrel yet never parle, know now, upon advice, it toucheth —that we may yet again have access to our stress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, our and effect one thing specially.

What's that, I pray?
 Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.
 A husband! a devil.

I say, a husband.
 I say, a devil: Think'st thou, Hortensio, her father be very rich, any man is so very o be married to hell?

Tush, Gremio, though it pass your patience,
 ac, to endure her loud alarms, why, man, s good fellows in the world, an a man could them, would take her with all faults, and enough.

I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her with this condition,—to be whipped at the ss every morning.

'Faith, as you say, there's small choice in apples. But, come; since this bar in law s friends, it shall be so far forth friendly ned,—till by helping Baptista's eldest r to a husband, we set his youngest free and, and then have to't afresh.—Sweet !—Happy man be his dole! He that runs gets the ring. How say you, signior Gre-

I am agreed: and 'would I had given him t horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that heroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, the house of her. Come on.

[Exit Gremio and Hortensio.

[Advancing.] I pray, sir, tell me,—Is it ossible

ve should of a sudden take such hold?

O Tranio, till I found it to be true, thought it possible, or likely;

! while idly I stood looking on,

the effect of love in idleness:

w in plainness do confess to thee,— t to me as secret, and as dear, as to the Queen of Carthage was,—

I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio, ieve not this young modest girl:

I me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;

me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Master, it is no time to chide you now;

as is not rated from the heart:

have touch'd you, nought remains but so,— te captum quam quas minimo.

Gramercies, lad; go forward: this contents;

it will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Master, you look'd so longly on the maid, s you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face, s the daughter of Agenor had,

ade great Jove to humble him to her hand,

with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

Saw you no more? mark'd you not, how her sister

to scold; and raise up such a storm,

That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,

And with her breath she did perfume the air;

Sacred, and sweet, was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.

I pray, awake, sir; If you love the maid,

Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:—

Her eldest sister is so curst and shrewd,

That, till the father rid his bands of her,

Master, your love must live a maid at home;

And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,

Because she shall not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!

But art thou not advis'd, he took some care

To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tra. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 'tis plotted.

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tra. Master, for my hand,

Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be schoolmaster,

And undertake the teaching of the maid:

That's your device.

Luc. It is: May it be done?

Tra. Not possible; For who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincentio's son?

Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends;

Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it full.

We have not yet been seen in any house;

Nor can we be distinguished by our faces,

For man, or master: then it follows thus;—

Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,

Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:

I will some other be; some Florentine,

Some Neapolitan, or mean man of Pisa.

'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so:—Tranio, at once

Uncease thee; take my colour'd hat and cloak:

When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;

But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So had you need. [They exchange habits.

In brief, then, sir, sith it your pleasure is,

And I am tied to be obedient;

(For so your father charg'd me at our parting;

Be serviceable to my son, quoth he,

Although, I think, 'twas in another sense,)

I am content to be Lucentio,

Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves:

And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid,

Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Here comes the rogue.—Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now, where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes?

Or you stol'n his? or both? pray, what's the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither; 'tis no time to jest,

And therefore frame your manners to the time.

Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,

Puts my apparel and my countenance on,

And I for my escape have put on his;

For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,

I kill'd a man, and fear I was desir'd:

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,

While I make way from hence to save my life:

You understand me?

Bion. I, sir? ne'er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth:

Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him; 'Would I were so too!

Tra. So would I, 'faith, boy, to have the next wish after,—

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest

daughter.

But, sirrah,—not for my sake, but your master's,—

I advise

You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;

But in all places else, your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let's go:—

One thing more rests, that thyself execute;—

To make one among these wooers: If thou ask me why,—

Sufficieth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.]

I Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play. Sly. Yes, by saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely; Comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 'tis but begun.

Sly. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady; 'Would't were done!

SCENE II.

The same. Before Hortensio's house.

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave, To see my friends in Padua; but, of all, My best beloved and approved friend, Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house:— Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Gru. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you here, sir? why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate, And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome: I should knock you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

Gru. Faith, sirrah, and you'll not knock, I'll wring it; I'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.

[He wrings Grumio by the ears.]

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter HORTENSIO.

Hor. How now? what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruccio!— How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray? Con tutto il core bene trovato, may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa bene venuto,

Molto honorato signor mio Petruccio.

Rise, Grumio, rise; and we will compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay, 'tis no matter, what he leges in Latin. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service,—Look you, sir,—he hid me knock him, and rap him soundly, sir: Well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps, (for aught I see,) two and thirty,—a pip out?

Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first, Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate,

And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate? O heavens! Spake you not these words plain,—Sirrah, knock me here, Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly? And come you now with—knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petruccio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge: Why, this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you;

Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio.

And tell me now, sweet friend,—what happy gale Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,

To seek their fortunes further than at home, Where small experience grows. But, in a few,

Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:— Antonio, my father, is deceas'd;

And I have thrust myself into this maze, Haply to wive, and thrive, as best I may:

Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home, And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruccio, shall I then come roundly to thee, And wish thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife?

Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsel: And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,

And very rich:—but thou'rt too much my friend, And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we, Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know

One rich enough to be Petrucbio's wife, (As wealthy is burthen of my wooing dance,) Be she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sihyl, and as curst and shrewd As Socrates' Xantippe, or a worse, She moves me not, or not removes, at least, Affection's edge in me; were she as rough As are the swelling Adriatick seas: I come to wive it wealthily in Padua; If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly his mind is: Why, give him gold enough, marry him to a puppet, or an aglet-baby, or old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though have as many diseases as two and fifty who why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes w—

Hor. Petruccio, since we have stepp'd thus far, I will continue that, I broach'd in jest.

I can, Petruccio, help thee to a wife With wealth enough, and young, and beauteful— Brought up, as best becomes a gentlewoman: Her only fault (and that is faults enough,)

Is,—that she is intolerably curst, And shrewd, and froward; so beyond all measure That were my state far worse than it is,

I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace; thou know'st not the effect:—

Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough; For I will board her, though she chide as long As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola, An affable and courteous gentleman:

Her name is Katharina Minola, Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not And he knew my deceased father well:—

I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her; And therefore let me be thus bold with you,

To give you over at this first encounter, Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as I do, she would think scolding would do good upon him: She may, perhaps, call him a score knaves, or so: why, that's nothing; begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll you what, sir,—an she stand him but a little will throw a figure in her face, and so disher with it, that she shall have no more to see withal than a cat: You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruccio, I must go with thee For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:

He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca;

And her withholds from me, and other more Suitors to her, and rivals in my love:

Supposing it a thing impossible, (For those defects I have before rehears'd,) That ever Katharina will be woo'd,

Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en:— That none shall have access unto Bianca, Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.

Gru. Katharine the curst! A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruccio do me, And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes, To old Baptista as a schoolmaster

Well seen in musick, to instruct Bianca: That so I may by this device, at least, Have leave and leisure to make love to her,

And, unsuspected, court her by herself.

Enter GREMIO; with him LUCENTIO disguised with books under his arm.

Gru. Here's no knavery! See; to beguile old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: goes there? ha!

Hor. Peace, Grumio; 'tis the rival of my love Petruccio, stand by a while.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous!

[They]

Gru. O, very well; I have perus'd the note: Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound: All books of love, see that any hand;

e you read no other lectures to her :
 oderstand me :—Over and beside Baptista's liberality, nd it with a largess :—Take your papers too, t me have them very well perfum'd ;
 e is sweeter than perfume itself, om they go. What will you read to her ?
 Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you my patron, (stand you so assur'd,) sly as yourself were still in place :
 nd (perhaps) with more successful words ou, unless you were a scholar, sir.
 O this learning ! what a thing it is !
 O this woodcock ! what an ass it is !
 Peace, sirrah.
 Gremio, mum !—God save you, signior Gremio !

And you're well met, signior Hortensio.
 How you,
 er I am going ?—To Baptista Minola.
 is'd to inquire carefully
 a schoolmaster for fair Bianca :
 y good fortune, I have lighted well
 y young man ; for learning, and behaviour, her turn ; well read in poetry,
 her books,—good ones, I warrant you.
 'Tis well : and I have met a gentleman, romis'd me to help me to another,
 musician to instruct our mistress ;
 I I no whit be behind in duty
 Bianca, so belov'd of me.
 Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall rove.

And that his bags shall prove. [Aside.
 Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love :
 to me, and if you speak me fair,
 you news indifferent good for either.
 s a gentleman, whom by chance I met,
 greement from us to his liking, nder take to woo carst Katharine ;
 id to marry her, if her dowry please.
 So said, so done, is well :—
 sio, have you told him all her faults ?
 I know, she is an irksome brawling scold ;
 be all, masters, I hear no harm.
 No, say'st me so, friend ? What countryman ?
 Born in Verona, old Antonio's son :
 er dead, my fortune lives for me ;
 do hope good days, and long, to see.
 O, sir, such a life, with such a wife, were trange :
 you have a stomach, to't o'God's name ;
 all have me assisting you in all.
 I you woo this wild cat ?

Will I live ?
 Will he woo her ? ay, or I'll hang her. [Aside.
 Why came I hither, but to that intent ?
 ou, a little din can daunt mine ears ?
 not in my time heard lions roar ?
 not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
 ke an angry boar, chafed with sweat ?
 not heard great ordnance in the field,
 aven's artillery thunder in the skies ?
 not in a pitched battle heard arms, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang ?
 you tell me of a woman's tongue ;
 ves not half so great a blow to the ear,
 a chesnut in a farmer's fire ?
 ouch ! fear boys with bugs.
 For he fears none. [Aside.
 Hortensio, hark !
 otleman is happily arriv'd,
 d presumes, for his own good, and yours.
 I promis'd, we would be contributors, ur his charge of wooing, whatsoever.

Gre. And so we will ; provided that be win her.
 Gru. I would I were as sure of a good diuner.

[Aside.

Enter TRANIO, bravely apparell'd ; and BIONDELLO.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you ! If I may be bold, Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
 To the house of signior Baptista Minola ?

Gre. He that has the two fair daughters :—is't [Aside to Tranio.] he you mean ?

Tra. Even he, Biondello !

Gre. Hark you, sir ; You mean not her to—

Tra. Perhaps, him and her, sir ; What have you to do ?

Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders, sir :—Biondello, let's away,

Luc. Well begun, Tranio. [Aside.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go :—

Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea, or no ?

Tra. An if I be, sir, is it any offence ?

Gre. No ; if, without more words, you will get you hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
 For me, as for you ?

Gre. But so is not she.

Tra. For what reason, I beseech you ?

Gre. For this reason, if you'll know,—

That she's the choice love of signior Gremio.

Hor. That she's the chosen of signior Hortensio.

Tra. Softly, my masters ! if you be gentlemen,

Do me this right,—hear me with patience.

Baptista is a noble gentleman,

To whom my father is not all unknown ;

And, were his daughter fairer than she is,

She may more suitors have, and me for one.

Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers ;

Then well one more may fair Bianca have :

And so she shall ; Lucentio shall make one,

Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What ! this gentleman will out-talk us all.

Luc. Sir, give him head ; I know he'll prove a jade.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words ?

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as to ask you,

Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter ?

Tra. No, sir ; but hear I do, that he hath two ;

The one as famous for a scolding tongue,

As is the other forauteous modesty.

Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me ; let her go by.

Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules ;

And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.

Pet. Sir, understand you this of me, insooth ;—

The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,

Her father keeps from all access of suitors ;

And will not promise her to any man,

Until the elder sister first be wed ;

The younger then is free, and not before.

Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man

Must stead us all, and me among the rest ;

And if you break the ice, and do this feat,—

Achieve the elder, set the younger free

For our access,—whose hap shall be to have her,

Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive ;

And since you do profess to be a suitor,

You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,

To whom we all rest generally beholden.

Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack : in sign whereof,

Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,

And quaff carouses to our mistress' health ;

And do as adversaries do in law,—

Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Gru. Bion. O excellent motion ! Fellows, let's begone.

Hor. The motion's good indeed, and be it so ;—

Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto. [Exeunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

the same. A room in Baptista's house.

Enter KATHARINA and BIANCA.

Good sisters, wrong me not, nor wrong
 ourself,

To make a bondmaid and a slave of me ;
 That I disdain : but for these other gawds,
 Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
 Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat ;
 Or, what you will command me, will I do,
 So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.

Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thou liest; Is't not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear,
I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.

Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more;
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.

Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so?
Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive,
You have but jested with me all this while:
I pry'thee, sister Kate, untie my hands.

Kath. If that be best, then all the rest was so.

[Strikes her.]

Enter BAPTISTA.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?—

Bianca, stand aside;—poor girl! she weeps:—
Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her.—
For shame, thou hilding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd.

[Fites after Bianca.]

Bap. What, in my sight?—Bianca, get thee in.

[Exit Bianca.]

Kath. Will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see,
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding-day,
And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.
Talk not to me; I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit Katharina.]

Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here!

Enter GREMIO, with LUCENTIO in the habit of a mean man; PETRUCHIO, with HORTENSIO as a Musician; and TRANIO, with BIONDELLO bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio: God save you, gentlemen!

Pet. And you, good sir! Pray, have you not a daughter

Call'd Katharina, fair, and virtuous?

Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katharina.

Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me, signior Gremio; give me leave.—

I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
That,—hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability, and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,—
Am bold to show myself a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report, which I so oft have heard.
And, for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine,

[Presenting Hortensio.]

Cunning in musick, and the mathematicks,

To instruct her fully in those sciences,

Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant:

Accept of him, or else you do me wrong;

His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. You're welcome, sir; and he, for your good sake:

But for my daughter Katharina,—this I know,

She is not for your turn, the more my grief.

Pet. I see, you do not mean to part with her;

Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but as I find.

Whence are you, sir? what may I call your name?

Pet. Petruccio is my name; Antonio's son,

A man well known throughout all Italy.

Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale, Petruccio, I pray,

Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too:

Baccare! you are marvellous forward.

Pet. O, pardon me, signior Gremio; I would fain be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.—

Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am of it. To express the like kindness myself, have been more kindly beholden to you than
I freely give unto you this young scholar, [sending Lucentio.] that hath been long studying Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and languages, as the other in musick and mathematics: his name is Cambio; pray, accept his se-

Bap. A thousand thanks, signior Gremio:
come, good Cambio.—But, gentle sir, [To Tr.]
methinks, you walk like a stranger; May I bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine
That, being a stranger in this city here,
Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair, and virtuous.

Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister:

This liberty is all, that I request,—

That, upon knowledge of my parentage,

I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that will

And free access and favour as the rest.

And, toward the education of your daughter

I here bestow a simple instrument,

And this small packet of Greek and Latin books

If you accept them, then their worth is great.

Bap. Lucentio is your name? of whence, I pray?

Tra. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Pisa; by report

I know him well: you are very welcome, sir.

Take you [To Hor.] the lute, and you [To] the set of books,

You shall go see your pupils presently.

Holla, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead

These gentlemen to my daughters; and to both,

These are their tutors; bid them use them

[Exit Servant, with Hortensio, L]

and Biondello.]

We will go walk a little in the orchard,

And then to dinner: You are passing well

And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business ask'd

And every day I cannot come to woo.

You knew my father well; and in him, me

Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,

Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:

Then tell me,—if I get your daughter's love

What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death, the one half of my

And, in possession, twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her

Her widowhood,—be it that she survive me!

In all my lands and leases whatsoever:

Let specialties be therefore drawn between

That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well o-

This is,—her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you

I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;

And where two raging fires meet together,

They do consume the thing, that feeds their fire:

Though little fire grows great with little wood,

Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and so

So I to her, and so she yields to me;

For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well may'st thou woo, and happy

speed!

But be thou arm'd for some unhappy word

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for

That shake not, though they blow perpetua-

Re-enter HORTENSIO, with his head b

Bap. How now, my friend? why dost thou

so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look p

Bap. What, will my daughter prove musician?

Hor. I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier

Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break be-lute?

Hor. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute but tell her, she mistook her frets, ow'd her hand to teach her fingering;

with a most impatient devilish spirit,
call you these? quoth she: I'll fume with them:
with that word, she struck me on the head, rough the instrument my pate made way;
ere I stood amazed for a while,
a pillory, looking through the lute:
she did call me,—rascal fiddler,
twangling Jack; with twenty such vile terms,
had studied to misuse me so.

Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench;
her ten times more than e'er I did:
I long to have some chat with her!
Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:
I in practice with my younger daughter;
apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.—
Petruchio, will you go with us;
I'll send my daughter Kate to you?

I pray you do; I will attend her here,— [Exeunt Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio.]

oo her with some spirit, when she comes.
at she rail; Why, then I'll tell her plain,
gs as sweetly as a nightingale:
at she frown; I'll say, she looks as clear ning roses newly wash'd with dew:
e be mute, and will not speak a word;
I'll commend her volubility, y—she uttereth piercing eloquence:
loth bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
gh she bid me stay by her a week;
leazy to wed, I'll crave the day
: shall ask the bans, and when he married:—
re she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter KATHARINA.

orrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Well have you heard, but something hard
f hearing;
ll me Katharine, that do talk of me.
Coulie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate, my Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
e, the prettiest Kate in Christendom, Kate-Hall, my supper-dainty Kate, nies are all cates: and therefore, Kate, is of me, Kate of my consolation;—
thy mildness prais'd in every town, mes spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
t so deeply as to thee belongs,) am mov'd! to woo thee for my wife.

Mov'd! in good time: let him, that mov'd ou hither,
you hence; I knew you at the first,
re a moveable.

Why, what's a moveable?

A joint-stool.

Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.
Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
Women are made to bear, and so are you.
No such jade, sir, as you, if me you mean.
Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee:
owing thee to be but young and light,—
Too light for such a swain as you to catch;
as heavy as my weight should be,
Should be? should buz.

Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.
, slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take see?

Ay, for a turtle; as he takes a buzzard.

Come, come, you wasp; i'faith, you are too agry.

If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
My remedy is then, to pluck it out.

Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Who knows not where a wasp doth wear is sting?

all.

In his tongue. Whose tongue

Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.

What, with my tongue in your tail? nay,
me again,

ate; I am a gentleman.

That I'll try.
[Striking him.]

Pet. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again.

Kath. So may you lose your arms;

If you strike me, you are no gentleman;

And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.

Pet. A herald, Kate? O, put me in thy books.

Kath. What is your crest? a coxcomb?

Pet. A combs cock, so Kate will be my hen.

Kath. No cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.

Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.

Pet. Why, here's no crab; and therefore look not sour.

Kath. There is, there is.

Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face?

Kath. Well aim'd of such a young one.

Pet. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.

Kath. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares.

Kath. I care not.

Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you 'scape not so.

Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry; let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit; I find you passing gentle.

'Twas told me, you were rough, and coy, and sullen,

And now I find report a very liar;

For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous;

But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers;

Thou canst not frown, though canst not look askance,

Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;

Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;

But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,

With gentle conference, soft and affable.

Why does the world report, that Kate doth limp?

O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazle-twig,

Is straight and slender; and as brown in hue

As hazel nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.

O, let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,

As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?

O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful!

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm.

Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy bed:

And therefore, setting all this chat aside,

Thus in plain terms:—Your father hath consented,

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on;

And, will you, nil you, I will marry you.

Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;

For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,

(Thy beauty, that doth make me like thee well,)

Thou must be married to no man but me:

For I am he, am born to tame you, Kate;

And bring you from a wild cat to a Kate Conformable, as other household Kates.

Here comes your father; never make denial,
I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter BAPTISTA, GREMIO, and TRANIO.

Bap. Now,

Signior Petruchio: How speed you with My daughter?

Pet. How but well, sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss.

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine? in your dumps?

Kath. Call you me daughter? now I promise you,
You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,

To wish me wed to one half lunatick;

A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 'tis thus,—yourself and all the world,
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her;

If she be curst, it is for policy:

For she's not froward, but modest as the dove;

She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;

For patience she will prove a second Grissel;

And Roman Lucrece for her chastity :
And to conclude,—we have 'greed so well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding day.

Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petruccio! she says, she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay, then, good night our part!

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself;

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?

'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.

I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!—

She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,

That in a twink she won me to her love.
O, you are novices! 'tis a world to see,

How tame, when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.—

Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day:—

Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;
I will be sure, my Katharine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say: but give me your hands;

God send you joy, Petruccio! 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen, say we; we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu;
I will to Venice, Sunday comes apace:—

We will have rings, and things, and fine array,
And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o'Sunday.

[Exeunt Petruccio and Katharine, severally.]
Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,

And venture madly on a desperate mart.
Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you:

'Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
Pet. The gain I seek is—quiet in the match.

Gre. No doubt, but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter:—

Now is the day we long have looked for;
I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one, that love Bianca more Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.

Gre. Youngling! thou canst not love so dear as I.
Tra. Grey-beard! thy love doth freeze.

Gre. But thine doth fry.
Skipper, stand back; 'tis age, that nourisheth.

Tra. But youth, in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.
Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I'll compound this strife:

'Tis deeds, must win the prize; and he, of both,
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,

Shall have Bianca's love.—
Say, signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city
Is richly furnished with plate and gold;

Basons, and ewers, to lave her dainty hands;
My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;

In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns;

In cypress chests, my arras, counterpoints,
Costly apparel, tents, and canopies,

Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,
Valance of Venice gold in needle-work,

Pewter and brass, and all things that belong
To house, or house-keeping; then, at my father's

I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,
Sixscore fat oxen standing in my stalls,

And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess;

And, if I die to-morrow, this is hers,
If, whilst I live, she will be only mine.

Tra. That, only, came well in—Sir, list you,
I am my father's heir, and only son:

If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,

Within rich Pisa walls, as any one Old signior Gremio has in Padua;

Besides two thousand ducats by the year,
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.

What, have I pinch'd you with an argosy?
Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year, and

My land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have; besides an argosy,

That now is lying in Marseilles' road:—
What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 'tis known, my father hath Than three great argosies; besides two galleys

And twelve tight galleies: these I will assure
And twice as much, whatever thou offer'st.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more
And she can have no more than all I have.

If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from this world,

By your firm promise; Gremio is out-vied.
Bap. I must confess, your offer is the best.

And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own; else, you must pardon me.

If you should die before him, where's her benefit?
Tra. That's but a cavil; he is old, I you

Gre. And may not young men die, as well
Bap. Well, gentlemen,

I am thus resolv'd:—On Sunday next you
My daughter Katharine is to be married:

Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance.

If not, to signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both.

Gre. Adieu, good neighbour.—Now I fear Sirrah, young gamester, your father were

To give thee all, and, in his waning age,
Set foot under thy table: Tut! a toy!

An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy.
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withe:

Yet I have faced it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to do my master good:—

I see no reason, but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd—suppos'd Vincentio.

And that's a wonder: fathers, commonly,
Do get their children; but, in this case, O

A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

A room in Baptista's house.

Enter LUCENTIO, HORTENSIO, and BIANCA.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir:

Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katharine welcom'd you withal?

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:

Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,

Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous ass! that never read so far

To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not, to refresh the mind of man,

After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,

And, while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me doubt

To strive for that, which resteth in my choice.

I am no breaching scholar in the schools;

I'll not be tied to hours, nor 'pointed time.

But learn my lessons as I please myself.

And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down.

Take your your instrument, play you the same. Before Baptista's house.

SCENE II.

BAPTISTA, GREMIO, TRANIO, KA-NA, BIANCA, LUCENTIO, and Atrior Lucentio, [To Tranio.] this is the bed day,

urine and Petruccio should be married,
hear not of our son-in-law:
be said? what mockery will it be,

To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends
To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage?

What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?
Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be forc'd

To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart,
Unto a mad-brain'd rudesby, full of spleen;
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.
I told you, I, he was a frankie fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour:

And, to be noted for a merry man,
He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the bans;
Yet never means to wed, where he hath woo'd.
Now must the world point at poor Katharine,
And say,—Lo, there is mad Petruccio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too;
Upon my life, Petruccio means but well,
Whatever fortune stays him from his word:
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise;
Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest.

Kath. 'Would Katharine had never seen him
though!

[Exit, weeping, followed by Bianca, and others.

Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep;
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. Master, master! news, old news, and such news as you never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Bion. Why, is it not news, to hear of Petruccio's coming?

Bap. Is he come?

Bion. Why, no, sir.

Bap. What then?

Bion. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bion. When he stands, where I am, and sees you there.

Tra. But, say, what;—To thine old news.

Bion. Why, Petruccio is coming, in a new hat, and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches, thrice turned; a pair of boots, that have been candlecases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the town armory, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points: His horse hipped with an old mothy saddle, the stirrups of no kindred: besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, raked with the yellows, past cure of the fires, stark spoiled with the staggers, beghawn with the bots; swayed in the hack, and shoulder-shotten; ne'er legged before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather; which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girt six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velvete, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bion. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparisoned like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and The humour of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel; and not like a christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;—

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparell'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes.

Bion. Why, sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Bion. Who? that Petruccio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruccio came.

Bion. No, sir; I say, his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Bion. Nay, by Saint Jamy, I hold you a penny,
A horse and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who is at home?

Bap. You are welcome, sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd

As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus.

But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?—
How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you frown:
And wherefore gaze this goodly company;
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

Bap. Why, sir, you know, this is your wedding-day:

First were we sad, fearing you would not come;
Now sadder, that you come so unpurged.
Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemn festival.

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so unlike yourself?

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear:
Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word,
Though in some part enforced to digress;
Which at more leisure, I will so excuse
As you shall well be satisfied withal.

But, where is Kate? I stay too long from her;
The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.

Tra. See not your bride in these uneventures;
Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore have done with words;

To me she's married, not unto my clothes:
Could I repair what she will wear in me,
As I can change these poor accoutrements,
'Twere well for Kate, and better for myself.
But what a fool am I, to chat with you,
When I should hid good morrow to my bride,
And seal the title with a lovely kiss?

[Exeunt Petruchio, Grumio, and Biondello.]

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire:
We will persuade him, he it possible,
To put on better, ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

[Exit.]

Tra. But, sir, to her love concerneth us to add
Her father's liking: Which to bring to pass,
As I before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man,—whate'er he be,
It skills not much; we'll fit him to our turn,—
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa;
And make assurance, here in Padua,
Of greater sums than I have promised.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my mellow schoolmaster Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,
'Twere good, methinks, to steal our marriage;
Which once perform'd, let all the world say—no,
I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business:
We'll over-reach the grey-headed, Grumio,
The narrow-prying father, Minola;
The quaint musician, amorous Licio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.—

Re-enter GRUMIO.

Signior Grumio! came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom, say you? 'tis a groom, indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curster than she? why, 'tis impossible.

Gre. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.
I'll tell you, sir Lucentio; When the priest
Should ask—if Katharine should be his wife,
Ay, by gogs'-woons, quoth he; and swore so loud,
That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book:

And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,
The mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such
That down fell priest and book, and book and Now take them up, quoth he, if any list.

Tra. What said the wench, when he arose Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he st and swore,

As if the vicar meant to cozen him.
But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine:—A health, quoth he; as He had been aboard, carousing to his mates
After a storm:—Quaff'd off the muscadell,
And threw the sops all in the sexton's face;
Having no other reason,—

But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
And seem'd to ask him sops, as he was dri
This done, he took the hride about the neck
And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous
That, at the parting, all the church did ech
I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;
And, after me, I know, the rout is coming:
Such a mad marriage never was before;
Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, B
BAPTISTA, HORTENSIO, GRUMIO
Tra.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you

I know, you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding—
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leav

Bap. Is't possible, you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night
Make it no wonder; if you knew my husi
You would entreat me rather go than stay
And, honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away myself

Bop. She shall, Lucentio.—Come, gentlemen, let's go. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

Grumio in Petruchio's country house.

Enter GRUMIO.

Ne, fie, on all tired jades! on all mad and all foul ways! Was ever man so was ever man so rayed? was ever man so down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress:—

Curt. Both on one horse?

Gre. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Gre. Tell thou the tale:—But hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how miry a place: how she was bemoiled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me, because her horse stumbled;
how she waded through the dirt, to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed—that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper; with many things of worthy memory; which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

Curt. By this reckoning, he is more shrew than she.

Gre. Ay; and that, thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home. But what talk I of this!—call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest; let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit:
let them curtsy with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Gre. Call them forth.

Curt. Do you hear, ho? you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.

Gre. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Gre. Thou, it seems; that call for company to countenance her.

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Gre. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio.

Phil. How now, Grumio?

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Follow Grumio!

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gre. Welcome, you;—how now, you; what, you;—fellow, you;—and thus much for greeting.
Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready: How near is our master?

Gre. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—Cock's passion, silence!—I hear my master.

Enter PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What, no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse!

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip!—

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Pet. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!—

You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms!

What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?—

Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gre. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swain! you whoreson malthorse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,
And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made,
And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd i' the heel;
There was no link to colour Peter's hat,
And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:
There were none fine, but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;
The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly;
Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.— [Exeunt some of the Servants.]
Where is the life that late I led— [Sings.]
Where are those—Sit down, Kate, and welcome.
Soud, soud, soud, soud!

Re-enter Servants, with supper.

Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.

Off with my boots, you rogues, you villains; When?

It was the friar of orders grey, [Sings.]
As he forth walked on his way:—

Out, out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry:
Take that, and mend the plucking off the other.—

[Strikes him.]
Be merry, Kate:—Some water, here; what, ho—Where's my spaniel Troilus?—Sirrah, get you hence,

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither:—
[Exit Servant.]

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with.—

Where are my slippers?—Shall I have some water?
[A basin is presented to him.]

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily:— [Servant lets the ewer full.]

You whoreson villain! will you let it fall? [Sings him.]

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 'twas a fault unwilling.

Pet. A whoreson, beetleheaded, flap-ear'd knave!

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I?

What is this? mutton?

I Serv. Ay. Who brought it?

I Serv. I.

Pet. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat:

What dogs are these?—Where is the rascal cook?

How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me, that love it not?

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:
[Throws the meat, &c. about the stage.]

You heedless jothheads, and unmanner'd slaves!

What, do you grumble? I'll be with you straight.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so discontent;

The meat was well, if you were so quiet.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away;

And I expressly am forbid to touch it,
For it engenders cholera, planteth anger;

And better 'twere, that both of us did fast,—
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,—
Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

Be patient; to-morrow it shall be mended,
And, for this night, we'll fast for company:—
Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Curtis.]

Nath. [Advancing.] Peter, didst ever see the like?

Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter CURTIS.

Gru. Where is he?

Curt. In her chamber,
Making a sermon of continency to her:

And rails, and swears, and rates; that she, poor soul,
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak;

And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter PETRUCHIO.

Pet. Thus have I politically begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successfully:

My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty;

And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.

Another way I have to man my haggard,
To make her come, and know her keeper's call,
That is,—to watch her, as we watch these kites,
That hate, and beat, and will not be obedient.

She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;

Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed;
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheet,
Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend,
That all is done in reverend care of her;
And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night,
And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail, and curse,
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness.
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong

mour:—
He, that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak; 'tis charity to show.

SCENE II.

Padua. Before Baptista's house.

Enter TRANIO and HORTENSIO.

Tra. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?

I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have

[They strike.]

Enter BIANCA and LUCENTIO.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve

Luc. I read that I profess, the art of love Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mine my heart. [T]

Hor. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me
You that durst swear that your mistress

Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio?

Tra. O spiteful love! unconstrained women
I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;

But one that scorn to live in this disguise
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion:

Know, sir, that I am call'd—Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca;

And since mine eyes are witness of her love
I will with you,—if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court!—
Lucentio,

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more; but do forswear
As one unworthy all the former favours,
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeign'd Ne'er to marry with her, though she would Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court!

Hor. 'Would, all the world, but he,
forsworn!

For me,—that I may surely keep mine own
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass; which hath as long
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful ha;
And so farewell, signior Lucentio.—
Kindness in women, not their beauty,
Shall win my love:—and so I take my leave.
In resolution as I swore before.

[Exit Hortensio.—Lucentio and Bianca.]

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with
As 'longest to a lover's blessed case!

Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest; but have you sworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Luc. Then we are rid Tra. I'faith, he'll have a lusty widow
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he'll tame her.

Bian. He says so.

Tra. 'Faith, he is gone unto the taming school! what is the place?

ly, mistress, and Petruchio is the master ;
 which tricks eleven and twenty long,— a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter BIONDELLO, running.

O master, master, I have watch'd so long a dog-wear; but at last I spied an angel coming down the hill, and the turn.

What is he, Biondello?

Master, a mercatantè, or a pedant, out what; but formal in apparel,
 and countenance surely like a father.

And what of him, Tranio?
 If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
 he him glad to seem Vincentio;
 assurance to Baptista Minola, were the right Vincentio.
 your love, and then let me alone.

[Exeunt Licentio and Bianca.]

Enter a Pedant.

God save you, sir!

And you, sir! you are welcome.
 ou far on, or are you at the furthest?
 sir, at the furthest for a week or two:
 up further; and as far as Rome;
 o Tripoly, if God lend me life.
 What countryman, I pray?

Of Mantua.

Of Mantua, sir?—marry, God forbid!
 e to Padua, careless of your life?
 ly life, sir? how, I pray? for that goes hard.
 My death for any one in Mantua to Padua; Know you not the cause?
 ps are staid at Venice; and the duke ate quarrel 'twixt your duke and him, olish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
 rel; but that you're but newly come,
 ht have heard it else proclaim'd about.
 las, sir, it is worse for me than so;
 re bills for money by exchange rence, and must here deliver them.
 Vell, sir, to do you courtesy,
 I do, and this will I advise you;—
 I me, have you ever been at Pisa?
 y, sir, in Pisa have I often been;
 owned for grave citizens.
 mong them, know you one Vincentio?
 know him not, but I have heard of him;
 unt of incomparable wealth.
 e is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,
 nance somewhat doth resemble you.
 As much as an apple doth an oyster, and

[Aside.]

o save your life in this extremity, ur will I do you for his sake;
 k it not the worst of all your fortunes,
 are like to sir Vincentio.
 and credit shall you undertake,
 y house you shall be friendly lodg'd;—
 at you take upon you as you should;
 rstand me, sir;—so shall you stay ave done your business in the city:
 courtesy, sir, accept of it.
 , sir, I do; and will repute you ever of my life and liberty.
 hen go with me, to make the matter good.
 the way, I let you understand;—
 r is here look'd for every day, ssurance of a dower in marriage
 e and one Baptista's daughter here:
 se circumstances I'll instruct you:
 me, sir, to clothe you as becomes you.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A room in Petruchio's house.

Enter KATHARINA and GRUMIO.

o, no; forsooth; I dare not, for my life.
 The more my wrong, the more his spite wears:
 d he marry me to famish me?
 that come unto my father's door,
 eaty, have a present alms;
 elsewhere they meet with charity:

But I,—who never knew how to entreat,
 Nor never needed that I should entreat,—
 Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
 With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed:
 And that, which spites me more than all these wants,
 He does it under name of perfect love;
 As who should say,—if I should sleep, or eat,
 'Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.—
 I pr'ythee go, and get me some repast;
 I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Grumio. What say you to a neat's foot?

Kath. 'Tis passing good; I pr'ythee let me have it.

Grumio. I fear, it is too choleric a meat:—

How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?

Kath. I like it well; good Grumio, fetch it me.

Grumio. I cannot tell; I fear, 'tis choleric.

What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?

Kath. A dish, that I do love to feed upon.

Grumio. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Kath. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.

Grumio. Nay, then I will not; you shall have the mustard,

Or else you get no beef of Grumio.

Kath. Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Grumio. Why, then the mustard without the beef.

Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave,

[Beats him.]

That feed'st me with the very name of meat:
 Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,
 That triumph thus upon my misery!
 Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter PETRUCHIO with a dish of meat; and HORTENSIO.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amourt?

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?

Kath. 'Faith, as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.
 Here, love; thou see'st how diligent I am,
 To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee:

[Sets the dish on a table.]

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.
 What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not;
 And all my pains is sorted to no proof:—
 Here, take away this dish.

Kath.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks;
 And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, sir.

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame!
 Come, mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st me.—

[Aside.]

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
 Kate, eat apace:—And now, my honey love,
 Will we return unto thy father's house;
 And revel it as bravely as the best,
 With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
 With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things;
 With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,
 With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.
 What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure,
 To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown.—What news with you, sir?

Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a porringer;

A velvet dish;—fie, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy:

Why, 'tis a cockle, or a walnutshell,

A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap;

Away with it, come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time,

And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,

And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste. [Aside.]

Kath. Why, sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak;

And speak I will; I am no child, no babe;

Your betters have endur'd me say my mind;

And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears;

My tongue will tell the anger of my heart;

Or else my heart, concealing it, will break:

T

And, rather than it shall, I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap,
A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie:
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap;
And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown? why, ay:—Come, tailor, let us see't.

O mercy, God! what masking stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon:
What! up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?
Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and slash, and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop!

Why, what o'devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?
Hor. I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remember'd,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir:
I'll none of it; hence, make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread,

Thou thimble,
Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail,
Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou:—
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread!
Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant;
Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!
I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?

Gru. Thou hast faced many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast braved many men;
brave not me; I will neither be faced nor braved.

I say unto thee,—I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.
Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lies in his throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. Inprimis, a loose-bodied gown:

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, saw me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said, a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. With a small compassed cape;

Gru. I confess the cape.

Tai. With a trunk sleeve;—

Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.

Pet. Ay, there's the villany.

Gru. Error i'the bill, sir; error i'the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true, that I say; an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the hill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i'the right, sir; 'tis for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my mister's gown for thy master's use!

Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?
Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for:

Take up my mistress' gown to his master's O, fie, fie, fie!

Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the paid:—

Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow.
Take no unkindness of his hasty words:

Away, I say; commend me to thy master.
[Exit Hortensio.]

Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unfather's,

Even in these honest mean habiliments;
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor.

For 'tis the mind, that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest

So honour peareth in the meanest habit.

What, is thy joy more precious than the leaf
Because his feathers are more beautiful?

Or is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?

O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the wolf
For this poor furniture, and mean array.

If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me:
And therefore, frolick; we will hence forth

To feast and sport us at thy father's house
Go, call my men, and let us straight to him

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,
There will we mount, and thither walk on

Let's see; I think, 'tis now some seven o'clock.
And well we may come there by dinner time.

Kath. I dare assure you, sir, 'tis almost
And 'twill be supper time, ere you come to.

Pet. It shall be seven, ere I go to horse
Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do

You are still crossing it.—Sirs, let's alone
I will not go to-day; and ere I do,

It shall be what o'clock I say it is.
Hor. Why, so! this gallant will come sun.

SCENE IV.

Padua. Before Baptista's house.

Enter TRANIO, and the Pedant dressed
VINCENTIO.Tra. Sir, this is the house; Please it
I call?Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceiv'd, Signior Baptista may remember me.
Near twenty years ago, in Genoa, where We were lodgers at the Pegasus.Tra. 'Tis well.
And hold your own, in any case, with su-
Austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Ped. I warrant you: But, sir, here comes 'Twere good, he were school'd.Tra. Fear you not him. Sirrah, Biond-
Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you

Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut! fear not me.Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to-Bion. I told him, that your father was at

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow; hold thee that Here comes Baptista:—set your countenance

Enter BAPTISTA and LUCENTIO.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met:—
Sir, [to the Pedant.]
This is the gentleman I told you of;
I pray you, stand good father to me now,

Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, son!—
Sir, by your leave; having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself
And,—for the good report I hear of you;
And for the love he beareth to your daughter
And she to him,—to stay him not too long
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him match'd: and,—if you please
No worse than I, sir,—upon some agreement
Me shall you find most ready and most wifely

With one consent to have her so bestow'd us I cannot be with you, Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

sir, pardon me in what I have to say;—
iness, and your shortness, please me well.
e it is, your son Lucentio here
e my daughter, and she loveth him, dissemble deeply their affections:
efore, if you say no more than this,
a father you will deal with him,
my daughter a sufficient dower,
h is fully made, and all is done:
shall have my daughter with consent.
thank you, sir.—Where then do you know

med; and such assurance ta'en, with either part's agreement stand?
ot in my house, Lucentio; for, you know, have ears, and I have many servants:
old Gremio is heark'ning still;
ply, we might be interrupted.
hen at my lodging, an it like you, sir:
th my father lie; and there, this night,
as the business privately and well:
your daughter by your servant here,
hall fetch the scrivener presently.
tis this,—that, at so slender warning,
to have a thin and slender pittance.
likes me well:—Cambio, hie you home, Bianca make her ready straight;
ou will, tell what hath happened:—
s father is arriv'd in Padua, she's like to be Lucentio's wife.
pray the gods she may, with all my heart!
ally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
aptista, shall I lead the way?
! one mess is like to be your cheer:
; we'll better it in Pisa.

I follow you.

[Exeunt Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.]
Cambio,—What say'st thou, Biondello?
ou saw my master wink and laugh upon ? Biondello, what of that?
Faith nothing; but he has left me here
; expound the meaning or moral of his tokens.
pray thee, moralize them.
hen thus. Baptista is safe, talking with ing father of a deceitful son.
od what of him?
His daughter is to be brought by you to supper.
od then?—
The old priest at St. Luke's church is at mand at all hours.
od what of all this?
cannot tell; except they are busied about bit assurance: Take you assurance of her, legio ad imprimendum solum: to the church;
priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest not that you look for, I have no more to say, Bianca farewell for ever and a day. [Going.] ear'st thou, Biondello?
cannot tarry: I knew a wench married erocoon as she went to the garden for stuff a rabbit; and so may you, sir; and sir. My master hath appointed me to go ke's, to bid the priest be ready to come n come with your appendix. [Exit.] may, and will, if she be so contented:
e pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt?
o hap may, I'll roundly go about her;
o hard, if Cambio go without her. [Exit.]

SCENE V.

A public road.

PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and HORTENSIO.

me on, o' God's name; once more towards father's.
d, how bright and goodly shines the moon!
he moon! the sun; it is not moonlight now?
ay it is the moon, that shines so bright.

Kath. I know, it is the sun, that shines so bright.

Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself,
It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house:—
Go on, and fetch our horses back again.—
Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; nothing but cross'd!

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,
And be it moon, or sun, or what you please:
And if you please to call it a rush candle,
Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say, it is the moon.

Kath. I know it is.

Pet. Nay, then you lie; it is the blessed sun.

Kath. Then God be bless'd, it is the blessed sun.—
But sun it is not, when you say it is not;
And the moon changes, even as your mind.
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is;
And so it shall be so, for Katharine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways; the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward: thus the bowl should run,
And not unluckily against the bias.—
But soft; what company is coming here?

Enter VINCENTIO, in a travelling dress.

Good-morrow, gentle mistress: Where away?—
[To Vincentio.]

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher gentleman?
Such war of white and red within her cheeks!
What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?—
Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee:—
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet,

Whither away; or where is thy abode?

Happy the parents of so fair a child;

Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

Pet. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad:

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd;

And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes,

That have been so bedazzled with the sun,

That every thing I look on seemeth green:

Now I perceive, thou art a reverend father;

Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire: and, withal, make known

Which way thou travellest: if along with us,

We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir,—and you my merry mistress,

That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me;

My name is call'd—Vincentio; my dwelling—Pisa:

And bound I am to Padua; there to visit

A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name?

Vin.

Lucentio, gentle sir.

Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son.

And now by law, as well as reverend age,

I may entitle thee—my loving father;

The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,

Thy son by this hath married: Wonder not,

Nor be not griev'd; she is of good esteem,

Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;

Beside, so qualified as may beseech

The spouse of any noble gentleman.

Let me embrace with old Vincentio:

And wander we to see thy honest son.

Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Vin. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,

Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest

Upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof;

For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.

[Exeunt Petruchio, Katharina, and Vincentio.]

Hor. Well, Petruchio, this hath put me in heart.

Have to my widow, and if she be froward,

Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward.

[Exit.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Padua. Before Lucentio's house.

Enter on one side BIONDELLO, LUCENTIO, and BIANCA; GREMIO walking on the other side.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello: but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.

Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back; and then come back to my master as soon as I can.

[Exeunt Lucentio, Bianca, and Biondello.]

Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, VINCENTIO, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house. My father's bears more toward the market-place; Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go; I think, I shall command your welcome here, And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward. [Knocks.]

Gre. They're busy within, you had best knock louder.

Enter Pedant above, at a window.

Ped. What's he, that knocks as if he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is signior Lucentio within, sir?

Ped. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself; he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you, your son was beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances,—I pray you, tell signior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest; his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pet. Why, how now, gentleman! [To Vincen.] why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain; I believe, 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together; God send 'em good shipping!—But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio? now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither, crack-hemp.

[Seeing Biondello.]

Bion. I hope I may choose, sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue; What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you? no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? [Beats Biondello.]

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me. [Exit.]

Ped. Help, son! help, signior Baptista!

[Exit, from the window.]

Pet. Pr'ythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.]

Re-enter Pedant below; BAPTISTA, TRANIO, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sir? nay, what are you, sir?—O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet elook!—and a copatain hat!

—O, I am undone! I am undone! while I good husband at home, my son and my spend all at the university.

Tra. How now! what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatick?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you another man: Why, sir, what concerns it you, if he wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I will maintain it.

Vin. Thy father? O, villain! he is a scoundrel in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir; what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name? as if I knew not his name, have brought him up ever since he was the old, and his name is—Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Vincentio; and he is mine only son, and he is lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! O, he hath murdered him!—Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the name:—O, my son, my son!—tell me, I pray, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer: [Enter one Officer.] carry this mad knave to the gaol: Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthwith.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison. Bap. Talk not, signior Gremio; I say, go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, signior Baptista, lest you be caught in this business; I dare swear it is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou darest.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say, that I am Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard; to the gaol!

Vin. Thus strangers may be hal'd and—O monstrous villain!

Re-enter BIONDELLO, with LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

Bion. O, we are spoiled, and—Yond deny him, forswear him, or else we are a beggar.

Luc. Pardon, sweet father.

Vin. Lives my sweet son?

[Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant.]

Bian. Pardon, dear father.

Bap. How hast thou of it?

Where is Lucentio? Here's Lucentio, Right son unto the right Vincentio; That have by marriage made thy daughter While counterfeit supposes hear'd thine

Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake

Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that we sent me to the gaol.

Bap. But do you hear, sir? [To Lucentio.] you married my daughter without asking my consent?

Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you: But I will it, to be revenged for this

Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father frown. [Exeunt Luc. & Bianca.]

1. My cake is dough : But I'll in among the rest ;
f hope of all,—but my share of the feast. [Exit.]

ETRUCHIO and KATHARINA advance.

1. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

1. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

1. What, in the midst of the street ?

1. What, art thou ashamed of me ?

1. No, sir ; God forbid :—but ashamed to kiss.

1. Why, then let's home again :—Come, sirrah, let's away.

1. Nay, I will give thee a kiss : now pray thee, love, stay.

1. Is not this well ?—Come, my sweet Kate ;
once than never, for never too late. [Exeunt.]

Therefore, a health to all, that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O, sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,

Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something currish.

Tra. 'Tis well, sir, that you bunted for yourself ;

'Tis thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that girl, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here ?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess ;

And, as the jest did glance away from me,

'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,

I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say—no: and therefore, for assurance,

Let's each one send unto his wife ;

And he, whose wife is most obedient

To come at first, when he doth send for her,

Shall win the wager, which we will propose.

Hor. Content :—what is the wager ?

Luc. Twenty crowns. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns !

I'll venture so much on my hawk, or bound,

But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred, then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match ; 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin ?

Luc. That will I. Go,

Biondello, bid your mistress come to me. [Exit.]

Bion. I go.

Bap. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves ; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

How now ! what news ?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word

That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Pet. How ! she is busy, and she cannot come !

Is that an answer ?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too :

Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope, better.

Hor. Sirrah, Biondello, go, and entreat my wife

To come to me forthwith. [Exit Biondello.]

Pet. O, ho ! entreat her !

Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, sir,

Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Now, where's my wife ?

Bion. She says, you have some goodly jest in hand ;

She will not come ; she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse ; she will not come ! O vile,

Intolerable, not to be endur'd !

Sirrah, Grumio, go to your mistress ;

Say, I command her come to me. [Exit Grumio.]

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What ?

Hor. She will not come.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter KATHARINA.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina !

Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me ?

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife ?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go, fetch them hither ; if they deny to come,

Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands :

Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit Katharina.]

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is ; I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,

An awful rule, and right supremacy ;

And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.

Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio !

The wager thou hast won, and I will add

Unto thy losses twenty thousand crowns ;

Another dowry to another daughter,

For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet ;

And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter KATHARINA, with BIANCA and Widow.

See, where she comes; and brings your froward wives

As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.—

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not;

Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[Katharina pulls off her cap, and throws it down.]

Wid. Lord, let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?

Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too:

The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper
time.

Bian. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.

Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women

What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say, she shall;—and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that threat'ning unkind brow;

And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:

It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the meads;

Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds;

And in no sense is meet or amiable.

A woman mov'd, is like a fountain troubled,

Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;

And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty

Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,

Thy head, thy sovereign; one, that cares for thee

And for thy maintenance: commits his body

To painful labour, both by sea and land;

To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,

While thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands,

But love, fair looks, and true obedience;

Too little payment for so great a debt.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince,

Even such, a woman oweth to her husband;

And, when she's froward, peevish, sullen,

And not obedient to his honest will,

What is she, but a foul contending rebel,

And graceless traitor to her loving lord?—

I am asham'd that women are so simple

To offer war, where they should kneel for peace;

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,

When they are bound to serve, love, and obey!

Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and un-

Unapt to toil and trouble in the world;

But that our soft conditions, and our hearts

Should well agree with our external parts?

Come, come, you froward and unable wench,

My mind hath been as big as one of yours,

My heart as great; my reason, haply, more

To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;

But now, I see, our lances are but straws;

Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare;

That seeming to be most, which we least are.

Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot;

And place your hands below your husband's

In token of which duty, if he please,

My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pet. Why, there's a wench!—Come on, I me, Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thy

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Sicilia. An antechamber in Leontes' palace.

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia on the like occasion, whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Cam. 'Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence— is so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepy drinks; that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Hence their more mature dignities, and royal necessities, made separation of their society, their entertainments, though not personal, have been royally attended, with interchange of gifts, letters, loving ambassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it. You have an unpeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius; it is a gentleman of the greatest promise, that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physicians the subject, makes old hearts fresh: they, that vent on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes, if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches, till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room of state in the palace.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, CAMILLO, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the wat'ry star have been The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne Without a burden: time as long again Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks; And yet we should, for perpetuity, Go hence in debt: And therefore, like a cipher, Yet standing in rich place, I multiply, With one we thank-you, many thousands more, That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile; And pay them, when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow. I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance, Or breed upon our absence: That may blow No sneaping winds at home, to make us say, This is put forth too truly! Besides, I have stay'd To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother, Than you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between's then: and in that I'll no gain-saying.

Pol. Press me not, 'beseech you so; There is no tongue, that moves, none, none i' the world,

So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now, Were there necessity in your request, although 'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs

Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder Were, in your love, a whip to me; my stay To you a charge and trouble: to save both, Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace, until

You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay.

You, sir,

Charge him too coldly: Tell him, you are sure, All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction

The by-gone day proclaim'd; say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leon.

Well said, Hermione.
Her. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strong;
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thrack him hence with distaffs.—
Yet of your royal presence [To Polixenes.] I'll adventure

The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission,
To let him there a month, behind the gest
Prefix'd for his parting: yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord.—You'll stay?

Pol.

No, madam.

Her.

Nay, but you will? I may not, verily.

Pol.

Verily!
You put me off with limber vows: But I, Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with
oaths,
Should yet say, Str, no going. Verily,
You shall not go; a lady's verily is
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees,
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner? or my guest? by your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.

Pol.

Your guest then, madam:
To be your prisoner, should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit,
Than you to punish.

Her.

Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys;
You were pretty lordlings then.

Pol.

We were, fair queen,
Two lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her.

Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two?
Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs, that did frisk i'the sun,

And bleat the one at the other: what we chang'd,
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, no, nor dream'd
That any did: Had we pursued that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd
heaven

Boldly, Not guilty; the imposition clear'd, Hereditary ours.

Her.

By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since. O my most sacred lady, Temptations have since then been born to us: for
In those unfeign'd days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young play-fellow.

Her.

Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion; lest you say,
Your queen and I are devils: Yet, go on;
The offences we have made you do, we'll answer;
If you first sin'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not
With any but with us.

Leon.

Is he won yet?
Her. He'll stay, my lord.
Leon. At my request, he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her.

Never?
Leon. Never, but once.
Her. What? have I twice said well? when was't before?

I pry'thee tell me: Cram us with praise, and make us

As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongue-less,

Slaughters a thousand, waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages: You may ride us
With one soft kiss, a thousand furlongs, ere With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal;—

My last good deed was, to entreat his stay
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you; O, would her name were But once before I spoke to the purpose: W
Nay, let me have't; I long.

death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand
And clap thyself my love; then didst thou

Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the twice:

The one for ever earn'd a royal husband;

In that, which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord !
Leon. To bide upon't ;—Thou art not honest : or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward ;
Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd : Or else thou must be counted
A servant, grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent ; or else a fool,
That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful ;
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth : In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly ; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end ; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted, Whereof the execution did cry out Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft affects the wisest : these, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of. But, beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me ; let me know my trespass
By its own visage : if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leon. Have not you seen, Camillo, (But that's past doubt : you have ; or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn ;) or heard, (For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute,) or thought, (for cogitation Resides not in that man, that does not think it,)
My wife is slippery ? If thou wilt confess, (Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought,) then say,
My wife's a hobbyhorse ; deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench, that puts to Before her troth-pledge : say it, and justify it.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken : 'Shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less Than this ; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing ?
Is leaning cheek to cheek ? is meeting noses ?
Kissing with inside lip ? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh ? (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty ;) horsing foot on foot ?
Skulking in corners ? wishing clocks more swift ?
Hours, minutes ? noon, midnight ? and all eyes blind
With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked ? Is this nothing ?
Why, then the world, and all that's in't is nothing ;
The covering sky is nothing ; Bohemia nothing ;
My wife is nothing ; nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this disease'd opinion, and betimes ;
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say, it be ; 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is ; you lie, you lie :
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee ;
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave ;
Or else a hovering temporizer, that Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both : Were my wife's liver Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Cam. Who does infect her ?
Leon. Why he, that wears her like her medal, hanging

About his neck, Bohemia : Who—if I Had servants true about me : that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts,—they would do that,

Which should undo more doing: Ay, and thou,
His cup-bearer,—whom I from meager form
Have bench'd and rear'd to worship; who may'st see Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled,—might'st bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this; and that with no rash potion,
But with a ling'ring dram, that should not work Maliciously like poison: But I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee,—

Leon. Make't thy question, and go rot!
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve, is sleep; which being spotted,
Is goods, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps?
Give scandal to the blood o' the prince my son,
Who I do think is mine, and love as mine;
Without ripe moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir;
I do: and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that, when he's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first;
Even for your son's sake; and, thereby, for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen: I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'st thine own.

Cam. I'll do't, my lord.
Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. [Exit.]

Cam. O miserable lady!—But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes: and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All, that are his, so too.—To do this deed, Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't: but since Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not one,

Let villainy itself forswear't. I must Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter POLIXENES.

Pol. This is strange! methinks,
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak!—
Good-day, Camillo.

Cam. Hail, most royal sir!

Pol. What is the news i'the court?

Cam. None rare, my lord.

Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region,
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment: when he,
Wasting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me; and
So leaves me, to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.

Pol. How! dare not? do not. Do you know, and dare not

Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must;
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang'd too: for I must be A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with it.

Cam. There is a sick Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease; and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of

Cam. I may not answer

Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I
I must be answer'd.—Dost thou hear, Cam?
I conjure thee by all the parts of man,
Which honour does acknowledge,—whereof
Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare
What incidence thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.

Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him
That I think honourable: Therefore, mark my

Pol. On, good Cam!

Cam. I am appointed Him to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.

Pol. He thinks, nay, with all confidence
As he had seen't, or been an instrument
To vice you to't,—that you have touch'd Forbiddenly.

Pol. O, then my best blood turn

As or, by oath, remove, or counsel, shake
The fabrick of his folly; whose foundation

The standing of his body.

Pol. How should't

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The same.

HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Take the boy to you : he so troubles me, t enduring.

t. Come, my gracious lord, be your play-fellow ?

t. No, I'll none of you.

t. Why, my sweet lord ?

You'll kiss me hard ; and speak to me as if a baby still.—I love you better.

t. And why so, my good lord ?

Not for because
 ows are blacker ; yet black brows, they say, some women best ; so that there be not h hair there, but in a semi-circle, moon made with a pen.

t. Who taught you this ?
 I learn'd it out of women's faces.—Pray now lour are your eye-brows ?

t. Blue, my lord.

Nay, that's a mock : I have seen a lady's nose's been blue, but not her eye-brows.

t. Hark ye :
 en, your mother, rounds apace ; we shall our services to a fine new prince, these days ; and then you'd wanton with us,
 ould have you.

t. She is spread of late odly bulk : Good time encounter her !
 What wisdom stirs amongst you ? Come,

t. now

you again : Pray you, sit by us,

's a tale.

t. Merry, or sad, shall't be ?

us merry as you will.

t. A sad tale's best for winter :

se of sprites and goblins.

t. Let's have that, sir.

4 sit down :—Come on, and do your best

t me with your sprites : you're powerful it.

There was a man,—

t. Nay, come, sit down ; then on.

Dwelt by a church-yard ;—I will tell it fly ;

kets shall not hear it.

t. Come on then,

't me in mine ear.

ONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords and others.

Was he met there ? his train ? Camillo

th him ?

t. Behind the tuft of pines I met them ; never en scour so on their way : I ey'd them their ships.

t. How bless'd am I ust censure ? in my true opinion ?—

r lesser knowledge !—How accurs'd,

so blest !—There may be in the cup steep'd, and one may drink ; depart, partake no venom ; for his knowledge

fect'd : but if one present rr'd ingredient to his eye, make known bath drank, he cracks his gorge, his sides, dent hefts :—I have drank, and seen the ider.

t. Was his help in this, his pandar :—

a plot against my life, my crown ;

e, that is mistrusted :—that false villain, employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him :

liscover'd my design, and I a pinch'd thing ; yea, a very trick to play at will :—How came the posterns open ?

1 Lord. By his great authority ;
 Which often hath no less prevail'd than so,
 On your command.

Leon. I know't too well.—
 Give me the boy ; I am glad you did not nurse him :
 Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
 Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this ? sport ?

Leon. Bear the boy hence, he shall not come about her ;

Away with him !—and let her sport herself
 With that, she's big with ; for 'tis Polixenes Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say, he had not,
 And, I'll be sworn, you would believe my saying,
 Howe'er you lean to the nayward.

Leon. You, my lords,
 Look on her, mark her well ; be but about
 To say, she is a goodly lady, and

The justice of your hearts will thereto add,

'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable :

Praise her but for this her without-door form, (Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,) and straight

The shrug, the hum, or ha ; these petty brands,
 That calumny doth use :—O, I am out,
 That mercy does ; for calumny will fear
 Virtue itself :—these shrugs, these hums, and ha's,
 When you have said, she's goodly, come between,
 Ere you can say, she's honest : But he it known
 From him, that has most cause to grieve it should be,
 She's an adulteress.

Her. Should a villain say so,
 The most replenish'd villain in the world,
 He were as much more villain : you, my lord,
 Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady,
 Polixenes for Leontes : O thou thing,
 Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
 Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,
 Should a like language use to all degrees,
 And mannerly distinction leave out
 Betwixt the prince and beggar !—I have said, She's an adulteress ; I have said with whom :

More, she's a traitor ; and Camillo is A federaly with her ; and one, that knows
 What she should shame to know herself,
 But with her most vile principal, that she's A bed-swarver, even as bad as those,
 That vulgarly give hold titles ; ay, and privy
 To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life,
 Privy to none of this : How will this grieve you,
 When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that You thus have publish'd me ! Gentle my lord,
 You scarce can right me thoroughly then, to say
 You did mistake.

Leon. No, no ; if I mistake
 In those foundations which I build upon,
 The centre is not big enough to bear
 A school-boy's top.—Away with her to prison !
 He, who shall speak for her, is afar off guilty,
 But that he speaks.

Her. There's some ill planet reigns :
 I must be patient, till the heavens look
 With an aspect more favourable.—Good my lords,
 I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
 Commonly are ; the want of which vain dew, Perchance, shall dry your pities : but I have
 That honourable grief lodg'd here, which burns
 Worse than tears drown'd : ' Beseech you all, my lords,
 With thoughts so qualified as your charities Shall best instruct you, measure me ;—and so
 The king's will be perform'd !

Leon. Shall I be heard ?

[To the Guards.

Her. Who is't, that goes with me?—'Beseech your highness,

My women may be with me; for, you see, My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools; There is no cause: when you shall know your mistress

Has deserv'd a prison, then abound in tears, As I come out: this action, I now go on, Is for my better grace.—Adieu, my lord: I never wish'd to see you sorry; now, I trust, I shall.—My women, come; you have leave. Leon. Go, do our bidding; hence.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]
1 Lord. 'Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sir; lest your justice Prove violence; in the which three great ones suffer, Yourself, your queen, your son.

1 Lord. For her, my lord,— I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir, Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless I'the eyes of heaven, and to you; I mean, In this, which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables, where I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her; Than when I feel, and see her, no further trust her; For every inch of woman in the world, Ay, every dram of woman's flesh, is false, If she be.

Leon. Hold your peace.

1 Lord. Good my lord,—

Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves: You are abus'd, and by some putter-on, That will be damn'd for't; 'would I knew the villain, I would land-damn him: Be she honour-flaw'd,— I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven! The second, and the third, nine, and some five; If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honour, I'll geld them all; fourteen they shall not see, To bring false generations: they are co-heirs; And I had rather glib myself, than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon. Cease; no more.

You smell this business with a sense as cold As is a dead man's nose: I see't, and feel't, As you feel doing thus; and see withal The instruments, that feel.

Ant. If it be so,

We need no grave to bury honesty; There's not a grain of it, the face to sweeten Of the whole dungy earth.

Leon. What! lack I credit?

1 Lord. I had rather you did lack, than I, my lord,

Upon this ground: and more it would content me To have her honour true, than your suspicion; Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leon. Why, what need we Commune with you of this? but rather follow Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative Calls not your counsels; but our natural goodness Imparts this: which,—if you (or stupified, Or seeming so in skill,) cannot, or will not, Relish as truth, like us; inform yourselves, We need no more of your advice: the matter, The loss, the gain, the ordering on't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege, You had only in your silent judgment tried it, Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be?

Either thou art most ignorant by age, Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight, Added to their familiarity, (Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture, That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation, But only seeing, all other circumstances Made up to the deed,) doth push on this proceeding: Yet, for a greater confirmation, (For, in an act of this importance, 'twere Most piteous to be wild,) I have despatch'd in post, To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple, Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know Of stuff'd sufficiency: Now, from the oracle They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,

Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well? 1 Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied, and need Than what I know, yet shall the oracle Give rest to the minds of others; such as Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth: So have we thought From our free person she should be confin'd Lest that the treachery of the two, fled he Be left her to perform. Come, follow us; We are to speak in publick: for this busin Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it, If the good truth were known.

other Attendants.

Nor night, nor day, nor rest: It is but

How does the boy?

He took good rest to-night;

Enter PAULINA, with a Child.

You must not enter.
Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me:
u his tyrannous passion more, alas,

ee, than he is jealous.

That's enough.

Madam, he hath not slept to-night;

Not so hot, good sir;

his needless heavings,—such as you as either; to purge him of that humour, esses him from sleep.

What noise there, ho?
No noise, my lord; but needful conference, ome gossips for your highness.

How?—

That audacious lady! Antigonus, d thee, that she should not come about me;
she would.

I told her so, my lord,

On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leon.

What, caust not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty, he can: in this, (Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me, for committing honour,) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Ant.

Lo you now; you hear!
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.

Paul

Good my liege, I come,—
And, I beseech you, hear me, who profess Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor; yet that dare
Less appear so, in comforting your evils, Than such as most seem yours:—I say, I come From your good queen.

Leon.

Good queen!
Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say,
good queen;
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.

Leon.

Force her hence.
Paul. Let him, that makes but trifles of his eyes,
First hand me: on mine own accord, I'll off;
But, first, I'll do my errand.—The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter;
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing.

[Laying down the Child.]

Leon.

A manking witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelligencing bawd!

Paul.

Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entitling me: and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon.

Traitors!
Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard:—
Thou, dotard, [To Antigonus.] thou art womantir'd, unroosted

By thy dame Partlet here,—take up the bastard;
Take't up, I say; give't to thy crone.

Paul.

For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess by that forced baseness,
Which he has put upon't!

Leon.

He dreads his wife.
Paul. So, I would, you did; then, 'twere past all doubt,

You'd call your children yours.

Leon.

A nest of traitors!
Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul.

Nor I; nor any,
But one, that's here; and that's himself: for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander, Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not

(For, as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compell'd to't,) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten,
As ever oak, or stone, was sound.

Leon.

A callat,
Of boundless tongue; who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me!—This brat is none of mine;
It is the issue of Polixenes:
Hence with it; and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul.

It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse.—Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of his frown, his forehead; nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin, and cheek; his smiles;
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger:—
And, thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him, that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours
No yellow in't; lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's!

Leon.

A gross hag!
And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That will not stay her tongue.

U

Ant. Hang all the husbands,
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

Leon. I'll have thee burn'd.
Paul. I care not:

It is an heretick that makes the fire,
Not she, which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation Than your own weak-hing'd fancy,) something savours

Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!

Paul. I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove send her

A better guiding spirit!—What need these hands?—
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so:—Farewell; we are gone. [Exit.]

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this.—
My child? away with't!—even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire;
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimony,) or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine: If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire;
For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

I Lord. We can; my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leon. You are liars all.

I Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better credit:
We have always truly serv'd you; and beseech
So to esteem us: And on our knees we beg,
(As recompense of our dear services, Past, and to come,) that you do change this purpose;
Which, being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue: we all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows:—
Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? Better burn it now, Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:
It shall not neither.—You, sir, come you hither;
[To Antigonus.]

You, that have been so tenderly officious
With lady Margery, your midwife, there,
To save this bastard's life:—for 'tis a base
So sure as this beard's grey,—what will venture

To save this brat's life?

Ant. Any thing, my lord
That his ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose: at least, thus much I'll pawn the little blood, which I have left
To save the innocent: any thing possible.

Leon. It shall be possible: Swear by thy Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord.

Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are bot
Hasting to the court.

I Lord. So please you, sir, t

Leon. Twenty-thre
They have been absent: 'Tis good speed
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear. Prepare you, Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady: for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave
And think upon my bidding.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. A street in some town.

Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate's delicate; the air most sweet;
Fertile the isle: the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits,
(Methinks, I so should term them), and the reverence
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was, i'th' offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst
And the ear-deafening voice o'the oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense,
That I was nothing.

Dion. If the event o'the journey
Prove as successful to the plean,—O, be't so!—
As it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo,
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,

So forcing falls upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it Will clear, or end, the business: When (Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up, Shall the contents discover, something ra Even then will rush to knowledge.— horses;—
And gracious be the issue!

SCENE II.

The same. A court of justice.

LEONTES, Lords, and Officers, appear seated.

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief nounce),
Even pushes 'gainst our heart: The party
The daughter of a king; our wife; and o
Of us too much belov'd.—Let us be clear
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly Proceed in justice; which shall have due
Even to the guilt, or the purgation.—

It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen in person here in court.—Silence!
HERMIONE is brought in guarded; PAULINA and Ladies, attending.

Read the indictment.
Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicily, thou art here accused and arraigned of treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia; and conspiring with Camillo to overthrow the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy lawful husband: the pretence whereof being by thy own stances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, considering the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to do so by night.

Since what I am to say, must be but that,
 Which I contradict my accusation; and my testimony on my part, no other can come from myself; it shall scarce boot me to plead Not guilty: mine integrity is counted falsehood, shall, as I express it, receive'd. But thus,—If powers divine govern our human actions, (as they do,) I am not then, but innocence shall make my accusation blush, and tyranny praise me silent. —You, my lord, best know, how much I have loved you, and how much I have esteem'd you, and how much I have lov'd you, as a continent, as chaste, as true, as a new unhappy; which is more than my story can pattern, though devis'd, to take spectators: For behold me,— A daughter of the royal bed, which owe its duty to the throne, a great king's daughter, betroth'd to a hopeful prince,—here standing,
 to be sold and talk for life, and honour, 'fore
 I have pleas'd to come and hear. For life, I prize it high grief, which I would spare: for honour,
 I would give it up. —I am, my lord, derivative from me to mine, and I stand for, I appeal to my own conscience, sir, before Polixenes your court, how I was in your grace.
 I was invited to be so; since he came,
 that encounter so uncurrent I rain'd, to appear thus: if one jot beyond and of honour; or, in act, or will,
 'gainst you inclining; harden'd be the hearts that hear me, and my near'st of kin that stand upon my grave!

I ne'er heard yet,
 of these bolder vices wanted audience to ginsay what they did, perform it first.

That's true enough;
 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.
 You will not own it.

More than mistress of,
 comes to me in name of fault, I must not knowledge. For Polixenes, whom I am accus'd, I do confess, as in honour he requir'd, such a kind of love, as might become like me; with a love, even such,
 as no other, as yourself commanded:
 that to have done, I think, had been in me obedience and ingratitude and toward your friend; whose love had been, as it could speak, from an infant, freely, was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
 I do not know how it tastes; though it be dish'd to try how: all I know of it, Camillo was an honest man;
 who he left your court, the gods themselves,
 no more than I, are ignorant.
 You knew of his departure, as you know
 I have underta'en to do in his absence.
 I am, my lord, a language, that I understand not:
 stands in the level of your dreams,
 'll lay down.

Your actions are my dreams;
 a bastard by Polixenes, dream'd it.—As you were past all shame,
 your fact are so,) so past all truth:

Which to deny, concerns more than avails:
 For as
 Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
 No father owning it, (which is, indeed,
 More criminal in thee than it) so thou Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage,
 Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats;
 The bug, which you would fright me with, I seek.
 To me can life be no commodity:
 The crown and comfort of my life, your favour,
 I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,
 But know not how it went: My second joy,
 And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
 I am barr'd, like one infectious: My third comfort,
 Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast,
 The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
 Haled out to murder: Myself on every post
 Proclaim'd a strumpet; With immodest hatred,
 The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
 To women of all fashion;—lastly, hurried
 Here to this place, i'th' open air, before
 I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
 Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
 That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
 But yet hear this; mistake me not;—No! life,
 I prize it not a straw:—but for mine honour,
 (Which I would free,) if I shall be condemn'd
 Upon surmises; all proofs sleeping else,
 But what your jealousies awake; I tell you,
 'Tis rigour, and not law.—Your honours all,
 I do refer me to the oracle;
 Apollo be my judge.

1 Lord. This your request
 Is altogether just: therefore, bring forth,
 And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt certain Officers.]
Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:
 O, that he were alive, and here beholding
 His daughter's trial! that he did but see
 The flatness of my misery; yet with eyes
 Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with CLEOMENES and DION.

Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,
 That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought
 This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
 Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
 You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
 Nor read the secrets in't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.
Leon. Break up the seals, and read.
Off. [Reads.] Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that, which is lost, be not found.

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Prais'd!
Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Off. Ay, my lord; even so
 As it is here set down.
Leon. There is no truth at all i'the oracle:
 The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, hastily.

Serv. My lord the king, the king!
Leon. What is the business?

Serv. O sir, I shall be hated to report it:
 The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
 Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone?

Serv. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry; and the heavens themselves

Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione faints.] How now there?

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen:—Look down,

And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:
 Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover.—
 I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion
 'Beseech you, tenderly apply to her

Some remedies for life.—Apollo, pardon

[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies with Herm.]

My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!—
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes;
New woo my queen; recall the good Camillo;
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy:
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command, though I with death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane,
And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest Unclasp'd my practice; quit his fortunes here,
Which you knew great; and to the certain hazard
Of all uncertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour.—How he glisters
Thorough my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter PAULINA.

Paul. Woe the while!
O, cut my lace: lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!

I Lord. What fit is this, good lady?
Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? What flaying? boiling,
In leads, or oils? what old, or newer torture
Must I receive; whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny Together working with thy jealousies,— Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine!—O, think, what they have done,
And then run mad, indeed; stark mad! for all Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant,
And damnable ungrateful: nor was't much,
Thou would'st have poison'd good Camillo's honour,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasser,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter,
To be or none, or little; though a devil
Would have shed water out of fire, ere don't:
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince; whose honourable thoughts (Thoughts high for one so tender,) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: But the last,—O, lords,
When I have said, cry, woe!—the queen, the queen,
The sweetest, dearest, creature's dead; and vengeance for't
Not dropp'd down yet.

I Lord. The higher powers forbid!
Paul. I say, she's dead; I'll swear't: if word,
nor oath,

Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring Tincture or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods.—But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things; for they are heavier Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on;
Thou canst not speak too much; I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.

I Lord. Say no more;
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
I'the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't;
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: Alas, I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman: he is touch'd
To the noble heart.—What's gone, and what's past
help,

Should be past grief: Do not receive affliction
At my petition, I beseech you; rather Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege;

Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool again
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your child;
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too: Take your patience to you
And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but When most the truth; which I receive much Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring To the dead bodies of my queen, and son:
One grave shall be for both; upon them sh
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual: Once a day I'll visi
The chapel, where they lie; and tears, she Shall be my recreation: So long as Nature will bear up with this exercise,
So long I daily vow to use it. Come,
And lead me to these sorrows.

Ant. Go thou away
I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o'the business.

My cabin, where I lay: thrice bow'd befo

Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,— Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying; and, for t
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,*

She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself; and thought
This was so, and no slumber. Dreams ar
Yet, for this once, yea, superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe,
Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
Either for life, or death, upon the earth
Of its right father.—Blossom, speed thee*

The day frowns more and more; thou art lik
A lullaby too rough: I never saw

Heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour!—
May I get aboard!—This is the chase; gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.

Enter an old Shepherd.

O, I would, there were no age between ten three and twenty; or that youth would sleep rest: for there is nothing in the between etting wenches with child, wronging the any, stealing, fighting.—Hark you now!—
Did any but these boiled brains of nineteen, two-and-twenty, hunt this weather? They scared away two of my best sheep; which, I the wolf will sooner fiod, than the master: if where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browsing
y. Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we [Taking up the child.] Mercy on's, a barne; pretty barne! A boy, or a child, I wonder?
ny one; a very pretty one! Sure, some scape-h I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-woman in the scape. This has been some work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-they were warmer, that got this, than the hing is here. I'll take it up for pity: yet I'll ill my son come; he hollaed but even now.
ho ho!

Enter Clown.

Hilloa, loa!
t. What, art so near? If thou'lt see a thing on when thou art dead and rotten, come
t. What ailst thou, man?
I have seen two such sights, by sea, and by —but I am not to say, it is a sea, for it is now y; betwixt the firmament and it, you cannot a bodkin's point.
t. Why, boy, how is it?
I would you did but see how it chafes, how s, how it takes up the shore! but that's not point: O, the most piteous cry of the poor sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em:
e ship boring the moon with her main-mast;
on swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd a cork into a hoghead. And then for the service.—To see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone; how he cried to me for help, and said, his name was Antigonus, a nobleman:—But to make an end of the ship:—to see how the sea flap-dragon'd it:—but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them:—and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea, or weather.

Shep. 'Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

Clow. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman; he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clow. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing. [Aside.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! Look thee here; take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see; it was told me, I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling:—
open't: What's within, boy?

Clow. You're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold!
all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with it, keep it close; home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still, requires nothing but secrecy.—Let my sheep go:—
Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clow. Go you the next way with your findings;
I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst, but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: If thou may'st discern by that, which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clow. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i'the ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy; and we'll do good deeds on't. [Exeunt.

ACT THE FOURTH.

Enter Time, as Chorus.

I,—that please some, try all; both joy,
and terror,
and had; that make, and unfold error,— ake upon me, in the name of Time, my wings. Impute it not a crime, or my swift passage, that I slide teen years, and leave the growth untried wide gap; since it is in my power throw law, and in one self-born hour t and o'erwhelm custom: Let me pass me I am, ere ancient'st order was, it is now received: I witness to ces, that brought them in: so shall I do freshest things now reigning; and make stale stering of this present, as my tale seems to it. Your patience this allowing, my glass; and give my scene such growing, had slept between. Leontes leaving ects of his fond jealousies; so grieving,
e shuts up himself; imagine me, spectators, that I now may be Bohemia; and remember well, oned a son o'the king's, which Florizel name to you; and with speed so pace lk of Perdita, now grown in grace with wood'ring: What of her ensues, ot prophesy; but let Time's news wn, when 'tis brought forth:—a shepherd's ughter,
at to her adheres, which follows after, argument of time: of this allow,
you have spent time worse ere now;
: yet, that Time himself doth say,
bes earnestly, you never may. [Exit.

SCENE I.

The same. A room in the palace of Polixenes.

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more im-portunate: 'tis a sickness, denying thee any thing;
a death, to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years, since I saw my country:
though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad,
I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me: to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so; which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made;
better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee:
thou, having made me businesses, which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done: which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot), to be more thankful to thee, shall be my study; and my profit therein, the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country Sicilia, pr'y'thee speak no more: whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen,
and children, are even now to be afresh lamented.
Say to me, when saw'st thou the prince Florizel my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them, when they have approved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince:
What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have, missingly, noted, he is of late much retired froth court; and is less frequent to his princely exercises, than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo; and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removedness: from whom I have this intelligence; That he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence. But, I fear the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place: where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity, I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A road near the Shepherd's cottage.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,—

With, hey! the doxy over the dale,—
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,—
With, hey! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!—
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,—
With, hey! with, hey! the thrush and the jay:—
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear?
The pale moon shines by night:
And when I wander here and there
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin budget;
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.

My traffick is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me, Autolycus; who, being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles: With die, and drab, I purchased this caparison; and my revenue is the silly cheat: Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway: beating, and hanging, are terrors to me; for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it.—A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clow. Let me see:—Every 'leven wether—tod's; every tod yields—pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn,—What comes the wool to?

Aut. If the springe hold, the cock's mine. [Aside.]
Clow. I cannot do't without counters.—Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar, five pound of currants: rice—What will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers: three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are some of them means and bases: but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden pies; mace,—dates,—none; that's out of my note: nutmegs, seven; a race, or two, of ginger; but that I may beg;—four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun.

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Groveling on the ground.]

Clow. I'the name of me,—
Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but of rags; and then, death, death!

Clow. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need o' rags to lay on thee, rather than have these.
Aut. O, sir, the loathsomeness of them me more than the stripes I have received; are mighty ones, and millions.

Clow. Alas, poor man! a million of beatings come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my and apparel ta'en from me, and these de things put upon me.

Clow. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man, sweet sir, a foot-man.
Clow. Indeed, he should be a foot-man, garments he hath left with thee; if this be man's coat, it hath seen very hot service. me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend hand. [Helping]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, oh!

Clow. Alas, poor soul.

Aut. O, good sir, softly, good sir: I feel my shoulder-blade is out.

Clow. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [Picks his pocket] sir, softly: you have done me a charitable Clow. Dost lack any money; I have a little for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you I have a kinsman not past three quarters of hence, unto whom I was going; I shall th money, or any thing I want. Offer me no I pray you; that kills my heart.

Clow. What manner of fellow was he that you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to with troly-m-dames: I knew him once as the prince; I cannot tell, good sir, for which virtues it was, but he was certainly whip of the court.

Clow. His vices, you would say; there's a whipped out of the court: they cherish it, it stay there; and yet it will no more but

Aut. Vices I would say, sir. I know it well: he hath been since an ape-bearer process-server, a bailiff; then he comp motion of the prodigal son, and married a wife within a mile where my land and liv and, having flown over many knavish pro he settled only in rogue: some call him Au

Clow. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, y haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.
Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that's th that put me into this apparel.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no I am false of heart that way; and that he warrant him.

Clow. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was stand, and walk: I will even take my leave and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clow. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.
Clow. Then fare thee well; I must go bu for our sheep-shearing.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir!—[Exit]
Your purse is not hot enough to purcha spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shea If I make not this cheat bring out another, shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, name put into the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily hent the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a mile-a.

SCENE III.

The same. A Shepherd's cottage.

Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA

Flo. These your unusual weeds to each pa live a life: no shepherdess; but Flora, King in April's front. This your sheep-shearing is a meeting of the petty gods, and you the queen on't.

Sir, my gracious lord,
 Hide at your extremes, it not becomes me;
 O, when that I name them: your high self,
 Traculous mark o' the land, you have obscur'd
 With a swain's wearing; and me, poor lowly maid,
 A goddess-like prank'd up: But that our feasts
 Every morn have folly, and the feeders
 Do it with a custom, I should blush
 To see you so attired: sworn, I think,
 To show myself a glass.

I bless the time,
 When my good falcon made her flight across
 My father's ground.

Now Jove afford you cause!
 The difference forges dread; your greatness
 Not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble
 To think your father, by some accident,
 Should pass this way, as you did: O, the fates!
 Would he look, to see his work, so noble, Bound up? What would he say? Or how I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold
 The earnest of his presence?

Apprehend
 My but jollity. The gods themselves,
 In giving their deities to love, have taken
 The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
 A bull, and bellow'd, the green Neptune
 A fish, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,
 Apollo, a poor humble swain,
 Whom now: Their transformations
 Never for a piece of beauty rarer;
 And a way so chaste: since my desires
 Do not before mine honour; nor my lusts Matter than my faith.

O but, dear sir,
 My resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
 Commanded, as it must be, by the power o' the king:
 These two must be necessities,
 And then will speak; that you must change this Purpose,
 For my life.

Thou dearest Perdita,
 These forc'd thoughts, I pr'y'thee, darken not My father's face: Or I'll be thine, my fair,
 My father's: for I cannot be His own, nor any thing to any, if I am thine: to this I am most constant,
 My destiny say, no. Be merry, gentle;
 For such thoughts as these with any thing,
 Do not behold the while. Your guests are coming:
 Your countenance; as it were the day
 Of our nuptial; which We have sworn shall come.

O lady fortune,
 Be thou auspicious!

Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAMILLO, Clown, MOPS A, DORCAS, and others.

See, your guests approach:
 Yourself to entertain them sprightly,
 'Tis to be red with mirth.

Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon
 She was both pantler, butler, cook;
 My maid and servant: welcom'd all; serv'd all;
 Sing her song, and dance her turn: now
 I am a maid.

At the end o' the table, now, i' the middle;
 At the shoulder, and his; her face o' fire
 In the middle; and the thing she took to quench it,
 In the middle to each one sip: You are retir'd,
 And a feasted one, and not
 A part o' the meeting: Pray you, bid
 My unknown friends to us welcome: for it is My wish to make us better friends, more known.
 Pray you, quench your blushes; and present yourself
 To such as you are, mistress o' the feast: Come on,
 As welcome to your sheep-shearing,
 As good flock shall prosper.

Well, welcome, sir! [To Pol.
 As my father's will, I should take on me
 To be the captain o' the day:—You're welcome, sir!
 [To Camillo.

Give me those flowers there, Dorcas.—Reverend sirs,
 For you there's the rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming, and savour, all the winter long:
 Grace and remembrance, be to you both,
 And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess,
 (A fair one are you,) will you fit our ages
 With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,—
 Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
 Of trembling winter,—the fairest flowers o' the season
 Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyflowers,
 Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind
 Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not
 To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
 Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said,
 There is an art, which, in their piousness, shares
 With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be;
 Yet nature is made better by no mean,
 But nature makes that mean: so, o'er that art,
 Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art,
 That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
 A gentler scion to the wildest stock;
 And make conceive a bark of baser kind
 By bud of nobler race: This is an art Which does mend nature,—change it rather: but
 The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.
 Pol. Then make your garden rich in gillyflowers,
 And do not call them bastards.

Per. I'll not put
 The dibble in earth to set one slip of them:
 No more than, were I painted, I would wish This youth should say, 'twere well; and only therefore

Desire to breed by me.—Here's flowers for you;
 Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
 The marigold, that goes to bed with the sun,
 And with him rises weeping; these are flowers
 Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given To men of middle age: You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
 And only live by gazing.

Per. Out, alas!
 You'd be so lean, that blasts of January Would blow you through and through.—Now, my fairest friend,

I would I had some flowers o' the spring, that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours;
 That wear upon your virgin branches yet
 Your maidenheads growing:—O Proserpina,
 For the flowers now, that, frighted, thou let'st fall
 From Dis's waggon! daffodils,

That come before the swallow dares, and take
 The winds of March with beauty; violets, dim,
 But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
 Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
 That die unmarried, ere they can behold
 Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
 Most incident to maids; bold oxlips, and
 The crown-imperial; lilies of all kinds,
 The flower-de-luce being one! O, these I lack,
 To make you garlands of; and, my sweet friend,
 To strew him o'er and o'er.

Pol. What? like a corse?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on;
 Not like a corse: or if,—not to be buried,
 But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers:

Methinks, I play as I have seen them do
 In Whitsun's pastorals: sure, this robe of mine
 Does change my disposition.

Pol. What you do,
 Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
 I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
 I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
 Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
 To sing them too: When you do dance, I wish you
 A wave o' the sea; that you might ever do Nothing but that; and, move still, still so, and own
 No other function: Each your doing,
 So singular in each particular,

Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O, Doricles,
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which fairly peeps through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd;
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't.—But, come; our dance, I pray:
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever Ran on the green-sward: nothing she does, or seems,
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something,
That makes her blood look out: Good sooth, she is
The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, strike up.
Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlick,

To mend her kissing with.—

Mop. Now, in good time!

Clo. Not a word, a word; we stand upon our manners.—

Come, strike up. [Musick.]

Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.
Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what Fair swain is this, which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles; and he boasts himself

To have a worthy feeding: but I have it Upon his own report, and I believe it;
He looks like sooth: He says, he loves my daughter;
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes: and, to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.

Pol. She daries feately.
Shep. So she does any thing; though I report it,
That should be silent: if young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that,
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you: he sings several tunes, faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in: I love a ballad but even too well; if it be doleful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves: he has the prettiest love-songs for maids; so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burdens of dildos and fadings: jump her and thump her; and where some stretch-mouth'd rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, Whoop, do me no harm, good man; puts him off, slights him, with Whoop, do me no harm, good man.

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirableconceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

Serv. He hath Ribands of all the colours i' the rainbow; points, more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inks, caddisses, cambricks, lawns: why, he sings them over, 'as they were gods or goddesses; you would think, a smock were a she-angel; he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the square on't.

Clo. Pr'ythee, bring him in; and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in his tunes.

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have in 'em than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to thi

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

Masks for faces, and for noses;

Golden quoifs, and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel,
What maids lack from head to heel;
Come, buy of me, come; come buy, come
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry:
Come, buy, &c.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa should'st take no money of me; but being e as I am, it will also be the bondage of ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against thi but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis

you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among mai they wear their plackets, where they sho their faces? Is there not milking-time, w are going to bed, or kiln-hole, to whistle secrets; but you must be tittle-tattling our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering:
your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promis tawdry lace, and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was co
the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, sir, there are cozeners therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt los Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about parcels of charge.

A. Get you hence, for I must go;
Where, it fits not you to know.

M. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell:
D. Me too, let me go thither.

D. If to either, thou dost ill.
A. Neither. D. What, neither? A. Neither.
D. Thou hast sworn my love to be;

Then, whither go'st? say, whither?

We'll have this song out anon by ourselves;
And the gentlemen are in sad talk, and

Let's have the first choice.—Follow me, girls.
And you shall pay well for 'em. [Aside.]

Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Money's a medler,
That doth utter all men's ware-a.
Exeunt Clown, Autolycus, Dorcas, and Mopsa.

Enter a Servant.

Master, there is three carters, three shep-three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that made themselves all men of hair; they call themselves saltiers: and they have a dance which they call the gallimaufry of gambols, he-they are not in't; but they themselves are o' tattle but bowling,) it will please plentifully.

sir shepherd?
art is full of something, that does take ad from feasting. Sooth, when I was young, ded love, as you do, I was wont my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd lar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it acceptance; you have let him go, hing marted with him: If your lass tation should abuse; and call this, ck of love, or bounty; you were straited ply, at least, if you make a care y holding her.

Old sir, I know
es not such trifles as these are:
s, she looks from me, are pack'd and lock'd y heart; which I have given already, deliver'd.—O, hear me breathe my life his ancient sir, who, it should seem, netime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand, s dove's down, and as white as it;
ppian's tooth, or the fann'd snow,
olted by the northern blasts twice o'er.
What follows this?
tily the young swain seems to wash
l, was fair before!—I have put you out:— our protestation; let me hear ou profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.
Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all:
That,—were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve; had force, and knowledge,

More than was ever man's,—I would not prize them,
Without her love: for her, employ them all;
Commend them, and condemn them, to her service,
Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.
Cam. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargain;—
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make Her portion equal his.

Flo. O, that must be
I the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder: But, come on,
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand;—
And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, 'heseech you;
Have you a father?

Flo. I have: But what of him?
Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does, nor shall.
Pol. Methinks, a father

Is, at the nuptial of his son, a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more;
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? Is he not stupid
With age, and altering rheums? Can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? and again does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo. No, good sir;
He hath his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial: Reason, my son Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,
The father, (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity,) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this;
But, for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know't.
Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Pr'ythee, let him.
Flo. No, he must not.

Shep. Let him, my son; he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not:—
Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir, [Discovering himself.]

Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: Thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheep-hook!—Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that by hanging thee, I can but Shorten thy life one week.—And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft; who, of force, must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with;—

Shep. O, my heart!
Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made

More homely than thy state.—For thee, fond boy,—
If I may ever know, thou dost but sigh,
That thou no more shalt see this knack, (as never
I mean thou shalt,) we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin,
Far than Deucalion:—Mark thou my words:
Follow us to the court.—Thou churl, for this time,

Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it.—And you, enchantment,— Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee, if ever, henceforth, thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body move with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to't.

Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afeard: for once, or twice,
I was about to speak; and tell him plainly,
The self-same sun, that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.—Will't please you, sir, be gone?
[To Florizel.

I told you, what would come of this: 'Beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,—
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father?
Speak, ere thou diest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that, which I know.—O, sir,
[To Florizel.

You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels-in dust.—O cursed wretch!

[To Perdita.
That knew'st this was the prince, and would'st adventure

To mingle faith with him.—Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die, when I desire.

Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afeard; delay'd,
But nothing alter'd: What I was, I am:
More straining on, for plucking back; not following
My leash unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech,—which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him;—and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.
I think, Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my lord.
Per. How often have I told you, 'twould be thus?
How often said, my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by The violation of my faith; And then Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,
And mar the seeds within!—Lift up thy looks.—
From my succession wipe me, father! I Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.
Flo. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir.
Flo. So call it: but it does fulfil my vow;
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be thereat glean'd; for all the sun sees, or
The close earth wombs, or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair below'd: Therefore, I pray you,
As you have e'er been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me, (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more,) cast your good counsels
Upon his passion; Let myself and fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver,—I am put to sea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to our need, I have A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold, Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O, my lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita.—[Takes her
I'll hear you by and by. [To Cl.

Cam. He's irremovable, Resolv'd for flight: Now were I happy, if His going I could frame to serve my turn;
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that I leave out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, i'th' la
That I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's mischief
To speak your deeds; not little of his care
To have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king;
And, through him, what is nearest to him, w
Your gracious self; embrace but my directio

Flo. How, Camillo
May this, almost a miracle, be done?
That I may call thee something more than
And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you tho
A place, whereto you'll go?
Flo. Not any yet:
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do; so we profess Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and fl
Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to m

Yes, say you so?

years,

My good Camillo, as forward of her breeding, as near of birth.

I cannot say, 'tis pity, wicks instructions; for she seems a mistress out, that teach.

Your pardon, sir, for this;
wash you thanks.

My prettiest Perdita.—
O, the thorns we stand upon!—Camillo,— rver of my father, now of me;
medicine of our house!—how shall we do?
re not furnish'd like Bohemia's son;
hall appear in Sicily—

My lord,
one of this: I think, you know, my fortunes lie there: it shall be so my care ve you royally appointed, as if ene you play were mine. For instance, sir, ou may know you shall not want,—one word.
[They talk aside.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS.

Ha, ha! what a fool honesty is! and trust, my brother, a very simple gentleman! I have ll my trumpery; not a counterfeit stone, not nd, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book,
, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tye, bracelet, horn-o keep my pack from fasting: they throng ould buy first; as if my trinkets had been ed, and brought a benediction to the buyer:
ich means, I saw whose purse was best in;
and, what I saw, to my good use, I re-red. My clown (who wants but something reasonable man,) grew so in love with the es' song, that he would not stir his petticoats, had both tune and words; which so drew of the herd to me, that all their other senses
e ears: you might have pinched a placket, it seless; 'twas nothing, to geld a codpiece use; I would have filed keys off, that hung as: no hearing, no feeling, but 'my sir's nd admiring the nothing of it. So that, in se of lethargy, I picked and cut most of estival purses: and had not the old man s with a whoobub against his daughter and g's son, and scared my choughs from the
I had not left a purse alive in the whole

[Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita, come forward.]

Nay, but my letters by this means being here

as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

And those, that you'll procure from king Leontes,—

Shall satisfy your father.

Happy be you!

at you speak, shows fair.

Who have we here?—

[Seeing Autolycus.]

make an instrument of this; omit

g, may give us aid.

If they have overheard me now,—why

f. [Aside.]

How now, good fellow? Why shakest thou not, man; here's no harm intended to

I am a poor fellow, sir.

Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal

at thee: Yet, for the outside of thy poverty,

st make an exchange: therefore, disclose standly, (thou must think, there's necessity and change garments with this gentleman:

the pennyworth, on his side, be the worst,

I these, there's some boot.

I am a poor fellow, sir.—I know ye well

f. [Aside.]

Nay, pr'ythee, despatch: the gentleman is red already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir?—I smell the trick of it.— [Aside.]

Flo. Despatch, I pr'ythee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—

[Flo. and Autol. exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy
Come home to you!—you must retire yourself
Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat,
And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face;
Dismantle you; and as you can, disliken
The truth of your own seeming; that you may,
(For I do fear eyes over you,) to shipboard Get undescried.

Per. I see, the play so lies,

That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.—

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father,

He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have No hat:—Come, lady, come.—Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.

Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot?

Pray you, a word. [They converse apart.]

Cam. What I do next, shall be, to tell the king

[Aside.]

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;

Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,

To force him after: in whose company

I shall review Sicilia; for whose sight

I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!—

Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

[Exeunt Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.]

Aut. I understand the business, I hear it: To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses.
I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? what a boot is here, with this exchange?
Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do any thing extempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels: If I thought it were not a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it: and therein am I constant to my profession.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Aside, aside;—here is more matter for a hot brain:
every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Clow. See, see; what a man you are now! there is no other way, but to tell the king she's a change-ling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clow. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king;
and, so, your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her;
those secret things, all but what she has with her;
This being done, let the law go whistle; I warrant
you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clow. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. Very wisely; puppies! [Aside.]

Shep. Well; let us to the king; there is that in this fardel, will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clow. Pray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance:—Let me pocket up my pedler's excrement.—[Takes off his false beard.] How now, rusticks? whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy: Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie: but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir?

Aut. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. See'st thou not the air of the court, in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it, the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate or toze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pè; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant; say, you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock, nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we, that are not simple men! Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical; a great man, I'll warrant; I know, by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? what's i'the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel, and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: For, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly; the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those, that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he stoned; but that death is too soft for him. Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! I all do too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, hear, an't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed then, 'nointed over with honey, set on the a wasp's nest; then stand, till he be three and a dram dead: then recovered again with vitæ, or some other hot infusion: then, run is, and in the hottest day prognostication p shall he be set against a brick-wall, the s ing with a southward eye upon him; wh to behold him with flies blown to death. I talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose are to be smiled at, their offences being s. Tell me, (for you seem to be honest pla what you have to the king: being somethi considered, I'll bring you where he is tender your persons to his presence, whi in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, b king, to effect your suits, here is man shi.

Clo. He seems to be of great authori with him, give him gold; and though be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by with gold: show the inside of your pu outside of his hand, and no more ado: I stoned and flayed alive.

Shep. An't please you, sir, to undertake siness for us, here is that gold I have: it as much more; and leave this your pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promis Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety;—I party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir: but though r a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed.

Aut. O, that's the case of the shep —Hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: we m king, and show our strange sights: he n 'tis none of your daughter nor my siste gone else. Sir, I will give you as mu old man does, when the business is j and remain, as he says, your pawn, brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before sea-side; go on the right hand; I wi upon the hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as even blessed.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: h vided to do us good. [Exeunt Shepherd

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, tune would not suffer me; she drops bo mouth. I am courted now with a double gold, and a means to do the prince good; which, who knows how that may to my advancement? I will bring these these blind ones, aboard him: if he thi shore them again, and that the comp have to the king concerns him nothing, I me rogue, for being so far officious; for against that title, and what shame e to't: To him will I present them, the matter in it.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

Sicilia. A room in the palace of Leontes.

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd

A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down More penitence than done trespass: At the last, Do, as the heavens have done! forget your evil; With them, forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember

Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them; and so still this The wrong I did myself: which was so That heirless it hath made my kingdom Destroy'd the sweet'st companion that e Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, i If, one by one, you wedded all the world Or from the all, that are, took something To make a perfect woman; she, you kill Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. K She I kill'd? I did so: but thou strik's to say I did ; it is as bitter tongue, as in my thought : Now, good now, but seldom.

Not at all, good lady :
 ght have spoken a thousand things, that would one the time more benefit, and grac'd indness better.

You are one of those,
 have him wed again.

If you would not so,
 y not the state, nor the remembrance most sovereign name ; consider little, lingers, by his highness' fail of issue, op upon his kingdom, and devour n lookers-on. What were more holy,
 o rejoice, the former queen is well ?
 solier, than,—for royalty's repair, sent comfort and for future good,— s the bed of majesty again sweet fellow to't ?

There is none worthy,
 ing her, that's gone. Besides, the gods ve fulfill'd their secret purposes :
 not the divine Apollo said,
 the tenour of his oracle
 ng Leontes shall not have an heir, lost child be found ? which, that it shall,
 s monstrous to our human reason, Antigonus to break his grave,
 ne again to me ; who, on my life,
 ish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel,
 I should to the heavens be contrary, against their wills.—Care not for issue ;

[To Leontes.]
 wn will find an heir : Great Alexander e the for the worst ; so his successor
 e to be the best.

Good Paulina,— ast the memory of Hermione, in honour,—O, that ever I ar'd me to thy counsel !—then, even now, have look'd upon my queen's full eyes ;
 ken treasure from her lips,—

And left them

 Thou speak'st truth.
 such wives ; therefore, no wife : one worse,

 And why to me ?

Had she such power,
 just cause.
 She had ; and would incense me ler her, I married.

I should so :
 the ghost, that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
 ; and tell me, for what dull part in't se her : then I'd shriek, that even your ears ift to hear me ; and the words, that follow'd, be, Remember mine.

Stars, very stars,
 eyes else dead coals !—fear thou no wife,
 e no wife, Paulina.

Will you swear
 o marry, but by my free leave ?
 Never, Paulina ; so be bless'd my spirit !
 Then, good my lords, bear witness to his
 th.

Unless another,
 You tempt him over-much.
 Hermione as is her picture,
 his eye.

Good madam,—
 I have done.
 ny lord will marry.—If you will, sir, edy, but you will : give me the office se you a queen : she shall not be so young your former ; but she shall be such,
 'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
 ter in your arms.

My true Paulina, ll not marry, till thou bidd'st us.

That
 s, when your first queen's again in breath ;
 ll then.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. One, that gives out himself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess, (she
 The fairest I have yet beheld,) desires access
 To your high presence.

Leon. What with him ? he comes not Like to his father's greatness : his approach,
 So out of circumstance, and sudden, tells us,
 'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
 By need, and accident. What train ?

Gent. But few,
 And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him ?
Gent. Ay ; the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
 That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione,
 As every present time doth boast itself
 Above a better, gone ; so must thy grave
 Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
 Have said, and writ so, (but your writing now Is colder than that theme,) She had not been Nor was not to be equal'd ;—thus your verse
 Flow'd with her beauty once ; 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
 To say, you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, madam :
 The one I have almost forgot ; (your pardon,)
 The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
 Will have your tongue too : This is such a creature,
 Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
 Of all professors else ; make proselytes
 Of who she but hid follow.

Paul. How ? not women ?
Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman More worth than any man ; men, that she is The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes ;
 Yourself, assisted with your honest friends,
 Bring them to our embracement.—Still 'tis strange, [Exit Cleomenes, Lords, and Gentlemen.
 He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince,
 (Jewel of children,) seen this hour, he had pair'd
 Well with this lord ; there was not full a month
 Between their births.

Leon. Pr'ythee, no more ; thou know'st,
 He dies to me again, when talk'd of : sure,
 When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
 Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of reason.—They are come.—

Re-enter CLEOMENES, with FLORIZEL, PER-DITA, and Attendants.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince ;
 For she did print your royal father off,
 Conceiving you : Were I but twenty-one,
 Your father's image is so hit in you,
 His very air, that I should call you brother.
 As I did him ; and speak of something, wildly
 By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome !
 And your fair princess, goddess !—O, alas !
 I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth Might thus have stood, begetting wonder, as You, gracious couple, do ! and then I lost
 (All mine own folly,) the society,
 Amity too, of your brave father ; whom,
 Though bearing misery, I desire my life
 Once more to look upon.

Flo. By his command
 Have I here touch'd Sicilia : and from him
 Give you all greetings, that a king, at friend,
 Can send his brother : and, but infirmity (Which waits upon worn times,) hath something seiz'd

His wish'd ability, he had himself
 The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measur'd, to look upon you ; whom he loves (He bade me say so,) more than all the sceptres,
 And those, that bear them, living.

Leon. O, my brother, (Good gentleman !) the wrongs I have done thee, stir
 Afresh within me ; and these thy offices,
 So rarely kind, are as interpreters
 Of my behind-hand slackness.—Welcome hither,
 As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too
 Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage
 (At least, ungentle,) of the dreadful Neptune,

To greet a man, not worth her pains; much less
The adventure of her person?

Flo. Good my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble honour'd lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?

Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter

His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly,) we have cross'd,
To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness: My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you Do climate here! You have a holy father,
A graceful gentleman; against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin:
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd,
(As he from heaven merits it,) with you, Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That, which I shall report, will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me:
Desires you to attach his son; who has (His dignity and duty both cast off) Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak.
Lord. Here in the city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly; and it becomes

My marvel, and my message. To your court Whilst he was hast'ning, (in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple,) meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now,
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay't so, to his charge;
He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo, sir; I spake with him; who now Has these poor men in question. Never saw I Wretches so quake; they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O, my poor father!—
The heavens set spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:—
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's speed,
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty: and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up:
Though fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us with my father; power no jot
Hath she to change our loves.—Beseech you, sir, Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now: with thoughts of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate; at your request,
My father will grant precious things, as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious
mistress,

Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a 'Fore your queen died, she was more worth
Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of Even in these looks I made.—But your pet

[To
Is yet unanswer'd: I will to your father;
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desire
I am a friend to them, and you: upon which I now go toward him; therefore, follow me

19. Wrecked, the same instant of their masath; and in the view of the shepherd: so the instruments, which aided to expose the were even then lost, when it was found, the noble combat, that, twist joy and soras fought in Paulina! She had one eye der the loss of her husband; another elevated, oracle was fulfilled: She lifted the princess e earth; and so locks her in embracing, as would pin her to her heart, that she might e be in danger of losing.

20. The dignity of this act was worth the au- of kings and princes; for by such was it acted.
21. One of the prettiest touches of all, and hich angled for mine eyes (caught the water, not the fish,) was, when at the relation of en's death, with the manner how she came ravelly confessed and lamented by the king,) entiveness wounded his daughter: till, from of delour to another, she did, with an alas! I fain say, bleed tears; for, I am sure, my rept blood. Who was most marble there, colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if world could have seen it, the woe had been al.

22. Are they returned to the court?
23. No: the princess hearing of her mother's which is in the keeping of Paulina,—a piece ears in doing, and now newly performed by e Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had self eternity, and could put breath into his ould beguile nature of her custom, so pe e is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath ermione, that, they say, one would speak to stand in hope of answer: thither, with all ss of affection, are they gone; and there end to sup.

24. I thought, she had some great matter hand; for she hath privately, twice or a day, ever since the death of Hermione, hat removed house. Shall we thither, and r company piece the rejoicing?

two kings called my father brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. 'Pr'ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman; Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it, in behalf of his friend:—And I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands; and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it: and I would, thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: If I do not wonder, how thou dar'st venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.—Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A room in Paulina's house.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, and Attendants.

Leon. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee!

Paul. What, sovereign sir, I did not well, I meant well: All my services You have paid home: but that you have vouchsaf'd With your crown'd brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

Leon. O Paulina, We honour you with trouble: but we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much content In many singularities; but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she lived peerless, So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Excels whatever yet you look'd upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart: But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever Still sleep mock'd death: behold; and say, 'tis well.

[Paulina undraws a curtain, and discovers a statue.]
I like your silence; it the more shows off Your wonder: But yet speak;—first, you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

Leon. Her natural posture!— Chide me, dear stone; that I may say, indeed, Thou art Hermione: or, rather, thou art she, In thy not chiding; for she was as tender, As infancy, and grace. But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged, as this seems.

Pol. O, not hy much.

Paul. So much the more our carver's excellence; Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her As she lived now.

Leon. As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O, thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty, (warm life, As now it coldly stands,) when first I woo'd her!

I am asham'd: Does not the stone rebuke me,
For being more stone than it?—O, royal piece, There's magick in thy majesty; which has My evils conjur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring daughter took the spirits,
Standing like stone with thes!

Per. And give me leave;
And do not say, 'tis superstition, that I kneel, then implore her blessing.—Lady,
Dear queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours, to kiss.

Paul. O, patience;
The statue is but newly fixed, the colour's
Not dry.

Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on;
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away,
So many summers, dry: scarce any joy
Did ever so long live; no sorrow,
But kill'd itself much sooner.

Pol. Dear my brother,
Let him, that was the cause of this, have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he Will piece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought, the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you, (for the stone is mine,)
I'd not have show'd it.

Leon. Do not draw the curtain.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't; lest your fancy
May think anon, it moves.

Leon. Let be, let be.
Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already—
What was he, that did make it?—See, my lord,
Would you not deem, it breath'd? and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?

Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.
Leon. The fixture of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with art.

Paul. I'll draw the curtain;
My lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon, it lives.

Leon. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together;
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let't alone.

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirred you: but I could afflict you further.

Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: What fine chizzel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting: Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.
Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel; or resolve you
For more amazement: If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against,) I am assisted By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd,

You do awake your faith: Then, all stand st

No foot shall stir.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

A hall in the Duke's palace.

Enter Duke, ÆGEON, Gaoler, Officers, and other Attendants.

Æge. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
 And, by the doom of death, end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more;
 I am not partial to infringe our laws:

The enmity and discord, which of late Spring from the rancorous outrage of your duke

To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,—
 Who, wanting gelders to redeem their lives,—

Have sealed his rigorous statutes with their bloods,— Excludes all pity from our threaten'ing looks.

For, since the mortal and intestine jars
 'Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,

It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
 Both by the Syracusans and ourselves,

To admit no traffick to our adverse towns:
 Nay, more,

If any, born at Ephesus, be seen
 At any Syracusan marts and fairs,

Again, if any Syracusan born
 Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies,

His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose;
 Unless a thousand marks be levied,

To quit the penalty, and to ransom him.
 Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,

Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;
 Therefore by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Æge. Yet this my comfort; when your words are done,

My woes end likewise with the evening sun.
 Duke. Well, Syracusan, say, in brief, the cause

Why thou departedst from thy native home;
 And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

Æge. A heavier task could not have been impos'd,
 Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable:

Yet, that the world may witness, that my end
 Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,

I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
 In Syracuse was I born; and wed

Once a woman, happy but for me,
 And by me too, had not our hap been bad.

With her I liv'd in joy; our wealth increas'd,
 By prosperous voyages I often made

To Epidamnium, 'till my factor's death;
 And he (great care of goods at random left)

Drove me from kind embracements of my spouse:
 From whom my absence was not six months old,

Before herself (almost at fainting under The pleasing punishment that women bear,)

Had made provision for her following me,

And soon, and safe, arrived where I was.

There she had not been long, but she became

A joyful mother of two goodly sons;

And, which was strange, the one so like the other,

As could not be distinguish'd but by names.

That very hour, and in the selfsame inn,

A poor mean woman was delivered

Of such a burden, male twins, both alike:

Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,

I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.

My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,

Made daily motions for our home return:

Unwilling I agreed; alas, too soon.

We came aboard:

A league from Epidamnium had we sail'd,

Before the always-wind-obeying deep

Gave any tragic instance of our harm:

But longer did we not retain much hope;

For what obscured light the heavens did grant

Did but convey unto our fearful minds

A doubtful warrant of immediate death;

Which, though myself would gladly have embrac'd,

Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,

Weeping before for what she saw must come,

And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,

That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
 Forc'd me to seek delays for them and me.

And this it was,—for other means was none.—

The sailors sought for safety by our boat,

And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us:

My wife, more careful for the latter-born,

Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,

Such as sea-faring men provide for storms;

To him one of the other twins was bound,

Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.

The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,

Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,

Fasten'd ourselves at either end the mast;

And floating straight, obedient to the stream,

Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.

At length the sun, gazing upon the earth,

Dispers'd those vapours that offended us;

And, by the benefit of his wish'd light,

The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered

Two ships from far making amain to us.

Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:

But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!

Give the sequel by that went before.

Duke. Nay, forward, old man, do not break off so;

For we may pity, though not pardon thee.

Æge. O, had the gods done so, I had not now

Worthily term'd them merciless to us!

For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,

We were encounter'd by a mighty rock;

Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst,
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdened
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind;
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave helpful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests;
And would have left the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.—

Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss;
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowest for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Ege. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me,
That his attendant, (for his case was like,
Left of his brother, but retain'd his name,)
Might hear him company in the quest of him:
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.

Five summers have I spent in furthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus;
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought,
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Duke. Hapless Egeon, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But, though thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd,
But to our honour's great disparagement,
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day,
To seek thy help by beneficial help:
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if not, then thou art doom'd to die:—
Gauler, take him to thy custody.

Grol. I will, my lord.
Ege. Hopeless, and helpless, doth Egeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A publick place.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

Mer. Therefore, give out, you are of Epidamnus,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusan merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And, not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money, that I had to keep.

Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour it will be dinner-time;
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return, and sleep within mine inn;
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean. [Exit Dro. S.]

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir; that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.

What, will you walk with me about the town
And then go to my inn, and dine with me?

Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchant
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon, at five o'clock,
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mar
And afterwards consort you till bed-time;
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then; I will go lose
And wander up and down, to view the city.

Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own con-
[Exit Mer.]

Ant. S. He, that commends me to mine content,

Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the ocean seeks another drop;
Who, failing there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself;
So I, to find a mother, and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanack of my true date.
What now? How chance, thou art return'd late?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach
late:

The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit,
The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell,
My mistress made it one upon my cheek;
She is so hot, because the meat is cold;
The meat is cold, because you come not home;
You come not home, because you have no stomach;
You have no stomach, having broke your fast;
But we, that know what 'tis to fast and pine,
Are penitent for your default to-day.

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir; tell me this Where have you left the money, that I gave
you?

Dro. E. O,—sixpence, that I had o'we last,

To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper.
The saddler had it, sir, I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now; Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou
So great a charge from thine own custody?

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at
I from my mistress come to you in post;
If I return, I shall be post indeed;
For she will score your fault upon my part;
Methinks, your maw, like mine, should clock,

And strike you home without a messenger.
Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these out of season;

Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dro. E. To me, sir? why, you gave no gold.
Ant. S. Come on, sir knave, have done foolishness,

And tell me how thou hast disposed thy Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch the mart

Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to My mistress, and her sister, stay for you.

Ant. Now, as I am a christian, answer
In what safe place you have dispos'd my
Or I shall break that merry scone of you
That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd.
Where is the thousand marks thou hadst?

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon
Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoe.
But not a thousand marks between you and If I should pay your worship those again
Perchance, you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what slave, hast thou?

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress
Phoenix;

She that doth fast, till you come home to
And prays, that you will hie you home to me.

Ant. S. What, wilt thou flout me thus
face,

Being forbid? There, take you that, sir!
Dro. E. What mean you, sir? for God's hold your hands;

an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

[Exit Dro. E.]

t. S. Upon my life, by some device or other, villain is o'er-raught of all my money. say, this town is full of cozenage; imble jugglers, that deceive the eye, -working sorcerers, that change the mind, Soul-killing witches, that deform the body; Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks, And many such like liberties of sin: If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner. I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave; I greatly fear, my money is not safe.

[Exit.]

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

A publick place.

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Neither my husband, nor the slave return'd, in such haste I sent to seek his master! Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Perhaps, some merchant hath invited him, from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner. sister, let us dine, and never fret: I am master of his liberty:

is his master; and, when they see time, 'll go, or come: If so, be patient, sister.

Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Because their business still lies out o'door.

Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

O, know, he is the bridle of your will.

There's none, but asses, will be bridled so.

Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe.

's nothing, situate under heaven's eye,

ath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:

seats, the fishes, and the winged fowls,

their males' subject, and at their controls:

more divine, the masters of all these,

of the wide world, and wild watry seas,

d with intellectual sense and souls,

re pre-eminence than fish and fowls,

asters to their females, and their lords:

let your will attend on their accords.

This servitude makes you to keep unweid.

Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.

But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway.

Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

How if your husband start some other where?

'Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Patience, unmov'd, no marvel though she pause;

can be meek, that have no other cause.

ched soul, bruis'd with adversity,

id be quiet, when we hear it cry;

ere we burden'd with like weight of pain,

eh, or more, we should ourselves complain:

u, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,

urging helpless patience would'st relieve me:

f thou live to see like right hereft,

ool-begg'd patience in thee will be left.

Well, I will marry one day, but to try;—

comes your man, now is your husband nigh.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Say, is your tardy master now at hand?

E. Nay, he is at two hands with me, and by two ears can witness.

Say, didst thou speak with him? know'st thou his mind?

E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear:

rw his hand, I scarce could understand it.

Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not s meaning?

E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too eel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, could scarce understand them.

But say, I pry'thee, is he coming home?

ns, he hath great care to please his wife.

E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-

mad.

Horn-mad, thou villain?!

E. I mean not cuckold-mad; but, sore, he's stark-mad:

I desir'd him to come home to dinner,

'd me for a thousand marks in gold:

ance-time, quoth I; My gold, quoth he:

Your meat doth burn, quoth I; My gold, quoth he: Will you come home? quoth I; My gold, quoth he: Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain? The pig, quoth I, is burn'd; My gold, quoth he: My mistress, sir, quoth I; Hang up thy mistress; I know not thy mistress; out on thy mistress!

Luc. Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master:

I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistress;—

So that my errand, due unto my tongue,

I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders;

For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home?

For God's sake, send some other messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other beating:

Between you I shall have a holy head.

Adr. Hence, prating peasant; fetch thy master

home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you, as you with me,

That like a football you do spurn me thus?

You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:

If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. [Exit.]

Luc. Fie, how impatience lowreth in your face!

Adr. His company must do his minions grace,

Whilst I at home starve for a merry look.

Hath homely age the alluring beauty took

From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it:

Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?

If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,

Unkindness blunts it, more than marble hard.

Do their gay vestments his affections bait?

That's not my fault, he's master of my state:

What ruins are in me, that can be found

By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground

Of my defeatures: My decayed fair

A sunny look of his would soon repair:

But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale,

And feeds from home; poor I am but his stale.

Luc. Self-harming jealousy!—fie, beat it hence.

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispendence.

I know his eye doth homage otherwhere;

Or else, what lets it but he would be here?

Sister, you know, he promis'd me a chain;—

Would that alone alone he would detain,

So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!

I see, the jewel, best enamelled,

Will lose his beauty; and though gold 'hides still,

That others touch, yet often touching will

Wear gold: and so no man, that hath a name,

But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.

Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,

I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold, I gave to Dromio, is laid up

Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave

Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out.

By computation, and mine host's report,

I could not speak with Dromio, since at first

I sent him from the mart: See, here he comes.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

How now, sir? is your merry humour alter'd?

As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
 You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold?
 Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
 My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,
 That thus so madly thou didst answer me?
Dro. S. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.
Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,
 Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt;
 And told'st me of a mistress, and a dinner;
 For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:
 What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?

Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.
 [Beating him.]

Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake: now your jest is earnest:

Upon what bargain do you give it me?
Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes

Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,
 Your sauciness will jest upon my love,
 And make a common of my serious hours.

When the sun shines, let foolish gnats make sport,
 But creep in crannies, when he hides his beams
 If you will jest with me, know my aspect,
 And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
 Or I will heat this method in your sence.

Dro. S. Sence, call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sence for my head, and insonce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. S. Dost thou not know?
Dro. S. Nothing, sir; but that I am beaten.

Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?
Dro. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. S. Why, first, for flouting me; and then,
 wherefore,—
 For urging it the second time to me.

Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season?

When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme nor reason?—
 Well, sir, I thank you.

Ant. S. Thank me, sir? for what?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, for this something, that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner time?

Dro. S. No, sir; I think, the meat wants that, I have.

Ant. S. In good time, sir, what's that?
Dro. S. Basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.
Dro. S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?
Dro. S. Lest it make you choleric, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time;
 There's a time for all things.

Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

Ant. S. Let's hear it.
Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair, that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?
Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a peruke, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou dost conclude hairy plain dealers without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost:
 he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. S. For what reason?
Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.

Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.
Dro. S. Sure ones then.

Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.
Dro. S. Certain ones then.

Ant. S. Name them.
Dro. S. The one, to save the money that spends in tiring; the other, that at dinner should not drop in his porridge.

Ant. S. You would all this time have per-there is no time for all things.

Dro. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substwhy there is no time to recover.

Dro. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is and therefore, to the world's end, will have followers.

Ant. S. I knew it would be a bald conclu-
 But soft! who waits us yonder?

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

*Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and fit;
 Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects,
 I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.*

*The time was once, when thou unurg'd would'st
 That never words were musick to thine ear,
 That never object pleasing in thine eye,
 That never touch well-welcome to thy hand,
 That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
 Unless I spake, look'd, touch'd, or carv'd to How comes it now, my husband, oh, how com'
 That thou art then estranged from thyself?
 Thyself I call it, being strange to me,
 That, undividable, incorporate,
 Am better than thy dear self's better part.
 Ah, do not tear away thyself from me;
 For know, my love, as easy may'st thou fall
 A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
 And take unmingled thence that drop again,
 Without addition, or diminishing,
 As take from me thyself, and not me too.
 How dearly would it touch thee to the quick Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious?
 And that this body, consecrate to thee,
 By ruffian lust should be contaminate?
 Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at
 And hurl the name of husband in my face,
 And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot brow
 And from my false hand cut the wedding ring
 And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?
 I know thou canst; and therefore, see, thou
 I am possess'd of an adulterate blot;
 My blood is mingled with the crime of lust
 For, if we two be one, and thou play false,
 I do digest the poison of thy flesh,
 Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
 Keep then fair league and truce with thy true
 I live dis-stain'd, thou undishonour'd.*

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame?
 you not:

In Ephesus I am but two hours old,
 As strange unto your town, as to your talk
 Who, every word by all my wit being scam'd
 Want wit in all one word to understand.

*Luc. Fie, brother! how the world is c-
 with you:*

When were you wont to use my sister thus
 She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. S. By Dromio?
Dro. S. By me?

*Adr. By thee; and this thou didst retur-
 him,—*

That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows
 Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this woman?

What is the course and drift of your comp-Dro. S. I, sir? I never saw her till this Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

S. I never spake with her in all my life.
 S. How can she thus then call us by our names, it be by inspiration?
 How ill agrees it with your gravity, terfeit thus grossly with your slave,
 to give him to thwart me in my mood?
 I wrong, you are from me exempt,
 I ought not that wrong with a more contempt.
 I will fasten on this sleeve of thine;
 'Tis an elm, my husband, I a vine;
 weakness, married to thy stronger state,
 me with thy strength to communicate:
 I possess thee from me, it is dross,
 as ivy, briar, or idle moss;
 all for want of pruning, with intrusion
 I sap, and live on thy confusion.
 S. To me she speaks; she moves me for or theme:
 Was I married to her in my dream?
 I know, and think I hear all this?
 Her voice drives our eyes and ears amiss?
 How show this sure uncertainty,
 to retain the offer'd fallacy.
 Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.
 O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner.
 He fairy land;—O, spite of spite!
 With goblins, owls, and elvish sprites;
 To vex them not, this will ensue,
 To choke our breath, or pinch us black and blue.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thyself, and answer'st not?
 Dromio, thou drone, thou snail, thou slug, thou sot!
 Dro. S. I am transformed, master, am not I?
 Ant. S. I think, thou art, in mind, and so am I.
 Dro. S. Nay, master, both in mind, and in my shape.
 Ant. S. Thou hast thine own form.
 Dro. S. No, I am an ape.
 Luc. If thou art chang'd to aught, 'tis to an ass.
 Dro. S. 'Tis true; she rides me, and I long for grass.
 'Tis so, I am an ass; else it could never be,
 But I should know her as well as she knows me.
 Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
 To put the finger in the eye and weep,
 Whilst man, and master, laugh my woes to scorn.—
 Come, sir, to dinner; Dromio, keep the gate:—
 Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day,
 And shrieve you of a thousand idle pranks:
 Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,
 Say, he dines forth, and let no creature enter.—
 Come, sister:—Dromio, play the porter well.
 Ant. S. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
 Sleeping or waking? mad, or well-advis'd?
 Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd!
 I'll say as they say, and persevere so,
 And in this mist at all adventures go.
 Dro. S. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?
 Adr. Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your pate.
 Luc. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same.

ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, DROMIO of us, ANGELO, and BALTHAZAR.

Good signior Angelo, you must excuse
 all;
 I am shrewish when I keep not hours:
 I linger'd with you at your shop,
 I was making of her carkanet,
 to-morrow you will bring it home.
 I was a villain, that would face me down as on the mart; and that I beat him,
 I'd him with a thousand marks in gold;
 I did deny my wife and house—
 I heard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?
 Say what you will, sir, but I know what
 now:
 I beat me at the mart, I have your hand
 how:
 I was parched, and the blows you were ink,
 my handwriting would tell you what I think.
 I think, thou art an ass.
 Marry, so it doth appear in wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear.
 I am kick'd, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,
 I keep from my heels, and beware of an ass.
 You are sad, signior Balthazar: 'Pray
 I, our cheer
 for my good will, and your good welcome to hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your some dear.
 O, signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,
 all of welcome makes scarce one dainty of good meat, sir, is common; that every man affords.
 And welcome more common; for that's the sting but words.
 I will cheer, and great welcome, makes a man's feast.
 Ay, to a niggardly host, and more
 ing guests:
 my eates be mean, take them in good part;
 for may you have, but not with better heart,
 my door is lock'd: Go bid them let us in.
 Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, [Within.] Mome, malt-horse, capon, and, idiot, patch!

Either get thee from the door, or sit down at the hatch:
 Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store,
 When one is one too many? Go, get thee from the door.
 Dro. E. What patch is made our porter? My master stays in the street.
 Dro. S. Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.
 Ant. E. Who talks within there? ho, open the door.
 Dro. S. Right, sir, I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.
 Ant. E. Wherefore? for my dinner; I have not din'd to day.
 Dro. S. Nor to-day here you must not; come again, when you may.
 Ant. E. What art thou, that keep'st me out from the house I owe?
 Dro. S. The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.
 Dro. E. O villain, thou hast stolen both mine office and my name;
 The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame.
 If thou had'st been Dromio to-day in my place, Thou would'st have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an ass.
 Luce. [Within] What a coil is there! Dromio, who are those at the gate?
 Dro. E. Let my master in, Luce.
 Luce. Faith no; he comes too late;
 And so tell your master.
 Dro. E. O Lord, I must laugh:—
 Have at you with a proverb.—Shall I set in my staff?
 Luce. Have at you with another: that's,—When?
 can you tell?
 Dro. S. If thy name be called Luce, Luce, thou hast answer'd him well.
 Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion? you'll let us in, I hope?
 Luce. I thought to have ask'd you.
 Dro. S. And you said, no.
 Dro. E. So, come, help; well struck; there was blow for blow.
 Ant. E. Thou baggage, let me in.
 Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?
 Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.
 Luce. Let him knock till it ake.
 Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.

Luce. What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Adr. [Within.] Who is that at the door, that keeps all this noise?

Dro. S. By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. E. Are you there, wife? you might have come before.

Adr. Your wife, sir knave! go, get you from the door.

Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore.

Ang. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome; we would fain have either.

Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.

Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold:

It would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought and sold.

Ant. E. Go, fetch me something, I'll break ope the gate.

Dro. S. Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you, sir; and words are but wind;

Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind.

Dro. S. It seems thou wantest breaking: Out upon thee, hind!

Dro. E. Here's too much, out upon thee! I pray thee, let me in.

Dro. S. Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.

Ant. E. Well, I'll break in; Go borrow me a crow. Dro. E. A crow without a feather; master, mean you so?

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:

If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.

Ant. E. Go, get thee gone, fetch me an iron crow.

Bal. Have patience, sir; O, let it not be so; Herein you war against your reputation,

And draw within the compass of suspect The unviolated honour of your wife.

Once this,—Your long experience of her wisdom, Her sober virtue, years, and modesty,

Plead on her part some cause to you unknown; And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse

Why at this time the doors are made against you. Be rul'd by me; depart in patience,

And let us to the Tiger all to dinner: And, about evening, come yourself alone,

To know the reason of this strange restraint. If by strong hand you offer to break in,

Now in the stirring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made on it;

And that supposed by the common rout Against your yet ungalleged estimation,

That may with foul intrusion enter in, And dwell upon your grave when you are dead:

For slander lives upon succession; For ever hous'd, where it once gets possession.

Ant. E. You have prevail'd; I will depart in quiet, And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.

I know a wench of excellent discourse,— Pretty and witty; wild, and, yet too, gentle;—

There will we dine: this woman that I mean, My wife (but, I protest, without desert,)

Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal; To her will we to dinner.—Get you home,

And fetch the chain; by this, I know, 'tis made: Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine;

For there's the house; and that chain will I bestow (Be it for nothing but to spite my wife,)

Upon mine hostess there: good sir, make haste: Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me,

I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me. Ang. I'll meet you at that place, some hour hence.

Ant. E. Do so; this jest shall cost me some pence.

DROMIO of Syracuse.

S. Why, how now, Dromio? where run'st thou so fast?

S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio? or I your man? am I myself?

S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou self.

S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man, and myself.

S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?

S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to us; one that claims me, one that haunts that will have me.

S. What claim lays she to thee?

S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay horse; and she would have me as a beast; I being a beast, she would have me; but being a very beastly creature, lays claim

S. What is she?

S. A very reverent body; ay, such a one as may not speak of, without he say sir-reve- I have but lean luck in the match, and yet wondrous fat marriage.

S. How dost thou mean, a fat marriage?

S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and she; and I know not what use to put her to, make a lamp of her, and run from her by light. I warrant, her rags, and the tallow will burn a Poland winter: if she lives onsday, she'll burn a week longer than the world.

S. What complexion is she of?

S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing clean kept; For why! she sweats, a man over shoes in the grime of it.

S. That's a fault, that water will mend.

S. In her forehead; armed and reverted, war against her hair.

S. Where England?

S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could whiteness in them: but I guess, it stood tin, by the salt rheum that ran between and it.

S. Where Spain?

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it, hot in her breath.

Ant. S. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. S. O, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain; who sent whole armadas of carracks to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. S. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. S. O, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; called me Dromio; swore, I was assured to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch: and, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had transformed me to a curtail-dog, and made me turn i'the wheel.

Ant. S. Go, hie thee presently, post to the road; And if the wind blow any way from shore, I will not harbour in this town to-night.

If any bark put forth, come to the mart, Where I will walk, till thou return to me.

If every one know us, and we know none, 'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life, So fly I from her, that would be my wife. [Exit.

Ant. S. There's none but witches do inhabit here; And therefore 'tis high time, that I were hence.

She, that doth call me husband, even my soul Doth for a wife abhor: but her fair sister,

Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace, Of such enchanting presence and discourse,

Hath almost made me traitor to myself: But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,

I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. Master Antipholus?

Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.

Ang. I know it well, sir: Lo, here is the chain; I thought to have ta'en you at the Porcupine:

The chain unfinished made me stay thus long.

Ant. S. What is your will, that I shall do with this?

Ang. What please yourself, sir; I have made it for you.

Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have:

Go home with it, and please your wife withal; And soon at supper-time I'll visit you,

And then receive my money for the chain.

Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now, For fear you ne'er see chain, nor money, more.

Ang. You are a merry man, sir; fare you well. [Exit.

Ant. S. What I should think of this, I cannot tell: But this I think, there's no man is so vain,

That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.

I see, a man here needs not live by shifts, When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.

I'll to the mart, and there for Dromio stay;

If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

a Merchant, ANGELO, and an Officer.

You know, since Pentecost the sum is due, I have not much importun'd you;

I had not, but that I am bound to, and want gilders for my voyage:

to make present satisfaction,

to attach you by this officer.

Even just the sum, that I do owe to you,

to give me by Antipholus:

to be instant, that I met with you, to give me a chain; at five o'clock,

to receive the money for the same:

Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house, I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Off. That labour may you save; see where he comes.

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou

And buy a rope's end; that will I bestow

Among my wife and her confederates,

For locking me out of my doors by day.—

But soft, I see the goldsmith:—get thee gone;

Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! [Exit Dromio.

Ant. E. A man is well help up, that trusts to you :
I promised your presence, and the chain ;
But neither chain, nor goldsmith, came to me :
Belike, you thought our love would last too long,
If it were chain'd together ; and therefore came not.

Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's the note,
How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat ;
The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion ;
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more Than I stand debted to this gentleman :
I pray you, see him presently discharg'd,
For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money ;
Besides, I have some business in the town :
Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof ;
Perchance, I will be there as soon as you.

Ang. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself?

Ant. E. No ; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ang. Well, sir, I will : Have you the chain
about you ?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have ;
Or else you may return without your money.

Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain ;
Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good lord, you use this dalliance, to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porcupine :
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.

Mer. The hour steals on ; I pray you, sir, despatch.

Ang. You hear how he importunes me ; the chain—

Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Ang. Come, come, you know, I gave it you even now ;
Either send the chain, or send me by some token.

Ant. E. Fie ! now you run this humour out of breath :

Come, where's the chain ? I pray you, let me see it.

Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance :
Good sir, say, wher' you'll answer me, or no ;
If not, I'll leave him to the officer.

Ant. E. I answer you ! What should I answer you ?

Ang. The money, that you owe me for the chain.

Ant. E. I owe you none, till I receive the chain.

Ang. You know, I gave it you half an hour since.

Ant. E. You gave me none ; you wrong me much to say so.

Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it :
Consider, how it stands upon my credit.

Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.

Off. I do ; and charge you, in the duke's name, to obey me.

Ang. This touches me in reputation :—
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this officer.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had !
Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.

Ang. Here is thy fee ; arrest him, officer ;—
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir ; you hear the suit.

Ant. E. I do obey thee, till I give thee hail :—
But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear
As all the metal in your shop will answer.

Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, there is a hark of Epidamnium,
That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
And then, sir, bears away : our freightage, sir,
I have convey'd aboard ; and I have bought
The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vitæ.
The ship is in her trim ; the merry wind
Blows fair from land : they stay for nought at all,
But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now ! a madman ? Why, thou peevish sheep,

What ship of Epidamnium stays for me ?

Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.

Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope ;
And told thee to what purpose, and what end.

Dro. S. You sent me, sir, for a rope's-end as soon :

You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark.

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, wath

One, whose hard heart is button'd up
A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough ;
A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff ;

 tr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.

 v. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season.
 b. He's a thief too: Have you not heard men say, time comes stealing on by night and day?
 b. In debt, and theft, and a sergeant in the way, he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Enter LUCIANA.

v. Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear it straight; and bring thy master home immediately.—
 b. Sister; I am press'd down with conceit; conceit, my comfort, and my injury. [Exit.

SCENE III.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

I. S. There's not a man I meet, but doth salute me
 I were their well-acquainted friend;
 every one doth call me by my name.
 tender money to me, some invite me:
 other give me thanks for kindnesses;
 offer me commodities to buy:
 now a tailor call'd me in his shop, show'd me silks that he had bought for me, therewithal, took measure of my body.
 these are but imaginary wiles,
 Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

I. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for:
 have you got the picture of old Adam new all'd?
 I. S. What gold is this! What Adam dost thou mean?
 I. S. Not that Adam, that kept the paradise, but Adam, that keeps the prison: he, that a calf's skin, that was killed for the prophet; he, that came behind you, sir, like an evil and bid you forsake your liberty.
 I. S. I understand thee not.
 I. S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he, that like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives a fob, and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes my decayed men, and gives them suits of ce; he, that sets up his rest to do more ex-with his mace, than a morris-pike.
 I. S. What! thou mean'st an officer?
 I. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he, rings any man to answer it, that breaks his one, that thinks a man always going to bed, says, God give you good rest!
 I. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery. Is any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?
 I. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour that the bark Expedition put forth to-night;
 hen were you hindered by the sergeant, to or the hoy, Delay: Here are the angels that nt for, to deliver you.
 I. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I;
 ere we wander in illusions;
 blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtesan.

v. Well met, well met, master Antipholus.
 sir, you have found the goldsmith now:
 t the chain you promis'd me to-day?
 I. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee tempt me not!
 I. S. Master, is this mistress Satan?
 I. S. It is the devil.
 I. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam;
 ne she comes in the habit of a light wench;
 ereof comes, that the wenches say, God damn me, that's as much as to say, God make me a light wench. It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn; Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir.

Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner here.
 Dro. S. Master, if you do expect spoon-meat, or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon, that must eat with the devil.

Ant. S. Avoid then, fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping?

Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress:

I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner, Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd;

And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the paring of one's nail,

A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
 A nut, a cherry-stone; but she, more covetous,
 Would have a chain.

Master, be wise; an' if you give it her,
 The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain;
 I hope, you do not mean to cheat me so.

Ant. S. Avaunt, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dro. S. Fly pride, says the peacock; Mistress, that you know. [Exit Ant. S. and Dro. S.]

Cour. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad,

Else would he never so demean himself:

A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,

And for the same he promis'd me a chain;

Both one, and other, he denies me now.

The reason that I gather he is mad,

(Besides this present instance of his rage),

Is a mad tale, he told to-day at dinner,

Of his own doors being shut against his entrance.

Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits,

On purpose shut the doors against his way.

My way is now, to hie home to his house,

And tell his wife, that being lunatick

He rush'd into my house, and took perforce

My ring away: This course I fittest choose;

For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

The same.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, and an Officer.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man, I will not break away;

I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money

To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.

My wife is in a wayward mood to day;

And will not lightly trust the messenger,

That I should be attach'd in Ephesus:

I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.—

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus, with a rope's end.

Here comes my man; I think, he brings the money.

How now, sir? have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.

Ant. E. But where's the money?

Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?

Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am

I returned.

Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you.

[Beating him.

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Off. Good now, hold thy tongue.

Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain!

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Y

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service, but blows: when I am cold, he beats me with beating: when I am warm, he cools me with beating: I am waked with it, when I sleep; raised with it, when I sit: driven out of doors with it, when I go from home; welcomed home with it, when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar wont her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, and the Courtesan, with PINCH, and Others.

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

Dro. E. Mistress, respicere finem, respect your end; or rather the prophecy, like the parrot, Beware the rope's end.

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Beats him.]
Cour. How say you now? is not your husband mad?

Adr. His incivility confirms no less.— Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Establish him in his true sense again, And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!
Cour. Mark, how he trembles in his ecstasy!

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear.
Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, hous'd within this man,

To yield possession to my holy prayers, And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight: I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven.

Ant. E. Peace, dotting wizard, peace; I am not mad.

Adr. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!

Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customers? Did this companion with the saffron face Revel and feast it at my house to-day, Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut, And I denied to enter in my house?

Adr. O, husband, God doth know, you din'd at home,

Where 'would you had remain'd until this time, Free from these slanders, and this open shame!

Ant. E. I din'd at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou?

Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out?

Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you shut out.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?

Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.

Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?

Dro. E. Certes, she did; the kitchen vestal scorn'd you.

Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. E. In verity, you did;—my bones bear witness, That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to sooth him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame; the fellow finds his vein, And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me? heart and good-will you might;

But, surely, master, not a rag of money.

Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?

Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.

Luc. And I am witness with her, that she did.

Dro. E. God, and the rope-maker, bear me witness, That I was sent for nothing but a rope!

Pinch. Mistress, both man and master is possess'd; I know it by their pale and deadly looks:

They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.

Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me to-day?

And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no

But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling villain, thou speak'st both.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The same.

Enter Merchant and ANGELO.

g. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder'd you ;
I protest, he had the chain of me,
Whom most dishonestly he doth deny it.
r. How is the man esteem'd here in the city ?
g. Of very reverent reputation, sir,
Whom infinite, highly belov'd,
And to none that lives here in the city ;
Whom might bear my wealth at any time.
r. Speak softly : yonder, as I think, he walks.

ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Syracuse.

g. 'Tis so ; and that self chain about his neck,
Which he forswore, most monstrously, to have.
r. Sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him.—
Or Antipholus, I wonder much,
How you would put me to this shame and trouble ;
Not without some scandal to yourself,
Some circumstance, and oaths, so to deny
The chain, which now you wear so openly ;
Whom the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
Have done wrong to this my honest friend ;
But for staying on our controversy,
Hoisted sail, and put to sea to-day ;
The chain you had of me, can you deny it ?
r. S. I think, I had ; I never did deny it.
r. Yes, that you did, sir ; and forswore it too.
r. S. Who heard me to deny it, or forswear it ?
r. These ears of mine, thou knowest, did hear
Thee :

Woe thee, wretch ! 'tis pity, that thou liv'st
Talk, where any honest men resort.
r. S. Thou art a villain, to impeach me thus :
Woe mine honour and mine honesty Unto these presently, if thou dar'st stand.
r. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.]

ADRIANA, LUCIANA, Courtesan, and Others.

r. Hold, hurt him not, for God's sake, he is Mad ;—
Get within him, take his sword away :
Dromio too, and bear them to my house.
r. S. Run, master, run ; for God's sake, take A house.
Is some priory ;—In, or we are spoil'd.
[Escort Ant. S. and Dro. S. to the Priory.]

Enter the Abbess.

g. Be quiet, people ! Wherefore throng you Hither ?

r. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence ;
As come in, that we may bind him fast,
And bear him home for his recovery.

g. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

r. I am sorry now, that I did draw on him.

g. How long hath this possession held the man ?

r. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad, Much, much different from the man he was ;
Till this afternoon, his passion brake into extremity of rage.

g. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck
At sea ?

r. And some dear friend ? Hath not else his eye Lost his affection in unlawful love ?

g. Prevailing much in youthful men,
To give their eyes the liberty of gazing.

r. Whence of these sorrows is he subject to ?

g. To none of these, except it be the last ;
Which, some love, that drew him oft from home.

r. You should for that have reprehended him.

g. Why, so I did.

r. As roughly, as my modesty would let me.

g. Haply, in private.

r. And in assemblies too.

g. Ay, but not enough.

r. As roughly, as my modesty would let me.

g. Haply, in private.

r. And in assemblies too.

g. Ay, but not enough.

r. It was the copy of our conference :

In bed, he slept not for my urging it ;
At board, he fed not for my urging it ;
Alone, it was the subject of my theme ;
In company, I often glanced it ;
Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And thereof came it, that the man was mad :

The venom clamours of a jealous woman

Poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

It seems, his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing :

And thereof comes it, that his head is light.

Thou say'st, his meat was sauc'd with thy upbraidings :

Unquiet meals make ill digestions,

Thereof the raging fire of fever bred ;

And what's a fever but a fit of madness ?

Thou say'st, his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls :

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue,

But moody and dull melancholy,

(Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair ;)

And, at her heels, a huge infectious troop

Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life ?

In food, in sports, and life-preserving rest

To be disturb'd, would mad or man, or best :

The consequence is then, thy jealous fits

Have scared thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,

When he demean'd himself rough, rude and wildly.—

Why bear you these rebukes, and answer not ?

Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof.—

Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.

Abb. No, not a creature enters in my house.

Adr. Then, let your servants bring my husband forth.

Abb. Neither ; he took this place for sanctuary,

And it shall privilege him from your hands,

Till I have brought him to his wits again,

Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,

Diet his sickness, for it is my office,

And will have no attorney but myself ;

And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abb. Be patient ; for I will not let him stir,

Till I have used the approved means I have,

With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,

To make of him a formal man again :

It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,

A charitable duty of my order ;

Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.

Adr. I will not hence, and leave my husband here ;

And ill it doth beseem your holiness,

To separate the husband and the wife.

Abb. Be quiet, and depart, thou shalt not have him. [Exit Abbess.]

Luc. Complain unto the duke of this indignity.

Adr. Come, go ; I will fall prostrate at his feet,

And never rise until my tears and prayers

Have won his grace to come in person hither,

And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five :

Anon, I am sure, the duke himself in person

Comes this way to the melancholy vale ;

The place of death and sorry execution,

Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Ang. Upon what cause ?

Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan merchant,

Who put unluckily into this bay

Against the laws and statutes of this town,

Behaved publicly for his offence.

Ang. See, where they come ; we will behold his death.

Luc. Kneel to the duke, before he pass the abbey.

Enter Duke attended ; AEGEON bare-headed ; with the Huntsman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly,

If any friend will pay the sum for him,

He shall not die, so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbess !

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady ;

It cannot be, that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband,—

Whom I made lord of me and all I had,
At your important letters,—this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him;
That desperately he hurried through the street, (With him his bondman, all as mad as he,)
Doing displeasure to the citizens
By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him;
And, with his mad attendant and himself,
Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,
Met us again, and, madly bent on us,
Chased us away; till, raising of more aid,
We came again to bind them: then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursued them;
And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since, thy husband serv'd me in my wars;

And I to thee engag'd a prince's word,
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.—
Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate,
And bid the lady abbess come to me;
I will determine this, before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistress, mistress, shift and save yourself;
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the maids a-row, and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have singed off with brands of fire;

And ever as it blazed, they threw on him
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair:
My master preaches patience to him, while
His man with scissars nicks him like a fool:
And, sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjuror.

Adr. Peace, fool, thy master and his man are here;
And that is false, thou dost report to us.

Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
I have not breath'd almost, since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you:

(Cry within.)

Hark, hark, I hear him, mistress; fly, be gone.
Duke. Come, stand by me, fear nothing: Guard with halberds.

Adr. Ah me, it is my husband! Witness you,
That he is borne about invisible:
Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here;
And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke, oh, grant me justice!

Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood,
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Ege. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus, and Dromio.

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there.

She, whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife;
That hath abused and dishonour'd me,
Even in the strength and height of injury!
Beyond imagination is the wrong,
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.
Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors
upon me,

While she, with harlots, feasted in my house.
Duke. A grievous fault: Say, woman, didst thou so?

Adr. No, my good lord;—myself, he, and my sister,

To-day did dine together: So befall my soul,
As this is false, he burdens me withal!

Luc. Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth!

Ang. O perjur'd women! they are both forsworn:
In this the madman justly chargeth them.

Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say:
Neither disturb'd with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit, my wrongs might make one wiser man,
This woman lock'd me out this day from din:
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with Could witness it, for he was with me then;
Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porcupine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him: In the street I met him
And, in his company, that gentleman.
There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain, Which, God he knows, I saw not: for the
He did arrest me with an officer.

I did obey; and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats: he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the officer,
To go in person with me to my house.

By the way we met
My wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile confederates; along with them
They brought one Pinch; a hungry lean-fac'd lain,

A meer anatomy, a mountebank,
A thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller;
A needy, hollow-ey'd, sharp-looking wretch
A living dead man: this pernicious slave,
Forsooth, took on him as a conjuror;
And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no face, as 'twere, outfacing me,
Cries out, I was possess'd: then altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me there
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together:
Till goaving with my teeth my bonds in su:
I gain'd my freedom, and immediately
Ran hither to your grace; whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames and great indignities.

Ang. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness
him;

That he dined not at home, but was lock'd
Duke. But had he such a chain of thee,
Ang. He had, my lord: and when he ran:

These people saw the chain about his neck.

Mer. Besides, I will be sworn, these ears Heard you confess you had the chain of him
After you first forswore it on the mart,
And, thereupon, I drew my sword on you;
And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by me.

Ant. E. I never came within these abbey
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me
I never saw the chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false, you burden me withal.

Duke. What an intricate impeach is this!
I think, you all have drank of Circe's cup.
If here you hous'd him, here he would have
If he were mad, he would not plead so cold.
You say, he dined at home; the goldsmith
Denies that saying:—Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E. Sir, he dined with her there, Porcupine.

Cour. He did; and from my finger snatch
ring.

Ant. E. 'Tis true, my liege, this ring I had.
Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey?

Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your Duke. Why, this is strange:—Go call the hither;

I think, you are all mated, or stark mad.
[Exit an Attendant.]

Ege. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me a word;

Haply, I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the sum, that may deliver me.

Duke. Speak freely, Syracusan, what thou

Is not your name, sir, call'd Antipholus?
 Not that your bondman, Dromio?
 E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir,
 I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords;
 and I Dromio, and his man, unbound.
 I am sure, you both of you remember me.
 E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;
 they were bound, as you are now.
 Why look you strange on me? you know me well.
 E. I never saw you in my life, till now.
 Oh! grief hath chang'd me, since you saw me last;
 careful hours, with Time's deformed hand, written strange defeatures in my face:
 Will me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
 E. Neither.
 Dromio, nor thou?
 E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.
 I am sure, thou dost.
 E. Ay, sir? but I am sure, I do not; and ever a man denies, you are now bound to him.
 Not know my voice! O, time's extremity!
 How so crack'd and splitt'd my poor tongue,
 in short years, that here my only son not my feeble key of untun'd cares?
 Now this grained face of mine be hid consuming winter's drizzled snow,
 the conduits of my blood froze up;
 In my night of life some memory,
 ting lamps some fading glimmer left,
 I deaf ears a little use to hear:
 O, old witnesses (I cannot err),
 How art my son Antipholus.
 E. I never saw my father in my life.
 But seven years since, in Syracuse, boy, how'st we parted: but, perhaps, my son,
 am'st to acknowledge me in misery.
 E. The duke, and all that know me in the city, assess with me, that it is not so;
 I saw Syracuse in my life.
 I tell thee, Syracusan, twenty years been patron to Antipholus, which time he ne'er saw Syracuse:
 My age and dangers make thee dot.

Abbess, with ANTIPHOLUS Syracusan, and DROMIO Syracusan.
 Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd. [All gather to see him.]
 I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
 One of these men is Genius to the other;
 if these: Which is the natural man, and the spirit? Who deciphers them?
 I, sir, am Dromio; command him away.
 I, sir, am Dromio; pray, let me stay.
 Egeon, art thou not? or else his ghost?
 O, my old master! who hath bound him
 me?
 Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
 as a husband by his liberty:—
 I'd Egeon, if thou be'st the man, as a wife once call'd Emilia,
 as thee at a burden two fair sons:
 as be'st the same Egeon, speak,
 as I unto the same Emilia?
 If I dream not, thou art Emilia;
 if she, tell me, where is that son,
 tied with thee on the fatal raft?
 My men of Epidamnus, he, and I, twin Dromio, all were taken up;
 and by, rude fishermen of Corinth took Dromio and my son from them, they left with those of Epidamnus:
 I became of them, I cannot tell;
 I fortune that you see me in.
 Why, here begins his morning story right;
 O Antipholus's, these two so like,
 O two Dromio's, one in semblance,— or arguing of her wreck at sea,—

These are the parents to these children,
 Which accidentally are met together.
 Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first.
Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.
Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious
 lord.
Dro. E. And I with him.
Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior
 Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?
Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
Ant. E. No, I say nay to that.
Ant. S. And so do I, yet did she call me so;
 And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
 Did call me brother:—What I told you then,
 I hope, I shall have leisure to make good;
 If this be not a dream, I see, and hear.
Ang. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.
Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.
Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.
Ang. I think I did, sir; I deny it not.
Adr. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,
 By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.
Dro. E. No, none by me.
Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you,
 And Dromio my man did bring them me:
 I see, we still did meet each other's man,
 And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,
 And thereupon these Errors are arose.
Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father here.
Duke. It shall not need, thy father hath his life.
Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.
Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
 To go with us into the abbey here,
 And hear at large discours'd all our fortunes:—
 And all that are assembled in this place,
 That by this sympathized one day's error
 Have suffer'd wrong, go, keep us company,
 And we shall make full satisfaction.—
 Twenty-five years have I but gone in travail
 Of you, my sons; nor, till this present hour,
 My heavy burdens are deliver'd:
 The duke, my husband, and my children both,
 And you the calendars of their nativity,
 Go to a gossip's feast, and go with me;
 After so long grief, such nativity!
Duke. With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast.
[Exeunt Duke, Abbess, Egeon, Courtezan, Merchant, Angelo, and Attendants.]
Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard?
Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou embark'd?
Dro. S. Your goods, that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur.
Ant. S. He speaks to me; I am your master,
 Dromio:
 Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon:
 Embrace thy brother there, rejoice with him.
[Exeunt Antipholus S. and E. Adr. and Luc.] Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,
 That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner;
 She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
Dro. E. Methinks, you are my glass, and not my brother:
 I see by you, I am a sweet-faced youth.
 Will you walk in to see their gossiping?
Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder.
Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?
Dro. S. We will draw cuts for the senior: till then, lead thou first.
Dro. E. Nay, then thus:
 We came into the world, like brother and brother;
 And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another. [Exeunt.]

Scene,—in the end of the fourth act, lies in England; through the rest of the play, in Scotland; and, chiefly, at Macbeth's castle.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

An open place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again,
 In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
 2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
 When the battle's lost and won:
 3 Witch. That will be ere set of sun.
 1 Witch. Where the place?
 2 Witch. Upon the heath:
 3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
 1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
All. Paddock calls:—Anon.—
 Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
 Hover through the fog and filthy air.

[Witches vanish.]

SCENE II.

A camp near Fores.

Alarm within. Enter King DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
 As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
 The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
 Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
 'Gainst my captivity:—Hail, brave friend!
 Say to the king the knowledge of the broil,
 As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtfully it stood;
 As two spent swimmers, that do cling together,
 And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel; for, to that,
 The multiplying villanies of nature
 Do swarm upon him,) from the western isles
 Of Kernes and Gallowglasses is supplied;
 And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
 Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak:
 For brave Macbeth, (well he deserves that name),
 Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
 Which smok'd with bloody execution,
 Like valour's minion,
 Carv'd out his passage, till he fac'd the slave;
 And ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
 Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
 And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!

Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflexion Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break:
 So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
 Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:
 No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
 Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heads,
 But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
 With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
 Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
 Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Sold. Yes:
 As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion.
 If I say sooth, I must report they were
 As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
 So they Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
 Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
 Or memorize another Golgotha,
 I cannot tell:—

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.
Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds;
 They smack of honour both:—Go, get him surgeons.
 [Exit Soldier, attended.]

Enter ROSSE.

Who comes here?
Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.
Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!
 should he look,
 That seems to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!
Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?
Rosse. From Fife, great king!

Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky,
 And fan our people cold.
 Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
 Assisted by that most disloyal traitor
 The thane of Cawdor, 'gan a dismal conflict:
 Till that Bellona's bridegroom, Iapp'd in proof,
 Confronted him with self-comparisons,
 Point against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
 Curbing his lavish spirit: And, to conclude,
 The victory fell on us:—

Dun. Great happiness!
Rosse. That now
 Sweno, the Norways' king, craves composition,
 Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
 Till he disbursed, at Saint Colmes' inch,

W.H. Worthington del.

MACBETH.

Act. 2. Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering, 57. Chancery Lane.

Ten thousand dollars to our general use.
Dun. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive
 Our bosom interest:—Go, pronounce his death,
 And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Rosse. I'll see it done.
Dun. What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
 2 Witch. Killing swine.
 3 Witch. Sister, where thou?
 1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chesnuts in her lap,
 And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd:—
 Give me, quoth I:

Arise! thee, witch! the rump-fed ronyon cries.
 Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger:
 But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
 And, like a rat without a tail,
 I'll do, I'll do, I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.
 1 Witch. Thou art kind.
 3 Witch. And I another.
 1 Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,
 All the quarters that they know
 I' the shipman's card,
 I will drain him dry as hay:
 Sleep shall, neither night nor day,
 Hang upon his pent-house lid;
 He shall live a man forbid:
 Weary sev'n-nights, nine times nine,
 Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:
 Though his bark cannot be lost,
 Yet it shall be tempest-toss'd.

Look what I have.
 2 Witch. Show me, show me.
 1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb, Wreck'd, as homeward he did come. [Drum within.]
 3 Witch. A drum, a drum;
 Macbeth doth come.

All, The weird sisters, hand in hand,
 Powers of the sea and land,
 Thus do go about, about;
 Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
 And thrice again to make up nine;
 Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Dun. How far is it call'd to Fores?—What are these,
 So wither'd, and so wild in their attire;
 That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth,
 And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught
 That man may question? You seem to understand me,
 By each at once her choppy finger laying
 Upon her skinny lips:—You should be women,
 And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
 That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can;—What are you?
 1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!
 2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane
 of Cawdor!
 3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem to fear Things, that do sound so fair?—I'the name of truth,
 Are ye fantastical, or that indeed,
 Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
 You greet with present grace, and great prediction
 Of noble having, and of royal hope,
 That does seem rapt withal; to me you speak not:
 If you can look into the seeds of time,
 And say, which grain will grow, and which will not;
 Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,
 Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!
 2 Witch. Hail!
 3 Witch. Hail!
 1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.
 2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:
 So, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!
Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more:
 By Sinel's death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;
 But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,
 A prosperous gentleman; and, to be king,
 Stands not within the prospect of belief,
 No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence
 You owe this strange intelligence? or why
 Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
 With such prophetic greetings?—Speak, I charge you! [Witches vanish.]

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
 And these are of them:—Whither are they van-ish'd?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal, melted

As breath into the wind.—'Would they had staid!
Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak about?
 Or have we eaten of the insane root,
 That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.
Ban. You shall be king.
Macb. And thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?
Ban. To the self-same tune, and words. Who's here?

Enter ROSSE and ANGUS.

Rosse. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
 The news of thy success: and when he reads
 Thy personal venture in the rebel's fight,
 His wonders and his praises do contend,
 What should be thine, or his: Silence! with that,
 In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,
 He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,
 Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
 Strange images of death. As thick as tale,
 Came post with post; and every one did bear
 Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
 And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent,
 To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
 To herald thee into his sight, not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
 He bade me, from him, call thee thane of Cawdor:
 In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
 For it is thine.

Ban. What, can the devil speak true?
Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives; why do you dress me
 In borrow'd robes?

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
 But under heavy judgment bears that life,
 Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was Combin'd with Norway; or did line the rebel
 With hidden help and vantage; or that with both
 He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
 But treasons capital, confess'd, and prov'd,
 Have overthrow'n him.

Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
 The greatest is behind.—Thanks for your pains.—
 Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
 When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
 Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, trusted home,
 Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
 Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
 And oftentimes to win us to our harm,
 The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
 Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
 In deepest consequence.—
 Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
 As happy prologues to the swelling act
 Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
 This supernatural soliciting
 Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—If ill,
 Why hath it given me earnest of success,
 Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
 If good, why do I yield to that suggestion,
 Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
 And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
 Against the use of nature? Present fears
 Are less than horrible imaginings:
 My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,

Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is,
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,

Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him
Like our strange garments; cleave not to the mould,
But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may;
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour:—my dull brain was wrought

With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn

The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.—
Think upon what hath chanc'd; and, at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts to each other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Fores. A room in the palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die: who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons;
Implored your highness' pardon; and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one, that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 'twere a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art,
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman, on whom I built
An absolute trust.—O worthiest cousin!

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSSE, and ANGUS.

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserv'd;
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and servants;
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing

Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
Thou hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so: let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow,

The harvest is your own.
Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm; whom we name hereafter,
The Prince of Cumberland: which honour must Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deserv'ers.—From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun.

My worthy Cawdor.
Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is
On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires!
Let not light see my black and deep desires.
The eye wink at the hand! yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so v.
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome.
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Inverness. A room in Macbeth's Castle.

Enter Lady MACBETH, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success;
I have learned by the perfectest report; the more in them than mortal knowledge. They burned in desire to question them further, they themselves—air, into which they vanished. They stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missing the king, who all-hail'd me Thane of Cawdor which title, before, these weird sisters saluted;
I referred me to the coming on of time, with-king that shalt be! This have I thought good liver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, be-ignorant of what greatness is promised thee, to thy heart, and farewell.

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt

Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee l
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear:
And chastise with the valour of my tongue
All, that impedes thee from the golden rou
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth see To have thee crowned withal.—What tidings?

Enter an Attendant.

Atten. The king comes here to-night.
Lady M. Thou'rt mad to do so.
Is not thy master with him? who, wer't so
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true; our coming:

One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him
He brings great news. The raven himself is [Exit Attendant.]

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, come, you
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me h
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, to
Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood,
Stop up the access and passage to remorse
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace bet
The effect and it! Come to my woman's
And take my milk for gall, you murder
Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick
And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell
That my keen knife see not the wound it

To cry, Hold, hold!—Great Glamis!
Cawdor!

Enter MACBETH.

Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter.
Thy letters have transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feel now

e in the instant.

My dearest love,
comes here to-night.

f. And when goes hence?
To-morrow,—as he purposes.

f. O, never that morrow see!

g, my thane, is as a book, where men strange matters:—To beguile the time, the time; bear welcome in your eye, id, your tongue: look like the innocent ser,

se serpent under it. He, that's coming, provided for: and you shall put t's great business into my despatch;
all to all our nights, and days to come by sovereign sway and masterdom.

We will speak further.

f. Only look up clear;
avour ever is to fear:
the rest to me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.

The same. Before the castle.

g. Servants of Macbeth attending.

NCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN,
JO, LENOX, MACDUFF, ROSSE,
S, and Attendants.

his castle hath a pleasant seat; the air sd sweetly recommends itself gentle senses.

This guest of summer,
e-baunting martlet, does approve,
'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath singly here: no jutty, frieze, buttress, s of vantage, but this bird hath made nd bed, and procreant cradle: where they
I and haunt, I have observ'd, the air

Enter Lady MACBETH.

See, see! our honour'd hostess!
that follows us, sometime is our trouble, ll we thank as love. Herein I teach you, shall bid God yield us for your pains,
s us for our trouble.

All our service
oint twice done, and then done double, and single business, to contend ose honours deep and broad, wherewith sty loads our house: For those of old, te dignities heap'd up to them,
our hermits.

Where's the thane of Cawdor?
d him at the heels, and had a purpose parveyor: but he rides well;
eat love, sharp as his spur, hath help him ve before us: Fair and noble hostess, ur guest to-night.

Your servants ever their audit at your highness' pleasure, urn your own.

Give me your hand:
e to mine host; we love him highly,
continue our graces towards him. [Exeunt.

nd torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, and divers Servants with dishes and ser-ons enter MACBETH.

f. If it were done, when 'tis done, then re well,

re quickly: If the assassination mel up the consequence, and catch, urease, success; that but this blow be be-all and the end-all here, upon this bank and shoal of time,—
o the life to come.—But, in these cases, ve judgment here: that we but teach ructions, which, being taught, return the inventor: This even-handed justice

Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off:
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on the other.—How now, what news?

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. He has almost supp'd; Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not, he has?

Macb. We will proceed no further in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in the newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since?
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Would'st thou have that,
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem;
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i'th' adage?

Macb. Pr'ythee, peace:
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none.

Lady M. What beast was it then,
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness
now

Does unmake you. I have given suck; and know
How tender 'tis, to love the babe that milks me;
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from its boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn, as you Have doue to this.

Macb. If we should fail,— We fail!

Lady M. But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, (Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him,) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassel so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: When in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon His spongy officers: who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb. Bring forth men-children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd,
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have don't?

Lady M. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. [Exeunt.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

The same. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, and a Servant, with a torch before them.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take't, 'tis later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword:—There's husbandry in heaven,

Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too. A heavy summons lies like lead upon me, And yet I would not sleep: Merciful powers! Restrain in me the cur-ed thoughts, that nature Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword;—

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.

Who's there?

Mach. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed; He hath been in unusual pleasure, and Sent forth great largess to your offices: This diamond he greets your wife withal, By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up In measureless content.

Mach. Being unprepar'd, Our will became the servant to defect;

Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.

I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:

To you they have show'd some truth.

Mach. I think not of them:

Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve, Would spend it in some words upon that business, If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure. Mach. If you shall cleave to my consent,—when 'tis, It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none, In seeking to augment it, but still keep My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear, I shall be counsel'd.

Mach. Good repose, the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir; The like to you!

Mach. Go, bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready, She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

Is this a dagger, which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.

Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible

To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but

A dagger of the mind: a false creation,

Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?

I see thee yet, in form as palpable

As this, which now I draw.

Thou marshal'st me the way, that I was going;

And such an instrument I was to use.

Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,

Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;

And on thy blade and dudgeon, gouts of blood,

Which was not so before.—There's no such thing:

It is the bloody business, which informs

Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse

The curtain'd sleep; now witchcraft celebrates

Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder,

Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,

Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,

With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design

Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth,

Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear

The very stones prate of my where-about,

And take the present horror from the time,

Which now suits with it.—Whiles I threaten, he lives;

Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

[A bell rings.]

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.

Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell That summons thee to heaven, or to hell.

SCENE II.

The same.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. That, which hath made the hath made me bold:

It was the owl, that shriek'd; and the fatal Which gives the stern'st good-night. He The doors are open; and the surfeited g Do mock their charge with snore: I have their possets,

Enter MACBETH.

Mach. I have done the deed:—Did hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the Did not you speak?

Mach. When?

Lady M. Now.

Mach. As I

[Exit. Knocking within.
Whence is that knocking?
With me, when every noise appals me?
Is there here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes!
Great Neptune's ocean wash this blood my hand? No; this my hand will rather,
Wash multitudinous seas incarnardine,
Than green one red.

Re-enter Lady MACBETH.

My hands are of your colour; but I shame
To wear that white. [Knock.] I hear a knocking at the entry:—retire we to our chamber:
The night-crow's cry and the owl's scree,
Do still tell us of this deed:
Is it then? Your constancy
I am unattuned to.—[Knocking.] Hark!
A knocking:
A night-gown, lest occasion call us,
To see what watchers:—Be not lost
In your thoughts,
To know my deed,—'twere best not know

I can see with thy knocking! Ay, 'would thou

SCENE III.

The same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.
Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man of hell-gate, he should have old turning [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock: Who's that name of Belzebub? Here's a farmer, that dabbles himself in the expectation of plenty:
Time to come, he'll have napkins enough about you;
sweat for't. [Knocking.] Knock, knock:
Who's there, i'th' other devil's name? 'Faith here's a man, that could swear in both the scales of justice, and in the scales of treason; he was once a kinsman to the king, and a noble; who committed treason enough to heaven, yet could not equivocate to heaven:
No more of this equivocation. [Knock.
Who's there? 'Faith, here's a man, that comes hither, for stealing out of a kitchen; Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knock.] Knock, knock: Never at this hour:—But this place is too cold for my sitting:—I'll not go further: I had travelling in some of all professions, that travelling way to the everlasting bonfire.
] Anon, anon; I pray you, remember [Opens the gate.

Enter MACDUFF and LENOX.

'Tis as it solate, friend, ere you went to bed,
to lie so late?
Aith, sir, we were carousing till the dawn; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of sleep.
What three things does drink especially affect?
A surry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine.
A surry, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance: much drink may be said to be an equivocator: it makes him, and it mars him; it makes him, and it takes him off; it perverts, and disheartens him; makes him stand to his word; in conclusion, equivocates him in his word, and gives him the lie, leaves him. Believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.
Aith, sir, i'th' very throat o'me:
I was stung for his lie; and, I think, being set for him, though he took up my legs and set I made a shift to cast him.
Aith, my master stirring?—
Ay, he's awak'd him; here he comes.

Enter MACBETH.

Good-morrow, noble sir!
Good-morrow, both!
The king stirring, worthy thane?
Not yet.

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him;
I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet, 'tis one.

Macd. The labour we delight in, physicks pain.
This is the door.

Macb. I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduff.

Len. Goes the king
From hence to-day?

Macb. He does:—He did appoint so.
Len. The night has been unruly: Where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard i'th' air; strange screams of death;
And prophesying, with accents terrible,
Of dire combustion, and confus'd events,
New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth
Was feverous, and did shake.

Macb. 'Twas a rough night.
Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor heart, Cannot conceive, nor name thee!

Macb. Len. What's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece!
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o'the building.

Macb. What is't you say? the life?
Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight.

With a new Gorgon:—Do not bid me speak;
See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake! Awake!—

[Execut Macbeth and Lenox.
Ring the alarum-bell!—Murder! and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm! awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself!—up, up, and see
The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprights,
To countenance this horror! [Bell rings.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak,—

Macd. O, gentle lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,
Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Enter BANQUO.

Our royal master's murder'd!
Lady M. Woe, alas!
What, in our house?

Ban. Too cruel, any where.—
Dear Duff, I pry'thee, contradict thyself,
And say, it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant,
There's nothing serious in mortality:
All is but toys: renown, and grace, is dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know it:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O, by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't:
Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood,
So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found Upon their pillows:

They star'd, and were distracted; no man's life
Was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Macd.

Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate, and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love

Out-ran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature,

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmanly breech'd with gore: Who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart

Courage, to make his love known?

Lady M.

Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady.

Mal.

Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. What should be spoken here,

Where our fate, hid within an augre-hole,

May rush, and seize us? Let's away; your tears

Are not yet brew'd.

Mal.

Nor our strong sorrow on

The foot of motion.

Ban.

Look to the lady:—

[Lady Macbeth is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,

That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:

In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence,

Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight

Of treasonous malice.

Macb.

And so do I.

All.

So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,

And meet i'the hall together.

All.

Well contented.

[Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:

To show an unfelt sorrow, is an office,

Which the false man does easy: I'll to England.

Don.

To Ireland, I; our separate fortune

Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,

There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,

The nearer bloody.

Mal.

This murderous shaft, that's shot,

Hath not yet lighted; and our safest way

Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;

And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,

But shift away: There's warrant in that theft,

Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Fores. A room in the palace.

Enter BANQUO.

Ban. Thou hast it now, King, Cawdor, Glamis, all,

As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,

Thou play'st most foully for't: yet it was said,

It should not stand in thy posterity;

But that myself should be the root, and father

Of many kings. If there come truth from them,

(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine,)

Why, by the verities on thee made good,

May they not be my oracles as well,

And set me up in hope? But, hush; no more.

Senet sounded. Enter MACBETH, as King; Lady

MACBETH, as Queen; LENOX, ROSSE,

Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M.

If he had been forgotten,

It had been as a gap in our great feast,

 therewithal, we shall have cause of state,
 us jointly. Hie you to horse: Adieu, return at night. Goes Fleance with you?
 Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon us.
 I wish your horses swift, and sure of foot;
 I do commend you to their backs.

1.— [Exit Banquo.]
 No man be master of his time, on at night; to make society never welcome, we will keep ourself per-time alone: while then, God be with us. [Enter Lady Macbeth, Lords, Ladies, &c.] a word: Attend those men our pleasure?
 They are, my lord, without the palace gate.
 Bring them before us.—[Exit Atten.] To thus, is nothing;
 be safely thus:—Our fears in Banquo nap; and in his royalty of nature that, which should be fear'd: 'Tis much she dares;
 that dauntless temper of his mind,
 a wisdom, that doth guide his valour in safety. There is none, but he, being I do fear: and, under him,
 us is rebuk'd; as, it is said, stony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters, first they put the name of King upon me, lest them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
 he'd him father to a line of kings:
 y head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
 a barren sceptre in my gripe,
 to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
 of mine succeeding. If it be so,
 Banquo's issue have I filed my mind;
 and the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
 hours in the vessel of my peace to them; and mine eternal jewel
 the common enemy of man, them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
 Now, then, come, fate, into the list,
 and oppion me to the utterance!—Who's there!

Enter Attendant, with two Murderers.
 Open the door, and stay there till we call.
 [Exit Attendant.]
 Not yesterday we spoke together?
 'Tis was, so please your highness.
 Well then, now
 a consider'd of my speeches? Know, was he, in the times past, which held you fortune; which, you thought, had been ocent self: this I made good to you conference; pass'd in probation with you, a were borne in hand; how cross'd; the struments;
 ought with them; and all things else, that ight,
 a soul, and to a notion craz'd,
 us did Banquo.

You made it known to us.
 I did so; and went further, which is now at of second meeting. Do you find tience so predominant in your nature, a can let this go? Are you so gossell'd, for this good man, and for his issue,
 heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
 gard yours for ever?

We are men, my liege.
 Ay, in the catalogus ye go for men;
 Is, and greybonds, mongrels, spaniels, curs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are cleped he name of dogs: the valued file ushes the swift, the slow, the subtle, se-keeper, the hunter, every one ug to the gift, which bounteous nature him clos'd; whereby he does receive addition, from the bill
 ies them all alike: and so of men.
 you have a station in the file,
 in the worst rank of manhood, say it;
 ill put that business in your bosoms, execution takes your enemy off;
 you to the heart and love of us,

Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
 Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege,
 Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
 Have so incens'd, that I am reckless what I do, to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,
 So weary with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
 That I would set my life on any chance,
 To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you Know, Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.
 Macb. So is he mine: and in such bloody distance,
 That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near'st of life: And though I could
 With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
 And bid my will avouch it; yet I must not,
 For certain friends, that are both his and mine,
 Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall,
 Whom I myself strack down: and thence it is,
 That I to your assistance do make love;
 Masking the business from the common eye,
 For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord, Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,
 I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
 Acquaint you with the perfect spy o'the time,
 The moment on't; for't must be done to-night,
 And something from the palace; always thought,
 That I require a clearness: And with him,
 (To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work,) Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
 Whose absence is no less material to me
 Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
 Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
 I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.
 Macb. I'll call upon you straight; abide within.
 It is concluded:—Banquo, thy soul's flight,
 If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.

[Exit.

SCENE II.

The same. Another room.

Enter Lady MACBETH and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
 Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.
 Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
 For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.
 Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
 Where our desire is got without content:
 'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
 Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord? why do you keep alone,
 Of sorriest fancies your companions making?
 Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died
 With them, they think on? Things without remedy
 Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it;
 She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor malice
 Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let
 The frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,
 Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
 In the affliction of these terrible dreams,
 That shake us nightly: Better be with the dead,
 Whom we, to gain our place, have sent to peace,
 Than on the torture of the mind to lie
 In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
 After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;
 Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
 Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
 Can touch him further!

Lady M. Come on;
 Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
 Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night.

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:
 Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;

Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue :
 Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honours in these flattering streams ;
 And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
 Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.
Macb. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife !
 Thou know'st, that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.
Macb. There's comfort yet ; they are assailable ;
 Then be thou jocund : Ere the bat hath flown
 His cloister'd flight ; ere, to black Hecate's summons,
 The shard-borne beetle, with his drowy hums,
 Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
 A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done ?
Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
 Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
 Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day ;
 And with thy bloody and invisible hand
 Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond, Which keeps me pale !—Light thickens ; and the crow
 Makes wing to the rooky wood :
 Good things of day begin to droop and drowse ;
 Whiles night's black agents to their prey do rouse.
 Thou marvell'st at my words : but hold thee still ;
 Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill :
 So prythee, go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A park or lawn, with a gate leading to the palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us ?
 3 Mur. Macbeth.
 2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust ; since he delivers
 Our offices, and what we have to do,
 To the direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.
 The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day :
 Now spurs the lated traveller apace,
 To gain the timely inn ; and near approaches
 The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark ! I hear horses.
 Ban. [Within.] Give us light there, ho !
 2 Mur. Then is he ; the rest
 That are within the note of expectation,
 Already are i' the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.
 3 Mur. Almost a mile ; but he does usually,
 So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
 Make it their walk.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, a Servant with a torch preceding them.

2 Mur. A light, a light !
 3 Mur. 'Tis he.
 1 Mur. Stand to't.
 Ban. It will be rain to night.
 1 Mur. Let it come down.

[Assaults Banquo.]
 Ban. O, treachery ! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly ;
 Thou may'st revenge.—O slave !

[Dies. Fleance and Servant escape.]
 3 Mur. Who did strike out the light ?
 1 Mur. Was't not the way ?
 3 Mur. There's but one down ; the son is fled.
 2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.
 1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A room of state in the palace.

A banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady MACBETH, ROSSE, LENOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees, sit down :

 And play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state ; but, in best time
 We will require her welcome.

Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hand;
Which must be acted, ere they may be scann'd.

SCENE V.

The heath.

Thunder. Enter HECATE, meeting the three Witches.

1 Witch. Why, bow now, Hecate? you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams, as you are,
Saucy, and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffick with Macbeth,
In riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful, and wrathful: who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.

But make amends now: Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron Meet me i'the morning; thither he Will come to know his destiny.

Your vessels, and your spells, provide,
Your charms, and every thing beside:
I am for the air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal-fatal end.

Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound,
I'll catch it, ere it come to ground:

And that, distill'd by magic slights,
Shall raise such artificial sprights,
As, by the strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him on to his confusion:

He shall spuru fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.
Hark, I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit.]

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Fores. A room in the palace.

Enter LENOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne: The gracious
Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth:—marry, he was dead:—
And the right-valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom, you may say, if it please you, Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.

Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous
It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,
To kill their gracious father? damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight,
In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive,
To hear the men deny it. So that, I say,
He has born all things well: and I do think,
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key,
(As, an't please heaven, he shall not,) they should find
What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.

But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace: Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace,
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect: thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, on his aid
To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward:
That, by the help of these, (with Him above
To ratify the work,) we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights;
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives;

Do faithful homage, and receive free honours:
All which we pine for now: And this report Hath so exasperate the king, that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did: and with an absolute, Sir,
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums; as who should say, *You'll rue th'
That clogs me with this answer.*

Len. And that well
Advise him to a caution, to hold what distant
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel Fly to the court of England, and unfold
His message ere he come; that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. My prayers with him! [Exit Len.]

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

A dark cave. In the middle, a cauldron boiling.

Thunder. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
2 Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

3 Witch. Harper cries:—'Tis time, tis time.

1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go;

In the poison'd entrails throw.—

Toad, that under coldest stone

Days and nights hast thirty-one

Swelter'd venom sleeping got,

Boil thou first i' the charmed pot!

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,

In the cauldron boil and bake:

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,

Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,

Lizard's leg, and owl's wing,

For a charm of powerful trouble,

Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and, cauldron, bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf;

Witches' mummy; maw, and gulf,

Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark;

Root of hemlock, digg'd i' the dark;

Liver of blaspheming Jew;

Gall of goat, and slips of yew,

Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse;

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips;

Finger of birth-strangled babe,

Ditch deliver'd by a drab,

Make the gruel thick and slab:

Add thereto a tiger's chauldron,

For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire, burn; and cauldron, bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE, and the other three Witches.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;

And every one shall share i' the gains.

And now about the cauldron sing,

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all, that you put in.

[Musick.]

SONG.

Black spirits and white,

Red spirits and grey;

Mingle, mingle, mingle,

You that mingle may.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes:—
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags?
What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name
Macb. I conjure you, by that, which you

Though you untie the winds, and let them

Though bladed corn be lodg'd, and trees blow-

Though castles topple on their warders' heads

Though palaces, and pyramids, do slope

Their heads to their foundations; though the

Of nature's germins tumble all together,

Even till destruction sicken, answer me

To what I ask you.

mouths,

Or from our masters'?

Macb. Call them, let me see

1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath

Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweat

From the murderer's gibbet, throw

Into the flame.

All. Come, high, or low;

Thyself, and office, dextly show.

Thunder. An Apparition of an armed hea-

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

1 Witch. He knows thy name

Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! Beware

duff;

Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—

[Exit App.]

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good

thanks;

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright:—But o-

1 Witch. He will not be commanded:

another,

More potent than the first.

To ce his line. No boasting like a fool ;
To ed I'll do, before this purpose cool :
To more sights !—Where are these gentlemen ?
To bring me where they are.

SCENE II.

Fife. A room in Macduff's castle.

Lady MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSSE.
To ed. What had he done, to make him fly
To s land ?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none :
To His flight was madness : When our actions do not,
To Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not,
To Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.
To L. Macd. Wisdom ! to leave his wife, to leave
To his babes,

His mansion, and his titles, in a place
To From whence himself does fly ? He loves us not ;
To He wants the natural touch : for the poor wren,
To The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
To Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
To All is the fear, and nothing is the love ;
To As little is the wisdom, where the flight
To So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz,
To I pray you, school yourself : But, for your husband,
To He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
To The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much further :
To But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
To And do not know ourselves ; when we hold rumour
To From what we fear, yet know not what we fear ;
To But float upon a wild and violent sea,
To Each way, and move.—I take my leave of you :
To Shall not be long but I'll be here again :
To Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
To Blessing upon you !

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
To Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
To It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort :
To I take my leave at once.

[Exit Rosse.]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead ;
To And what will you do now ? How will you live ?
To Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies ?
To Son. With what I get, I mean ; and so do they.
To L. Macd. Poor bird ! thou'dst never fear the net,
To nor lime,

The pit-fall, nor the gin.
To Son. Why should I, mother ? Poor birds they
To are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.
To L. Macd. Yes, he is dead ; how wilt thou do for
To a father ?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband ?
To L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
To Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit ; and To yet, I'faith,
To With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother ?
To L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor ?
To L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.
To Son. And be all traitors, that do so ?

L. Macd. Every one that does so, is a traitor,
To and must be hanged.
To Son. And must they all be hanged, that swear
To and lie ?

L. Macd. Every one.
To Son. Who must hang them ?
To L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools : for
To there are liars and swearers enough to beat the
To honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey !
To But how wilt thou do for a father ?
To Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him : if
To you would not, it were a good sign, that I should
To quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler ! how thou talk'st.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame ! I am not to you known,
To Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
To I doubt, some danger does approach you nearly :
To If you will take a homely man's advice,
To Be not found here ; hence, with your little ones !
To To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage ;
To To do worse to you, were fell cruelty,
To Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you !
To I dare abide no longer.

[Exit Messenger.]

L. Macd. Whither should I fly ?
To I have done no harm. But I remember now

I am in this earthly world; where, to do harm,
Is often laudable: to do good, sometime,
Accounted dangerous folly: Why then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say, I have done no harm?—What are these faces?

Enter Murderers.

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place so un sanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.

Mur. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou ly'st, thou shag-ear'd villain.

Mur. What, you egg? [Stabbing him.]

Young fry of treachery!

Son. He has killed me, mother:

Run away, I pray you. [Dies.]

[Exit Lady Macduff, crying Murder, and pursued by the Murderers.]

SCENE III.

England. A room in the king's palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword; and, like good men,
Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom: Each new morn,
New widows howl; new orphans cry; new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and, what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.

What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well;
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve of him through me; and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb,
To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil,
In an imperial charge. But 'crave your pardon;
That, which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul, would wear the brows of grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macd. I have lost my hopes.
Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.

Why in that ranness left you wife, and child,
(Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties:—You may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs,

Thy title is affeer'd!—Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain, that thou think'st,
For the whole space, that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think, our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer
Of goodly thousands:—But, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before;
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him, that shall succeed.

Macd. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean: in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,

That, when they shall be open'd, black Macd
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor st Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Macd. Not in the legio
Of horrid hell, can come a devil more damn'
In evils, to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin,
That has a name: But there's no bottom, no
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daug
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fil
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will: Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Macd. Boundless intemp
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hood
We have willing dames enough; there cann
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this, there gro
In my most ill-compos'd affection, such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should fo
Quarrels unjust against the good, and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice
Sticks deeper; grows with more pernicious Than summer-seeding lust: and it hath be
The sword of our slain kings: Yet do not fe Scotland hath foysons to fill up your will,
Of your mere own: All these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none: The king-becoming
As justice, verity, temperance, stabbness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish for them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I a Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland! Scotland!
Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak
I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O nation miserable,
With an untid'd tyrant bloody-sceptre'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days a
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal
Was a most sainted king; the queen, that bor
Of her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself,
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my l
Thy hope ends here!

Mal. Macduff, this noble p
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my th
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish M
By many of these trains hath sought to win
Into his power; and modest wisdom plucks
From over-credulous haste: But God above Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspoke mine own detraction; here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow; and delight

a truth, than life : my first false speaking upon myself : What I am truly, and my poor country's to command :
indeed, before thy here-approach,
and, with ten thousand warlike men,
at a point, was setting forth :
I'll together ; And the chance, of goodness, or warranted quarrel ! Why are you silent ?
Each welcome and unwelcome things at once,
to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Well ; more anon.—Comes the king forth,
say you ?
Ay, sir : there are a crew of wretched souls, to his cure : their malady convinces me as an assay of art ; but, at his touch, a healing hath heaven given his hand,
and sends them amend.

I thank you, doctor.

[Exit Doctor.]

What's the disease he means ?
'Tis call'd the evil :
miraculous work in this good king ;
then, since my here-remain in England, on him do. How he solicits heaven, best knows : but strangely-visited people,
and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
which despair of surgery, he cures ;
a golden stamp about their necks,
with holy prayers : and 'tis spoken, that succeeding royalty he leaves to his benediction. With this strange virtue, he has a heavenly gift of prophecy ;
and his blessings hang about his throne,
to crown him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

See, who comes here ?
My countryman ; but yet I know him not.
My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Know him now : Good God, betimes remove these, that make us strangers !

Sir, Amen.

Stand Scotland where it did ?
Alas, poor country ;
raid to know itself ! It cannot survive our mother, but our grave : where nothing, knows nothing, is once seen to smile ;
and sighs, and groans, and shrieks, that rent
the air, cannot mark'd ; where violent sorrow seems a man's ecstasy ; the dead man's knell is heard ask'd, for who ; and good men's lives are flung as the flowers in their caps, and their heads are there sicken.

O, relation,

and yet too true !
What is the newest grief ?
That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker ;
and teems a new one.

How does my wife ?

Why, well.

And all my children ?

Well too.

The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace ?
No ; they were well at peace, when I did see them.

Be not a niggard of your speech ; How comes it ?

When I came hither to transport the tidings,
I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour of worthy fellows, that were out ;
as to my belief witness'd the rather,
I saw the tyrant's power a-foot :

Now is the time of help ; your eye in Scotland
Will create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither : gracious England hath Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men ;
An older, and a better soldier, none,
That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. 'Would I could answer
This comfort with the like ! But I have words,
That would he howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they ?
The general cause ? or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast ?

Rosse. No mind, that's honest,
But in it shares some woe ; though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph ! I guess at it.
Rosse. Your castle is surpris'd ; your wife, and babes,

Savagely slaughter'd : to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven !—
What, man ! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows ;
Give sorrow words : the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My children too ?

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence !
My wife kill'd too ?

I have said.

Rosse. Be comforted :
Mal. Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones ?
Did you say, all ?—O, hell-kite !—All !
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop ?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so ;

But I must also feel it as a man :
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did Heaven look on,

And would not take their part ? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee ! naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls : Heaven rest them
now !

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword : let grief
Convert to anger ; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue !—But, gentle
heaven,

Cut short all intermission ; front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself ;
Within my sword's length set him ; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too !

Mal. This tune goes manly.

Come, go we to the king ; our power is ready ;
Our lack is nothing but our leave : Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may ;

The night is long, that never finds the day.
[Exit.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

unsinnant. A room in the castle.

Doctor of Physick, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked ?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature! to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumbrly agitation, besides her walking, and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! this is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her, stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark, she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; Two; Why, then 'tis time to do't:—Hell is murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account!—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him!

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife; Where is she now!—What, will these hands ne'er be clean!—No more o'that, my lord, no more o'that: you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. 'Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: Yet I have known those, which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown; look not so pale:—I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out of his grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand; What's done, cannot be undone: To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit Lady Macbeth.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles: Infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine, than the physician.—God, God, forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her:—So, good night: My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight: I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Eaeunt.]

 ARD and his Son, MACDUFF, MEN-E, CATHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX,
 SE and Soldiers, marching.

Cousins, I hope, the days are near at hand, ambers will be safe.

We doubt it nothing.
 What wood is this before us?

The wood of Birnam.
 Let every soldier hew him down a bough, ur't before him; thereby shall we shadow mbers of our host, and make discovery report of us.

It shall be done.
 We learn no other, but the confident tyrant till in Dunsinane, and will endure ting down before't.

'Tis his main hope:
 ere there is advantage to be given,
 ore and less hath given him the revolt;
 oe serve with him but constrained things, hearts are absent too.

Let our just censures the true event, and put we on ious soldiership.

The time approaches
 ll with due decision make us know ve shall say we have, and what we owe.
 ts speculative their unsure hopes relate;
 ain issue strokes must arbitrate:
 s which, advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V.

Dunsinane. Within the castle.
 , with drums and colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
 is still, They come: Our castle's strength
 igh a siege to scorn: here let them lie, ine, and the ague, eat them up:
 ey not fore'd with those, that should be ours,
 ht have met them darest, heard to beard, at them backward home. What is that rise?
 [A cry within, of women.]
 it is the cry of women, my good lord.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears:
 The time has been, my senses would have cool'd
 To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair
 Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and stir
 As life were in't: I have supp'd full with horrors;
 Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
 Cannot once start me.—Wherefore was that cry?
 Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
 There would have been a time for such a word.—
 To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
 Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
 To the last syllable of recorded time;
 And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
 The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
 Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
 That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
 And then is heard no more: it is a tale
 Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.—

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,
 I shall report that, which I say I saw,
 But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.
 Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
 I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
 The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar, and slave! [Striking him.]
 Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so:
 Within this three mile may you see it coming;
 I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
 Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
 Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth,
 I care not if thou dost for me as much.—
 I pull in resolution; and begin
 To doubt the equivocation of the fiend,
 That lies like truth: Fear not, till Birnam wood
 Do come to Dunsinane;—and now a wood Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and out!—
 If this, which he avouches, does appear,
 There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here.
 I'gin to be a-weary of the sun,
 And wish the estate o' the world were now undone.—
 Ring the alarm bell:—Blow, wind! come, wrack!
 At least we'll die with harness on our back.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

The same. A plain before the castle.

Enter, with drums and colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c. and their army, with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough, your leavy screens throw down,
 And show like those you are:—You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
 Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we,
 Shall take upon us what else remains to do,
 According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.—
 Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
 Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
 Those clamorous barbingers of blood and death.
 [Exeunt. Alarums continued.]

SCENE VII.

The same. Another part of the plain.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
 But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What's he,
 That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter Young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?
 Macb. Thou't be afraid to hear it.
 Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
 Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.
Yo. Siv. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
 More hateful to mine ear.
Macb. No, nor more fearful.
Yo. Siv. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword
 I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.
[They fight, and young Seward is slain.]
Macb. Thou wast born of woman.—
 But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish'd by man, that's of a woman born. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is:—Tyrant, show thy face:
 If thou be'st slain, and with no stroke of mine,
 My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
 I cannot strike at wretched kernes, whose arms
 Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth,
 Or else my sword, with an unhaterr'd edge,
 I sheathe again undeeded. There thou should'st be;
 By this great clatter, one of greatest note
 Seems bruited: Let me find him, fortune!
 And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarum.]

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord; the castle's gently render'd:
 The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
 The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
 The day almost itself professes yours,
 And little is to do.
Mal. We have met with foes,
 That strike beside us.
Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exit. Alarums.]

Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
 On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
 Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
 But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
 With blood of thine already.
Macd. I have no words,
 My voice is in my sword; thou bloodier villain
 Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]
Macb. Thou losest labour:
 As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
 With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed;
 Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
 I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
 To one of woman born.
Macd. Despair thy charm;
 And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd,
 Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd.
Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue, that tells me so,
 For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
 And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
 That palter with us in a double sense;
 That keep the word of promise to our ear,
 And break it to our hope.—I'll not fight with thee.
Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
 And live to be the show and gaze o'the time.
 We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
 Painted upon a pole; and underwrit,
 Here may you see the tyrant.

Macb. I'll not yield,
 To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
 And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
 Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
 And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
 Yet I will try the last: Before my body
 I throw my warlike shield; lay on, Macduff;
 And damn'd be him that first cries, Hold, enough!
[Exit, fight.]

*Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with drum and colours MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSSE, LENOX, ANGUS, CATHNESS, MENTETH, and
 others.*

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were arriv'd.
Siw. Some must go off: and yet, by these I
 So great a day as this is cheaply bought.
Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a sold debt:
 He only liv'd but till he was a man;
 The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
 In the unshrinking station where he fought,
 But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?
Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field: your of sorrow
 Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
 It hath no end.
Siw. Had he his hurts before?
Rosse. Ay, on the front.
Siw. Why then, God's soldier be Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
 I would not wish them to a fairer death:
 And so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow
 And that I'll spend for him.
Siw. He's worth no more
 They say, he parted well, and paid his score:
 So, God be with him!—Here comes newer company.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head on a pole.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: Behold where stands
 The usurper's curs'd head: the time is free:
 I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl
 That speak my salutation in their minds;
 Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,— Hail, king of Scotland!

All. King of Scotland, hail!
[Flourish.]
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of Before we reckon with your several loves,
 And make us even with you. My thanes kinsmen,

Henceforth be earls; the first, that ever Scotland
 In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do
 Which would be plant'd newly with the time
 As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
 That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
 Producing forth the cruel ministers
 Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen
 Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
 Took off her life:—This, and what needful else
 That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
 We will perform in measure, time, and place:
 So thanks to all at once, and to each one,
 Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.
[Flourish. Exit.]

KING JOHN.

Act 4. Sc 1.

Published by W. Pickering, Lincoln Inn Fields. 1823.

KING JOHN.

PERSONS OF THE DRAMA.

King JOHN:
Prince HENRY, his son; afterwards king Henry III.
ARTHUR, duke of Bretagne, son of Geoffrey, late duke of Bretagne, the elder brother of king John.
WILLIAM MARESHALL, earl of Pembroke.
GEFFREY FITZ-PETER, earl of Essex, chief justiciary of England.
WILLIAM LONGSWORD, earl of Salisbury.
ROBERT BIGOT, earl of Norfolk.
ROBERT DE BURGH, chamberlain to the king.
ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, son of sir Robert Faulconbridge:
PHILIP FAULCONBRIDGE, his half-brother,
 bastard son to king Richard the first.
JAMES GURNEY, servant to lady Faulconbridge.
PETER of Pomfret, a prophet.

PHILIP, king of France.
LEWIS, the dauphin.
 Arch-duke of Austria.
Cardinal PANDOLPH, the pope's legate.
MELUN, a French lord.
CHATILLON, ambassador from France to king John.

ELINOR, the widow of king Henry II. and mother of king John.
CONSTANCE, mother to Arthur.
BLANCH, daughter to Alphonso, king of Castile, and niece to king John.
Lady FAULCONBRIDGE, mother to the bastard, and Robert Faulconbridge.

Lords, Ladies, Citizens of Angiers, Sheriff, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

Scene,—sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

Northampton. A room of state in the palace.

Enter King JOHN, Queen ELINOR, PEM-BROKE, ESSEX, SALISBURY, and others, with CHATILLON.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France wish us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France,

In my behaviour, to the majesty,
 The borrow'd majesty of England here.

EE. A strange beginning;—borrow'd majesty!

K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf
 Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son,
 Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim

To this fair island, and the territories;

To Ireland, Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine:

Reserving thee to lay aside the sword,

Which sways usurpingly these several titles;

And put the same into young Arthur's hand,

Thy nephew, and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war,

To enforce these rights, so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood,

Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth,

The furthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace:

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;

If ere thou canst report I will be there,

The thunder of my cannon shall be heard:

So hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,

And sellen presage of your own decay.—

His honourable conduct let him have:—

Pembroke, look to't: Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exeunt Chatillon and Pembroke.]

EE. What now, my son? have I not ever said,

How that ambitious Constance would not cease,

While she had kindled France, and all the world,

To you the right and party of her son?

That might have been prevented, and made whole,

With very easy arguments of love;

Which now the manage of two kingdoms must

With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Elin. Your strong possession, much more than your right;

Or else it must go wrong with you, and me:
 So much my conscience whispers in your ear;
 Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers ESSEX.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
 Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
 That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.— [Exit Sheriff.]
 Our abbies, and our priories, shall pay

Re-enter Sheriff, with ROBERT FAULCON-BRIDGE, and PHILIP, his bastard brother.

This expedition's charge.—What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman,
 Born in Northamptonshire; and eldest son,
 As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge;
 A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
 Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?

You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king,
 That is well known: and, as I think, one father:
 But, for the certain knowledge of that truth,
 I put you o'er to heaven, and to my mother:
 Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Elin. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Bast. I, madam? no, I have no reason for it;

That is my brother's plea, and none of mine;

The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out

At least from fair five hundred pounds a year:

Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow:—Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.

But once he slander'd me with bastardy:

But wh'er I be as true begot, or no,

That still I lay upon my mother's head;

But, that I am as well begot, my liege,

(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him;—
O old sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

Eliz. He hath a trick of Cœur-de-lion's face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirrah, speak,
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father;
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A half-faced great five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much:—

Bast. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my land;
Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time:

The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak:
But truth is truth; large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
(As I have heard my father speak himself,)
When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother's son, was none of his;
And, if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him;
And, if she did play false, the fault was hers;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands,
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?

In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him; nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him: This concludes,—
My mother's son did get your father's heir;

Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force,
To dispossess that child, which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eliz. Whether hadst thou rather,—be a Faulconbridge,

And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land;
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, sir Robert his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuff'd; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose, Lest men should say, Look, where three-farthings goes!

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
'Would I might never stir from off this place,
I'd give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be sir Nob in any case.

Eliz. I like thee well; wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance:
Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year;
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 'tis dear.—
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eliz. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.
Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?
Bast. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun;
Philip, good old sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name form thou bear'st:

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more Arise sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

 And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
 If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin :
 Who says it was, he lies ; I say, 'twas not.

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

France. Before the walls of Angiers.

On one side, the Archduke of Austria, and s ; on the other, PHILIP, king of France, Brees ; LEWIS, CONSTANCE, ARTHUR,
 Attendants.

Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.—
 t, that great fore-runner of thy blood,
 d, that robb'd the lion of his heart,
 ight the holy wars in Palestine,
 s brave duke came early to his grave :
 or amends to his posterity,
 * importance hither is he come, ead his colours, boy, in thy behalf ;
 o rebuke the usurpation
 * unnatural uncle, English John :
 ce him, love him, give him welcome hither.
 . God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death, ther, that you give his offspring life, wing their right under your wings of war :
 you welcome with a powerless hand,
 ith a heart full of unstained love :
 me before the gates of Angiers, duke.
 A noble boy ! Who would not do thee right ?
 t. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
 l to this indenture of my love ;
 o my home I will no more return,
 ogiers, and the right thou hast in France,
 er with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
 : foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides,
 ops from other lands her islanders, ill that England, hedg'd in with the main, ater-walled bulwark, still secure mfidant from foreign purposes, ill that utmost corner of the west thee for her king : till then, fair boy, not think of home, but follow arms.
 t. O, take his mother's thanks, a widow's hanks,
 r strong hand shall help to give him strength,
 ce a more requital to your love.
 . The peace of heaven is theirs, that lift their swords
 a just and charitable war.
 ti. Well then, to work ; our cannon shall be sent t the brows of this resisting town.—
 r our chiefest men of discipline, l the plots of best advantages :—
 lay before this town our royal bones, to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,
 : will make it subject to this boy.
 t. Stay for an answer to your embassy, advis'd you stain your swords with blood :
 d Chatillon may from England bring ght in peace, which here we urge in war ;

And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
 That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady !—lo, upon thy wish,
 Our messenger Chatillon is arriv'd.—
 What England says, say briefly, gentle lord,
 We coldly pause for thee : Chatillon, speak.
Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
 And stir them up against a mightier task.
 England, impatient of your just demands,
 Hath put himself in arms, the adverse winds,
 Whose leisure I have staid ; have given him time
 To laud his legions all as soon as I :
 His marches are expedient to this town,
 His forces strong, his soldiers confident.
 With him along is come the mother-queen,
 An Até, stirring him to blood and strife ;
 With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain ;
 With them a bastard of the king deceas'd :
 And all the unsettled humours of the land,—
 Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
 With ladies' faces, and fierce dragon's spleens,—
 Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
 Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,
 To make a hazard of new fortunes here.
 In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
 Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er,
 Did never float upon the swelling tide,
 To do offence and seath in Christendom.
 The interruption of their churlish drums

[Drums beat.]

Cuts off more circumstance : they are at hand,
 To parley, or to fight ; therefore, prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition !

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
 We must awake endeavour for defence ;
 For courage mounteth with occasion :
 Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King JOHN, ELINOR, BLANCH, the Bastard, PEMBROKE, and forces.

K. John. Peace be to France ; if France in peace permit
 Our just and lineal entrance to our own !
 If not ; bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven !
 Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
 Their proud contempt, that beat his peace to heaven.
K. Phi. Peace be to England ; if that war return
 From France to England, there to live in peace !
 England we love ; and for that England's sake,
 With burden of our armour here we sweat :
 This toil of ours should be a work of thine ;
 But thou from loving England art so far,
 That thou hast under-wrought its lawful king,
 Cut off the sequence of posterity,
 Outfaced infant state, and done a rape
 Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.

A a

Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face;—
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his:
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Geoffrey; and the band of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right,
And this is Geoffrey's: In the name of God,
How comes it then, that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France,

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phi. From that supernal Judge, that stirs good thoughts

In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right.
That Judge hath made me guardian to this boy:
Under whose warrant, I impeach thy wrong;
And, by whose help, I mean to chastise it.

K. John. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phi. Excuse; it is to beat usurping down.

Ell. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Const. Let me make answer;—thy usurping son.

Ell. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king;

That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,

As thine was to thy husband: and this boy

Likier in feature to his father Geoffrey,

Than thou and John in manners; being as like,

As rain to water, or devil to his dam.

My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,

His father never was so true begot;

It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

Ell. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the crier.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One, that will play the devil art thou?

An 'a may catch your hide and you alone.

You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,

Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard;

I'll smoke your skin-coat, an I catch you right;

Sirrah, look to't; i'faith, I will, i'faith.

Blanch. O, well did he become that lion's robe,

That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,

As great Alcides' shoes upon an ass:—

But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back;

Or lay on that, shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deafs our ears

With this abundance of superfluous breath?

K. Phi. Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your conference.—

King John, this is the very sum of all,—

England, and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,

In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:

Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life as soon:—I do defy thee, France.

Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand;

And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more

Than e'er the coward hand of France can win:

Submit thee, boy.

Ell. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it' grandam, child;

Give grandam kingdom, and it' grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:

There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!

I would, that I were low laid in my grave;

I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Ell. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.

Const. Now shame upon you, wh'er she does, or no!

His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,

Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,

Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee;

Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd

To do him justice, and revenge on you.

Ell. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!

Call not me slanderer; thou, and thine, usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights,
Of this oppressed boy: This is thy eldest son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee;
Thy sins are visited in this poor child;
The cannon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Beldam, have done.

Const. I have but this to

That he's not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plagu'd for her,
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury,—the beadle to her sin;
All punished in the person of this child,
And all for her; A plague upon her!

Ell. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce
A will, that bars the tide of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will!

will;

A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will

K. Phi. Peace, lady; pause, or be more temperate

It ill becoms this presence, to cry aim

To these ill-tuned repetitions.—

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls

These men of Angiers; let us hear them speak

Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's

Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.

1 Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls?

K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England.

K. John. England, for France.

You men of Angiers, and my loving subject

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, A subjects,

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parole.

K. John. For our advantage;—Therefore us first.—

These flags of France, that are advanced here

Before the eye and prospect of your town,

Have hither march'd to your endamagement

The canons have their bowels full of wrath

And ready mounted are they, to spit forth

Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:

All preparation for a bloody siege,

And merciless proceeding by these French,

Confront your city's eyes, your winking gates

And, but for our approach, those sleeping

That as a waist do girdle you about,

By the compulsion of their ordinance

By this time from their fixed beds of lime

Had been dishabited, and wide havoc mad

For bloody power to rush upon your peace.

But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,—

Who painfully, with much expedient march

Have brought a counterech before your gates

To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd

Behold, the French, amar'd, vouchsafe a

And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire

To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words, folded up in

To make a faithless error in your ears:

Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,

And let us in, your king; whose labour'd

Forwearied in this action of swift speed,

Crave harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer

both.

Lo, in this right hand, whose protection

Is most divinely vow'd upon the right

Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet

Son to the elder brother of this man,

And king o'er him, and all, that he enjoys

For this down-trodden equity, we tread

In warlike march these greens before your

Being no further enemy to you,

'Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,

In the relief of this oppressed child,

Religiously provokes. Be pleased then

To pay that duty, which you truly owe,

To him that owes it; namely, this young then our arms, like to a muzzled bear, in aspect, have all offence seal'd up;

cannons' malice vainly shall be spout ast the invulnerable clouds of heaven;
with a blessed and unweav'd retire,
unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruise'd, will bear home that lusty blood again,
wh ere we came to spout against your town,
leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.
if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer, not the roundure of your old-fac'd walls hide you from our messengers of war;
ugh all these English, and their discipline,
harbour'd in their rude circumference.
tell us, shall your city call us lord,
at behalf, which we have challeng'd it?
shall we give the signal to our rage,
stalk in blood to our possession?

W. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects;
um, and in his right, we hold this town.
John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

H. That can we not: but he, that proves the king, an will we prove loyal; till that time,
we ram'm'd up our gates against the world.

John. Doth not the crown of England prove the king?

if not that, I bring you witnesses, fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed,—
f. Bastards, and else.

John. To verify our title with their lives.

Phi. As many, and as well born bloods as those,—

f. Some bastards too.

Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

f. Till you compound whose right is worthiest, or the worthiest, hold the right from both.

John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls, to their everlasting residence,
the dew of evening fall, shall fleet,
adful trial of our kingdom's king!

Phi. Amen, Amen!—Mount, chevaliers! to arms!

f. St. George,—that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since, his horseback at mine hostess' door,
us some fence!—Sirrah, were I at home.

r den, sirrah, [To Austria.] with your lioness, an ox-head on your lion's hide,
ake a monster of you.

f. Peace; no more.
O, tremble; for you hear the lion roar.

John. Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth, appointment, all our regiments.

. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.
Hi. It shall be so;—[To Lewis.] and at the other hill and the rest to stand.—God, and our right!

Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood;
There stuck no plume in any English crest,
That is removed by a staff of France;
Our colours do return in those same hands,
That did display them, when we first march'd forth;
And, like a jolly troop of huartsmen, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled bands,
Died in the dying slaughter of their foes:
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Cit. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answer'd blows;

Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power:

Both are alike; and both alike we like.

One must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,
We hold our town for neither; yet for both.

Enter, at one side, King JOHN, with his power; ELINOR, BLANCH, and the Bastard; at the other, King PHILIP, LEWIS, AUSTRIA, and forces.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right run on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'er-swell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores;
Unless thou let his silver water keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood,

In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: And by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,—
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms we bear,

Or add a royal umber to the dead!
Gracing the scroll, that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!

O, now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men,
In undetermin'd differences of kings.—

Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
Cry, havoc, kings! back to the stained field,
You equal potents, fiery-kindled spirits!

Theo let confusion of one part confirm
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England; who's your king?

1 Cit. The king of England, when we know the king.

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here;
Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

1 Cit. A greater power than we, denies all this;
And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates:
King'd of our fears; until our fears, resolv'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings;
And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul'd by me;
Do like the mutines of Jerusalem,
Be friends a while, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town:
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon, charged to the mouths;
Till their soul-fearing clamours have hrawl'd down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city:
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation.

SCENE II.

The same.

as and excursions; then a retreat. Enter a each Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

cr. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates, t young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in;
by the hand of France, this day hath made work for tears in many an English mother, sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground:
a widow's husband groveling lies,
embracing the discolour'd earth;
ctory, with little loss, doth play
he dancing banners of the French;
re at hand, triumphantly display'd, r conquerors, and to proclaim of Bretagne, England's king, and yours.

ter an English Herald, with trumpets.

er. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your cells;

ohn, your king and England's, doth approach, under of this hot malicious day!

Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then, in a moment, fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion;
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy?

K. John. Now, by the sky, that hangs above our heads,

I like it well;—France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground;
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,— Being wrong'd, as we are, by this peevish town,—
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls:
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why, then defy each other; and, pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven, or hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so!—Say, where will you assault?

K. John. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From north to south;
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth:

[Aside.

I'll stir them to it:—Come, away, away!

I Cit. Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe a while to stay,

And I shall show you peace, and fair-faced league;
Win you this city without stroke, or wound;
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field:
Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on, with favour; we are bent to hear.

I Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch,

Is near to England; Look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid:
If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete, O say, he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to oame want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such a she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.
O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks, that bound them in:
And two such shares to two such streams made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.
This union shall do more than battery can,
To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,
The sea enraged is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion; no, not death himself
In mortal fury half so preemphatory,
As we to keep this city.

Bast. Here's a stay,
That shakes the rotten carcase of old death
Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed, That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and seas;

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions,
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs!
What cannoner begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon, fire, and smoke, and bounce;
He gives the bastinado with his tongue;
Our ears are cudgel'd; not a word of his,

But buffets better than a fist of France:

For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie

Mark, how they whisper: urge them, while

Are capable of this ambition:
Lest zeal, now melted, by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,

Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
o stop Arthur's title in the whole, rillingly departed with a part:
ance, (whose armour conscience buckled on;
zeal and charity brought to the field, l's own soldier) rounded in the ear

With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil;
That broker, that still breaks the pate of faith;
That daily break-vow; he, that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids;—
Who having no external thing to lose
But the word maid,—cheats the poor maid of that;
That smooth-fac'd gentleman, tickling commodity,— Commodity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is piewed well,
Made to run even, upon even ground;
Till this advantage, this vile drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,
From a resolv'd and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.—
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because he hath not woo'd me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels would salute my palm:
But for my heedless, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, rattleth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—there is no sin, but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—there is no vice, but beggary:
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord! for I will worship thee! [Exit.]

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

The same. The French King's tent.

CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and SALIS-BURY.

Gone to be married! gone to swear a peace!
ood to false blood join'd! Gone to be friends!
ewis have Blanch? and Blanch those pro-ncers?

so; thou hast mis-spoke, misheard;
advise'd, tell o'er thy tale again:
it be; thou dost but say, 'tis so:

I may not trust thee; for thy word
he vain breath of a common man;
me, I do not believe thee, man;
king's oath to the contrary.

alt be punish'd for thus frightening me,
s sick, and capable of fears;

'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
w, husbandless, subject to fears;

m, naturally born to fears;
ugh thou now confess thou didst but jest,
y vex'd spirits I cannot take a truce,

y will quake and tremble all this day.
ost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
st thou look so sadly on my son?

means that hand upon that breast of thine?
lds thine eye that lamentable rheum, roud river peering o'er his bounds?

sad signs confirmers of thy words?
eak again; not all thy former tale,
one word, whether thy tale be true.

s true, as, I believe, you think them false,
e you cause to prove my saying true.

O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
on this sorrow how to make me die;
belief and life encounter so,

the fury of two desperate men, in the very meeting, fall, and die.—

arry Blanch: O, boy, then where art thou?
riend with England! what becomes of me?—
be gone; I cannot brook thy sight;

rs hath made thee a most ugly man.
What other harm have I, good lady, done,
e the harm, that is by others done?

Which harm within itself so heinous is,
kes harmful all, that speak of it.

I do beseech you, madam, be content.
If thou, that bid'st me be content, wert grim,

Ugly, and sland'rous to thy mother's womb,
Full of displeasing blots, and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would he content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blown rose: but fortune! O,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee;
She adulterates hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluck'd on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to fortune, and king John;
That strumpet fortune, that usurping John:—
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Evenom him with words; or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-hear.

Sol. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt; I will not go
with thee:

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stout.

To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrow sit;

Here is my throne, bid kings come how to it.
[She throws herself on the ground.]

Enter King JOHN, King PHILIP, LEWIS, BLANCH, ELINOR, Bastard, AUSTRIA, and Attendants.

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed day,

Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day, the glorious senn
Stays in his course, and plays the alchemist;
Turning, with splendor of his precious eye,
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holiday!—
[Rising.]

What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done;
That it in golden letters should be set,
Among the high tides, in the kalendar?
Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week;
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd:
But on this day, let seamen fear no wreck;
No bargains break, that are not this day made:
This day, all things begun come to ill end;
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,
Resembling majesty; which, being touch'd, and tried,
Proves valueless: You are forsworn, forsworn;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
Is cold in amity and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league:—
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjurd kings!
A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ongodly day
Wear out the day in peace; but, ere sunset,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjurd kings!
Hear me, O, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.
Const. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war.
O Lymoges! O Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: Thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward;

Thou little valiant, great in villany!
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjurd too,
And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool; to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworn my soldier? bidding me depend Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me!
Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.
Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

K. John. We like not this; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.
Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven!—
To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from pope Innocent the legate here,
Do, in his name, religiously demand,
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So wilfully dost spurn; and, force perforce,
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see?
This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatories
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of England,
Add thus much more,—That no Italian priest
Shall tithes or toll in our dominions;
But as we under Heaven are supreme head,
So, under him, that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart,
To him and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blasphemate in this.

K. John. Though you, and all the kings of tendom,

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out
And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself,
Though you, and all the rest, so grossly let
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish
Yet I, alone, alone do me oppose Against the pope, and count his friends my enemies.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power, that I
Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate
And blessed shall he be, that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretick;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,

That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

 4. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;
 like a civil war, set'st oath to oath,

 made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd;

 7. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Will't not be?

 Father, to arms!
 8. Upon thy wedding day?

 shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd men?

 virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom

Const. That, which upholdeth him, that thee upholds,
 His honour: O, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour!
 Lew. I muse, your majesty doth seem so cold,
 When such profound respects do pull you on.
 Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.
 K. Phi. Thou shalt not need:—England, I'll fall from thee.

Const. O fair return of banish'd majesty!
 Eli. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!
 K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton
 Time,
 Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood: Fair day, adieu!

Which is the side, that I must go withal?
 I am with both: each army hath a hand;
 And, in their rage, I having hold of both,
 They whirl asunder, and dismember me.
 Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;
 Uncle, I needs must pray, that thou may'st lose;
 Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
 Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
 Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;
 Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Lew. Lady, with me; with me thy fortune lies.
 Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.—
 [Exit Bastard.]

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
 A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
 That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
 The blood, and dearest valued blood, of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
 Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.

K. John. No more than he, that threatens.—To arms let's hie! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. Plains near Angiers.

Alarums, excursions. Enter the Bastard, with AUSTRIA'S head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;
 Some airy devil hovers in the sky,
 And pours down mischief. Austria's head lie there:
 While Philip breathes.

Enter King JOHN, ARTHUR, and HUBERT.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy:—Philip, make up:
 My mother is assailed in our tent,
 And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescu'd her;
 Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
 But on, my liege; for very little pains
 Will bring this labour to an happy end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same.

Alarums; excursions; retreat. Enter King JOHN,
 ELINOR, ARTHUR, the Bastard, HUBERT, and Lords.

K. John. So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind, [To Elinor.]
 So strongly guarded.—Cousin, look not sad:

[To Arthur.]
 Thy grandam loves thee; and thy uncle will
 As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arth. O, this will make my mother die with grief.
 K. John. Cousin, [To the Bastard.] away for England; haste before:

And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
 Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels
 Set thou at liberty: the fat ribs of peace Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
 Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle, shall not drive me back,
 When gold and silver beck me to come on.
 I leave your highness:—Grandam, I will pray

(If ever I remember to be holy,)

For your fair safety; so I kiss your hand.

El. Farewell, my gentle cousin.

K. John. Cos, farewell. [Exit Bastard.]

El. Come hither, little kinsman; bark, a word.

[She takes Arthur aside.]

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,

We owe thee much; and within this wall of flesh

There is a soul, counts thee her creditor,

And with advantage means to pay thy love:

And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath

Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.

Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,—

But I will fit it with some better time.

By heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd

To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty.

K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet:

But thou shalt have; and creep time ne'er so slow,

Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good.

I had a thing to say,—But let it go:

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day

Attended with the pleasures of the world,

Is all too wanton, and too full of gawds,

To give me audience:—If the midnight bell

Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,

Sound one unto the drowsy race of night;

If this same were a church-yard where we stand,

And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;

Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,

Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick;

(Which, else, runs tickling up and down the veins,

Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes,

And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,

A passion hateful to my purposes;)

Or if that thou could'st see me without eyes,

Hear me without thine ears, and make reply

Without a tongue, using conceit alone,

Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words;

Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,

I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:

But ah, I will not:—Yet I love thee well;

And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,

Though that my death were adjunct to my act,

By heaven, I'd do't.

K. John. Do not I know, thou would'st?

Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye

On yon young boy: I'll tell thee what, my friend,

He is a very serpent in my way;

And, wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,

He lies before me: Dost thou understand me?

Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I will keep him so.

That he shall not offend your majesty.

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.

I could be merry now: Hubert, I love thee;

Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:

Remember.—Madam, fare you well:

I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty.

El. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin:

Hubert shall be your man, attend on you

With all true duty.—On toward Calais, ho!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. The French King's tent.

Enter King PHILIP, LEWIS, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,

A whole armada of convicted sail

Is scatter'd and disjoint from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have run so ill?

Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?

Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?

And bloody England into England gone,

O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won, that he hath fortified:

So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,

Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,

Doth want example: Who hath read, or he,

Of any kindred action like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear, that England

this praise,

So we could find some pattern of our shame

Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul

Holding the eternal spirit, against her will,

In the vile prison of afflicted breath:—

I pr'ythee, lady, go away with me.

Const. Lo, now! now see the issue of your

K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort,

Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress:

But that, which ends all counsel, true redy

Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!

Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,

Thou hate and terror to prosperity,

And I will kiss thy detestable bones;

And put my eye-balls in thy vaulty brows:

And ring these fingers with thy household

And stop this gap of breath with fulsome

And be a carrion monster like thyself:

Come, grin on me; and I will think thou

And buss thee as thy wife! Misery's love,

O, come to me!

K. Phi. O fair affliction, peace.

Preach some philosophy to make me mad,

And thou shalt be canoniz'd, cardinal:

For, being not mad, but sensible of grief,

My reasonable part produces reason

How I may be deliver'd of these woes,

And teaches me to kill or hang myself:

If I were mad, I should forget my son;

Or madly think, a babe of clouts were he

There's nothing in this world can make a joy:

s tedious as a twice-told tale,
 the dull ear of a drowsy man; er shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's ste,

ields naught, but shame, and bitterness.

Before the curing of a strong disease,
 the instant of repair and health,
 s strongest; evils, that take leave,
 departure most of all show evil:
 ve you lost by losing of this day?
 ll days of glory, joy, and happiness.

If you had won it, certainly, you had,
 when fortune means to men most good, s upon them with a threatening eye.

ge, to think how much king John hath lost which he accounts so clearly won:

ou griev'd, that Arthur is his prisoner?
 is heartily, as he is glad he hath him.

Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.
 r me speak, with a prophetic spirit;

the breath of what I mean to speak
 e each dust, each straw, each little rub, e path, which shall directly lead to England's throne; and, therefore mark, a seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be,

flies warm life plays in that infant's veins,
 lse'd John should entertain an hour,

its, nay, one quiet breath of rest:
 ; snatch'd with an unruly hand,

us boisterously maintain'd as gain'd:

And he, that stands upon a shippery place,
 Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:
 That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall;
 So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?

Pand. You, in the right of lady Blanch your wife,
 May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green are you, and fresh in this old world!

John lays you plots; the times conspire with you:

For he that steeps his safety in true blood,
 Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly born, shall cool the hearts
 Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal;

That none so small advantage shall step forth,
 To check his reign, but they will cherish it:

No natural exhalation in the sky,
 No scape of nature, no distemper'd day,

No common wind, no custom'd event,
 But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
 Abortives, présages, and tongues of heaven,

Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.
Lew. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,

But hold himself safe in his imprisonment.
Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,
 Even at that news he dies: and then the hearts

Of all his people shall revolt from him,
 And kiss the lips of unacquainted change;

And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,
 Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

methinks, I see this hurly all on foot;
 And, O, what better matter breeds for you,

Than I have nam'd!—The bastard Faulconbridge
 Is now in England, ransacking the church,

Offending charity: If but a dozen French
 Were there in arms, they would be as a call

To train ten thousand English to their side;
 Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,

Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
 Go with me to the king; 'Tis wonderful

What may be wrought out of their discontent:
 Now that their souls are topfull of offence,

For England go; I will whet on the king.
Lew. Strong reasons make strong actions:—let us go;

If you say, ay, the king will not say, no. [Exeunt.

Enter ARTHUR.

ood morrow, Hubert.

ood morrow, little prince.
 s little prince (having so great a title
 e prince,) as may be.—You are sad.

eed, I have been merrier.
 Mercy on me!

nobody should be sad but I:
 ember, when I was in France,
 rlemen would be as sad as night, rantonness. By my christendom, out of prison, and kept sheep,

 e as merry as the day is long;

would be here, but that I doubt practises more harm to me:

d of me, and I of him:

Is it my fault, that I was Geoffrey's son?

No, indeed, is't not; And I would to heaven,
 I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
 He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:

Therefore I will be sudden, and despatch. [Aside.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day:
 In sooth, I would you were a little sick;

That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
 I warrant I love you more than you do me.

Hub. His words do take possession of my bosom.—
 Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.

How now, foolish rheum! [Aside.

Turning spiteous torture out of door!
 I must be brief; lest resolution drop
 Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish tears.—
 Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:
 Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.
Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.
Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my handkerchief about your brows,
 (The best I had, a princess wrought it me),

And I did never ask it you again:
 And with my hand at midnight held your head;

And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
 Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;

Saying, What lack you? and, Where lies your grief?

Or, What good love may I perform for you?
 Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
 And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
 But you at your sick service had a prince.
 Nay, you may think, my love was crafty love,
 And call it, cunning; Do, an if you will:
 If heaven be pleas'd, that you must use me ill,
 Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine eyes?
 These eyes, that never did, nor never shall,
 So much as frown on you?

Hub. I have sworn to do it;
 And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah, none, but in this iron age, would do it!
 The iron of itself, though heat red-hot,
 Approaching near these eyes, would drink my tears,
 And quench his fiery indignation,
 Even in the matter of mine innocence:
 Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
 But for containing fire to harm mine eye.
 Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
 An if an angel should have come to me,
 And told me, Hubert should put out mine eyes,
 I would not have believ'd no tongue, but Hubert's.

Hub. Come forth. [Stamps.

Re-enter Attendants, with cord, irons, &c.

Do as I bid you do.

Arth. O, save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out,

Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.

Arth. Alas, what need you be so boist'rous-rough?
 I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still.
 For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
 Nay, hear me, Hubert! drive these men away,
 And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
 I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
 Nor look upon the iron angrily:
 Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you, Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.
 I attend. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend;
 He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart:—
 Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven!—that there were but a mote in
 yours,

A grain, a dust, a grat, a wand'ring hair,
 Any annoyance in that precious sense!
 Then, feeling what small things are boist'rous there,
 Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
 Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert!
 Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
 So I may keep mine eyes; O, spare mine eyes;
 Though to no use, but still to look on you!
 Lo, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
 And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth: the fire is dead with grief,
 Being create for comfort, to be us'd
 In undeserv'd extremes: See else yourself;
 There is no malice in this burning coal;
 The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
 And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Arth. And if you do, you will but make it bluish,
 And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
 Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
 And, like a dog, that is compell'd to fight,
 Snatch at his master, that doth tarre him on.
 All things, that you should use to do me wrong, Deny their office: only you do lack
 That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, extends,
 Creatures of note, for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes
 For all the treasure, that thine uncle owes:
 Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
 With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all
 You were disguis'd.

Hub. Peace: no more.
 Your uncle must not know but you are d:

K. John. Bear with me, cousin; for I was amaz'd
Under the tide: but now I breathe again
Aloft the flood; and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen,
The sums I have collected shall express.
But, as I travelled hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied:

Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams;
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear:
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found

With many hundreds treading on his heels:
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,
That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your highness should deliver up your crown.

K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst
thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.
K. John. Hubert, away with him; imprison him;
And on that day at noon, whereon, he says,
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd:

Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee.—O my gentle cousin,
[Exit Hubert, with Peter.]

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?
Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:

Besides, I met lord Bigot, and lord Salisbury,
(With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire,)
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, who, they say, is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies:
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.
K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot
before.—

O, let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!—
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels;
And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.
[Exit.]
K. John. Spoke like a spritful noble gentleman.—

Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege.
[Exit.]

K. John. My mother dead!
Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say, five moons were seen to-night:
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four, in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?
Hub. Old men, and beldams, in the streets

Do prophesy upon it dangerously:
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths:
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he, that speaks, doth gripe the hearer's wrist;
Whilst he, that hears, makes fearful action

With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron idd on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, (which his nimble haste Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet.)

Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattel'd and rank'd in Kent:
Another lean unwash'd artificer
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

Hub. Had none, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings, to be attended by slaves, that take their humours for a warrant To break within the bloody house of life: And, on the winking of authority, To understand a law; to know the meaning Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns More upon humour than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal Witness against us to damnation!

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds, Makes deeds ill done! Hadst thou not been by, A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd, Quoted, and sign'd to do a deed of shame, This murder had not come into my mind: But, taking note of thy abhor'd aspect, Finding thee fit for bloody villany, Apt, liable, to be employ'd in danger, I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death; And thou, to be eudared to a king, Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head, or made a pause,

When I spake darkly what I purposed; Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face, As bid me tell my tale in express words; Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off, And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me: But thou didst understand me by my signs, And didst in signs again parley with sin; Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent, And, consequently, thy rude hand to act The deed, which both our tongues held vile to name.—

Out of my sight, and never see me more! My nobles leave me; and my state is brav'd, Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers: Nay, in the body of this fleshly land, This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath, Hostility and civil tumult reigns Between my conscience, and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies, I'll make a peace between your soul and you. Young Arthur is alive: This hand of mine Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand, Not painted with the crimson spots of blood. Within this bosom never enter'd yet The dreadful motion of a murder's thought, And you have slander'd nature in my form; Which, howsoever rude exteriorly, Is yet the cover of a fairer mind Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O, haste thee to the peers,

Throw this report on their incensed rage, And make them tame to their obedience! Forgive the comment, that my passion made Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind, And foul imaginary eyes of blood Presented thee more hideous than thou art. O, answer not; but to my closet bring The angry lords, with all expedient haste: I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.

[Exeunt.]

Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not!— There's few, or none, do know me; if they did, This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite. I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it. If I get down, and do not break my limbs, I'll find a thousand shifts to get away: As good to die, and go, as die, and stay.

Do not prove me so ;
 Whose tongue so'er speaks false,
 I speak ; who speaks not truly, lies.
 Cut him to pieces.

Keep the peace, I say.
 Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.
 Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury :
 I bat frown on me, or stir thy foot,
 I chide thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
 I chide thee dead. Put up thy sword betime ;
 I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron,
 As shall think the devil is come from hell.
 What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge ?
 I'll a villain, and a murderer ?
 Lord Bigot, I am none.

Who kill'd this prince ?
 'Tis not an hour, since I left him well :
 I lov'd him, I lov'd him ; and will weep
 the rest of life out, for his sweet life's loss.
 Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes !
 Many is not without such rheum ;
 I, long traded in it, makes it seem tears of remorse and innocency.
 With me, all you whose souls abhor cleanly savours of a slaughter-house ;
 As stified with this smell of sin.
 Away, toward Bury, to the Dauphin there !
 There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.

[Exeunt Lords.]
 Here's a good world !—Knew you of this our work ?
 the infinite and boundless reach of it, if thou didst this deed of death, O damn'd, Hubert.

Do but hear me, sir.

Bast. Ha ! I'll tell thee what ;
 Thou art damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so black ;
 Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer :
 There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
 As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul,— Bast. If thou did'st but consent
 To this most cruel act, do but despair,
 And, if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread,
 That ever spider twisted from her womb,
 Will serve to strangle thee ; a rush will be A beam to hang thee on ; or, would'st thou drown
 thyself,

Put but a little water in a spoon,
 And it shall be as all the ocean,
 Enough to stifle such a villain up.—
 I do suspect thee very grievously.
Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thoughts
 Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath,
 Which was embowd in this beauteous clay,
 Let hell want pains enough to torture me !
 I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms.—
 I am amaz'd, methinks ; and lose my way
 Among the thorns and dangers of this world.—
 How easy dost thou take all England up !
 From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
 The life, the right, the truth of all this realm
 Is fled to heaven ; and England now is left
 To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth
 The unwed interest of proud-swelling state.
 Now, for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty,
 Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
 And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace :
 Now powers from home, and discontents at home,
 Meet in one line ; and vast confusion waits
 (As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast)
 The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
 Now happy he, whose cloak and cincture can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,
 And follow me with speed ; I'll to the king :
 A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
 And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

The same. A room in the palace.

King JOHN, PANDULPH with the crown, and Attendants.

Kn. Thus have I yielded up into your hand the title of my glory.

Take again

[Giving John the crown.]

in my hand, as holding of the pope, your sovereign greatness and authority.

Kn. Now keep your holy word : go meet the French ;

in his holiness use all your power in their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.

contented counties do revolt ;
 people quarrel with obedience ;

our allegiance, and the love of soul,
 our anger blood, to foreign royalty.

our indignation of milder temper'd humour is now only to be qualified.

use not ; for the present time's so sick,
 our present medicine must be minister'd,
 to throw incurable ensues.

It was my breath that blew this tempest up, your stubborn usage of the pope :

because you are a gentle convertite,
 we shall hush again this storm of war,
 to keep fair weather in your blustering land.

Ascension-day, remember well,
 our oath of service to the pope,
 to make the French lay down their arms.

[Exit.]

Kn. Is this Ascension-day ? Did not the pope

come before Ascension-day at noon, and should I give off ? Even so I have :

I did suppose, it should be on constraint ;
 But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded ; nothing there holds
 out,

But Dover castle : London hath receiv'd,
 Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers :

Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
 To offer service to your enemy ;

And wild amazement hurries up and down
 The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,
 After they heard young Arthur was alive ?

Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the streets ;

An empty casket, where the jewel of life
 By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me, he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
 But wherefore do you droop ? why look you sad ?

Be great in act, as you have been in thought ;
 Let not the world see fear, and sad distrust,
 Govern the motion of a kingly eye :

Be stirring as the time ; be fire with fire ;
 Threaten the threat'ner, and outface the brow

Of bragging horror : so shall inferior eyes,
 That borrow their behaviours from the great,

Grow great by your example, and put on
 The dauntless spirit of resolution.

Away ; and glisten like the god of war,
 When he intendeth to become the field :

Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
 What, shall they seek the lion in his den,
 And fright him there ? and make him tremble there ?

O, let it not be said !—Forge, and run
 To meet displeasure further from the doors ;

B b

And grapple with him, ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers,
Led by the Dauphin.

Bast.

O inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce
To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd silken wanton brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? let us, my liege, to arms:
Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at least be said,
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bast. Away then, with good courage; yet, I know,
Our party may well meet a prouder foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A plain, near St. Edmund's-Bury.

Enter, in arms, LEWIS, SALISBURY, MELUN, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Soldiers.

Lew. My lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance:
Return the precedent to these lords again:
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they, and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
A voluntary zeal, and unurg'd faith,
To your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince,
I am not glad, that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by contemn'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound
By making many: O, it grieves my soul,
That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker; O, and there,
Where honourable rescue, and defence,
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury:
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physick of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confused wrong.—
And is't not pity, O my grieved friends!
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
Wherein we step after a stranger march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw and weep Upon the spot of this enforced cause)
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here?
What, here?—O nation, that thou could'st remove!
That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
And grapple thee unto a pagan shore;
Where these two Christian armies might combine
The blood of malice in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!

Lew. A noble temper doth thou show in this;
And great affections, wrestling in thy bosom,
Do make an earthquake of nobility.
O, what a noble combat hast thou fought,
Between compulsion and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks:
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
And with a great heart heave away this storm:
Commend these waters to those baby eyes,
That never saw the giant world enrag'd;
Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossiping.

Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand
Into the purse of rich prosperity,
As Lewis himself:—so, nobles, shall you
That knit your sinews to the strength of arms

Enter PANDULPH, attended.

And even there, methinks, an angel spake:
Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven
And on our actions set the name of right,
With holy breath.

Pand. Hail, noble prince of France!
The next is this,—king John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome: his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy church,
The great metropolis and see of Rome:
Therefore thy threat'ning colours now withdraw
And tame the savage spirit of wild war;
That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me, I will not
I am too high-born to be proptied,
To be a secondary at control,
Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
To any sovereign state throughout the world:
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself
And brought in matter, that should feed it
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind, which enkind
You taught me how to know the face of Acquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this enterprize into my heart;
And come you now to tell me, John hath
His peace with Rome? What is that peace
I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
After young Arthur, claim this land for me
And, now it is half-conquer'd, must I buy Because that John hath made his peace with Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Ron What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action? is't not I,
That undergo this charge? who else but I
And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business, and maintain this
Have I not heard these islanders shout out Vive le roy! as I have bank'd their towns
Have I not here the best cards for the game
To win this easy match, play'd for a crown
And shall I now give o'er the yielded seat
No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of the world.
Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return Till my attempt so much be glorified
As to my ample hope was promised,
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world
To outlook conquest, and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.—

[Trumpets.]

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us!

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world
Let me have audience; I am sent to speak
My holy Lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him:
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposit
And will not temporize with my entreaties:
He flatly says, he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood, that ever fury bore
The youth says well:—Now hear our English
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar'd; and reason too, he should
This apish and unmannerly approach,
This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel
This unhair'd sauciness, and boyish troops
The king doth smile at; and is well pleas'd
To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand, which had the strength, even
door,

To cudgel you, and make you take the hale, like buckets, in concealed wells;

 ach in litter of your stable planks;
 like pawns, lock'd up in chests and trunks;
 with swine; to seek sweet safety out its and prisons; and to thrill, and shake, the crying of your nation's crow, ag his voice an armed Englishman;—
 hat victorious hand be feebled here, your chambers gave you chastisement?
 now, the gallant monarch is in arms;
 ce an eagle o'er his airy towers, se annoyance, that comes near his nest.—
 o degenerate, you ingrate revolts, oody Neroes, ripping up the womb
 e dear mother England, blush for shame:
 r own ladies, and pale-risag'd maids, masons, come tripping after drums:
 himbles into armed gauntlets change, eeds to lances, and their gentle hearts
 s and bloody inclination.

There end thy brave, and turn thy face in eace;
 at, thou canst outcold us: fare thee well;
 d our time too precious to be spent ach a brabblor.

Give me leave to speak.

No, I will speak.

We will attend to neither:—
 p the drums; and let the tongue of war or our interest, and our being here.
 ded, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
 shall you, being beaten: Do but start with the clamour of thy drum, at at hand a drum is ready brac'd,
 all reverberate all as loud as thine;
 at another, and another shall,
 as thine, rattle the welkin's ear, ck the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at hand using to this halting legate here, he hath us'd rather for sport than need,) ke John; and in his forehead sits ribb'd death, whose office is this day:
 upon whole thousands of the French.
 strike up our drums, to find this danger out.
 And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not dubt. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The same. A field of battle.

us. Enter King JOHN and HUBERT.

us. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, obert.

Badly, I fear: How fares your majesty?
 us. This fever, that hath troubled me so long, wy on me; O, my heart is sick!

Enter a Messenger.

My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulcon-idge,
 your majesty to leave the field;
 d him word by me, which way you go.
 us. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the hey there.
 Be of good comfort; for the great supply,
 s expected by the Dauphin here,
 ck'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
 us was brought to Richard but even now:
 uch fight coldly, and retire themselves.
 us. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
 I not let me welcome this good news.—
 ward Swinstead: to my litter straight;
 us possesseth me, and I am faint. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. Another part of the same.

SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and others.

Did not think the king so stor'd with friends.
 Up once again; put spirit in the French;
 us miscarry, we miscarry too.
 hat misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge, of spite, alone upholds the day.
 hey say, king John, sore sick, hath left the
 id.

Enter MELUN wounded, and led by soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal.

Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English, you are bought and sold;
 Untread the rude eye of rebellion,
 And welcome home again discarded faith.
 Seek out king John, and fall before his feet:
 For, if the French be lords of this loud day,
 He means to recompense the pains you take,
 By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworn,
 And I with him, and many more with me,
 Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's-Bury;
 Even on that altar, where we swore to you
 Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view, Retaining but a quantity of life;

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?

What in the world should make me now deceive,
 Since I must lose the use of all deceit?

Why should I then be false; since it is true,
 That I must die here, and live hence by truth?

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,
 He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east:

But even this night,—whose black contagious breath
 Already smokes about the burning crest

Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,—
 Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire;

Paying the fine of rated treachery,
 Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,

If Lewis by your assistance win the day.
 Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;

The love of him,—and this respect besides,
 For that my grandsire was an Englishman,—

Awakes my conscience to confess all this.
 In lieu whereof, I pray you, hear me hence

From forth the noise and rumour of the field;
 Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts

In peace, and part this body and my soul
 With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee,—and beshrew my soul
 But I do love the favour and the form

Of this most fair occasion, by the which
 We will untread the steps of damned flight;

And, like a bated and retired flood,
 Leaving our rankness and irregular course,

Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd,
 And calmly run on in obedience,

Even to our ocean, to our great king John.—
 My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence;

For I do see the cruel pangs of death
 Right in thine eye.—Away, my friends! New fight;

And happy newness, that intends old right.
 [Exeunt, leading off Melun.]

SCENE V.

The same. The French camp.

Enter LEWIS and his train.

Lew. The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to set;

But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush,
 When the English measur'd backward their own ground,

In faint retire: O, bravely came we off,
 When with a volley of our needless shot,
 After such bloody toil, we bid good night;
 And wound our tatter'd colours clearly up,
 Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lew. Here:—What news?

Mess. The count Melun is slain; the English lords,
 By his persuasion, are again fallen off:
 And your supply, which you have wish'd so long,
 Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin sands.

Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news!—Beshrew thy very heart!

I did not think to be so sad to-night,
 As this hath made me.—Who was he, that said,
 King John did fly, an hour or two before

The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.

Leo. Well; keep good quarter, and good care to-night;

The day shall not be up so soon as I,

To try the fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

An open place in the neighbourhood of Swinstead-Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and HUBERT, meeting.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend:—What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee? Why may not I demand

Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought:

I will, upon all hazards, well believe

Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well:

Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: an if thou please, Thou may'st befriend me so much, as to think I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou, and eyesless night,

Have done me shame:—Brave soldier, pardon me,

That any accent, breaking from thy tongue,

Should 'scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come; and sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night, To find you out.

Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hub. O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night, Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news; I am no woman, I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk: I left him almost speechless, and broke out

To acquaint you with this evil; that you might

The better arm you to the sudden time,

Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,

Whose howls suddenly burst out: the king

Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.

Bast. Who didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back,

And brought prince Henry in their company;

At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,

And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,

And tempt us not to hear above our power!—

I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,

Passing these flats, are taken by the tide,

These Lincoln washes have devour'd them;

Myself, well-mounted, hardly have escap'd.

Away, before! conduct me to the king;

I doubt, he will be dead, or ere I come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

The orchard of Swinstead-Abbey.

Enter Prince HENRY, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

P. Hen. It is too late; the life of all his blood

Is touch'd corruptly; and his pure brain

(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-

house,)

Doth, by the idle comments, that it makes,

Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter PEMBROKE.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief,

That, being brought into the open air,

It would allay the burning quality

Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard

here.—

Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient [Exit out.

Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! fierce extre-

Death, having prey'd upon the outward part

Leaves them insensible; and his siege is no

Against the mind, the which he pricks and

With many legions of strange fantasies;

Which, in their throng and press to that last

Confound themselves. 'Tis strange, that should sing.—

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,

Who chants a doleful hymn to his own det-

And, from the organ-pipe of frailty, sings

His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are

To set a form upon that indigest,

Which he hath left so shapeless and so rud-

Re-enter BIGOT and Attendants, who bring

King JOHN in a chair.

K. John. A y, marry, now my soul hath elbow

It would not out at windows, nor at doors.

There is so hot a summer in my bosom,

That all my bowels crumble up to dust:

I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen

Upon a parchment; and against this fire

Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty

K. John. Poison'd,—ill-fare;—dead, forso-off:

And none of you will bid the winter come,

To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;

Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course

Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat it

To make his bleak winds kiss my parched

And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you

I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,

And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in

That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is Within me is a bell; and there the poison

Is, as a feud, confin'd to tyrannize

On unreprieveable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scalded with my violent

And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set n

The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burr

And all the shrouds, wherewith my life she

Are turned to one thread, one little hair:

My heart hath one poor string to stay it by:

Which holds but till thy news be uttered

And then all this thou see'st, is but a cloc

And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherw

Where, heaven he knows, how we shall ans

For, in a night, the best part of my power

As I upon advantage did remove,

Were in the washes, all unwarily,

Devoured by the unexpected flood. [The Ki

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as

My liege! my lord!—But now a king,—n

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay t

To do the office for thee of revenge,

And then my soul shall wait on thee to h

As it on earth hath been thy servant still.

Now, now, you stars, that move in your right

Where be your powers? Show now your faiths;

And instantly return with me again,

To push destruction, and perpetual shame

Out of the weak door of our fainting land:

Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be

The Dauphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems, you know not then so much

The cardinal Pandolph is within at rest,

Who half an hour since came from the D

And brings from him such offers of our pe

e with honour and respect may take, purpose presently to leave this war.

α. He will the rather do it, when he sees elves well sinewed to our defence.

Nay, it is in a manner done already;
many carriages he hath dispatch'd
e sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel e disposing of the cardinal:

whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
I think meet, this afternoon will post asummate this business happily.

γ. Let it be so:—And you, my noble prince, other princes that may best be spar'd, wait upon your father's funeral.

Hen. At Worcester must his body be interr'd;
o he will'd it.

z. Thither shall it then.
happily may your sweet self put on

The lineal state and glory of the land!
To whom, with all submission, on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful services
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sat. And the like tender of our love we make,
To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul, that would give you
thanks,

And knows not how to do it, but with tears.

Bast. Oh, let us pay the time but needful woe,
Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.—

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself.

Now these ber princes are come home again,
Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King RICHARD, attended; JOHN of GAUNT, and other nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,

Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,
 Brought hither Henry Hereford thy bold son;
 Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,
 Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
 Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have, my liege.

K. Rich. Tell me moreover, hast thou sounded him,

If he appeal the duke on ancient malice;
 Or worthily, as a good subject should,
 On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argument,—

On some apparent danger seen in him,
 Aim'd at thy highness, no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence; face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
 The accuser, and the accused, freely speak:

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
 In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter Attendants, with BOLINGBROKE and NORFOLK.

Boling. May many years of happy days befall
 My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Nor. Each day still better other's happiness;
 Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
 Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both; yet one but flatters us,
 As well appeareth by the cause you come;
 Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.—
 Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
 Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, (heaven be the record to my speech!)
 In the devotion of a subject's love,
 Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
 And free from other misbegotten hate,
 Come I appellat to this princely presence.—
 Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
 And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
 My body shall make good upon this earth,
 Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.

Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant;
 Too good to be so, and too bad to live;
 Since, the more fair and crystal is the sky,
 The uglier seem the clouds, that in it fly.
 Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
 With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
 And wish, (so please my sovereign,) ere I move,
 What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my soul.
 'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
 The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
 Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
 The blood is hot, that must be cool'd for this,
 Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
 As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say:
 First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
 From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
 Which else would post, until it had return'd
 These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
 Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
 And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
 I do defy him, and I spit at him;
 Call him—a slanderous coward, and a villain:
 Which to maintain, I would allow him odds;
 And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
 Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
 Or any other ground inhabitable,
 Where ever Englishman dare set his foot.
 Mean time, let this defend my loyalty,
 By all my hopes, most falsely does he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,

Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;
 And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
 Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
 If guilty dread hath left thee so much strength,
 As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop;
 By that, and all the rites of knighthood else,
 Will I make good against thee, arm to arm.
 What I have spoke, or thou canst worst deserve,
Nor. I take it up; and, by that sword I swear,
 Which gently lay'd my knighthood on my shoulder,
 I'll answer thee in any fair decree,
 Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
 And, when I mount, alive may I not light,
 If I be traitor, or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?

It must be great, that can inherit us
 So much as of a thought of ill in him.

RICHARD III.

Act 5. Sc. 5.

Published by W. Clarendon, St. Chancery Lane 1824.

Boling. Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true;—

That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles,
In some of lendings for your highness' soldiers;
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.
Besides I say, and will in battle prove,—
Or, here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge,
That ever was survey'd by English eye,—
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Completed and contriv'd in this land,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say,—and further will maintain Upon his bad life, to make all this good,—
That he did plot the duke of Gloster's death;
Suggest his soon believing adversaries;
And, consequently, like a traitor coward, Flie'd out his innocent soul through streams of
blood:

Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious birth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars!—
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Nor. O, let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes, and ears:

Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
(As he is but my father's brother's son),
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege hint, nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul;
He is our subject, Mowbray, so art thou;
Free speech, and fearless, I to thee allow.

Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest!
These gurs of that receipt I had for Calais, Dishonour'd I duly to his highness' soldiers:

The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen:
Now swallow down that lie.—For Gloster's
death,—

I slew him out; but to my own disgrace, Neglected my sworn duty in that case.—
For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay in ambush for your life,
A trespass, that doth vex my grieved soul:
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it; and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: As for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain.
A recreant and most degenerate traitor:
Which in myself I boldly will defend;
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood, chamber'd in his bosom:
In whose whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be rul'd by me;
Let's purge this choler without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; and conclude, and be agreed;
Our doctors say, this is no time to bleed.—
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, thy your son.

Glouc. To be a make-peace shall become my age:—

Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.

Glouc. When, Harry? when?

K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down; we bid; there is no boot.

Nor. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot:

My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
(Despite of death, that lives upon my grave,)
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;
Pierc'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood,
Which breath'd this poison.

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood:
Give me his gage:—Lions make leopards tame.

Nor. Yea, but not change their spots: take but my shame,

And I resign my gage. My dear dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is—spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten-times-barr'd-up chest
Is—a bold spirit in a loyal breast.

Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done:
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try;
In that I live, and for that will I die.

K. Rich. Cousin, throw down your gage; do you begin.

Boling. O, God defend my soul from such foul sin!
Shall I seem cresset-fallen in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar fear impeach my height
Before this outard'd dastard? Ere my tongue Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear;
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face. [Exit Gaunt.]

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command:
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day;
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate;
Since we cannot atone you, we shall see Justice design the victor's chivalry.—
Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home-alarms. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room in the Duke of Lancaster's palace.

Enter GAUNT, and Duchess of Gloster.

Gaunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloster's blood
Doth more solicit me, than your exclams,
To stir against the butchers of his life.
But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault, that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of Heaven;
Who, when he sees the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,—
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,—
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt! his blood was thine; that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self-mould, that fashion'd thee, Made him a man; and though thou liv'st, and breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That, which in mean men we entitle—patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is—to 'venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt. Heaven's is the quarrel; for heaven's substitute,
His deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death: the which if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

Gaunt. To heaven, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt. Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight: O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear, That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast! Or, if misfortune miss the first career, Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom, That they may break his foaming courser's back, And throw the rider headlong in the lists, A catif recreant to my cousin Hereford! Farewell, old Gaunt; thy sometimes brother's wife, With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell: I must to Coventry:

As much good stay with thee, as go with me!

Duch. Yet one word more;—Grief boundeth where it falls,

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight: I take my leave before I have begun; For sorrow ends not, when it seemeth done. Commend me to my brother, Edmund York. Lo, this is all:—Nay, yet depart not so; Though this be all, do not so quickly go; I shall remember more. Bid him—O, what?— With all good speed at Plashy visit me. Alack, and what shall good old York there see, But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls, Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones? And what cheer there for welcome, but my groans? Therefore commend me; let him not come there, To seek out sorrow, that dwells every where: Desolate, desolate, will I hence, and die; The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

Gosford Green, near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a throne. Herald, &c. attending.

Enter the Lord Marshal, and AUMERLE.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?

Aum. Yes, at all points; and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,

Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd, and stay

For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish of trumpets. Enter King RICHARD, who takes his seat on his throne; GAUNT, and several Noblemen, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Then enter NORFOLK in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion

The cause of his arrival here in arms:

Ask him his name; and orderly proceed

To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who

thou art,

And why thou com'st, thus knightly clad in arms:

Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel:

Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thy oath;

And so defend thee heaven, and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk;

Who hither come engaged by my oath,

(Which, heaven defend, a knight should violate!)

Both to defend my loyalty and truth,

To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,

Against the duke of Hereford, that appeals me;

And, by the grace of God, and this mine arm,

To prove him, in defending of myself,

A traitor to my God, my king, and me:

And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

[He takes his seat.]

Trumpet sounds. Enter BOLINGBROK in armour; preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in Both who he is, and why he cometh hither

Thus plated in the habiliments of war;

And formally according to our law

Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore thou hither,

Before King Richard, in his royal lists?

Against whom comest thou? and what's thy

In lists, on Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk

That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,

To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me

And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so

Or daring-hardy, as to touch the lists;

Except the marshal, and such officers

Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign hand,

And bow my knee before his majesty:

For Mowbray, and myself, are like two men

That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;

Then let us take a ceremonious leave,

And loving farewell of our several friends.

[The King and the Lords return to the

Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, thy lance; and God defend the right!

g. [Rising.] Strong as a tower in hope, I
—amen.

Go bear this lance [To an Officer.] to Thomas duke of Norfolk.

Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
here for God, his sovereign, and himself,
to be found false and recreant,
to the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray, to his God, his king, and him,
res him to set forward to the fight.

Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,

to be found false and recreant,
to defend himself, and to approve of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
ously, and with a free desire,
to give the signal to begin.

Sound, trumpets; and set forward, com-mandants.

[A charge sounded.]
The king bath thrown his warner down.

Let them lay by their helmets and their cars,

to return back to their chairs again:—
to sit with us:—and let the trumpets sound to return these dukes what we decree.—

[A long flourish.]
[To the Combatants.]

What with our council we have done, our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd at dear blood, which it hath fostered;
our eyes do hate the dire aspect wounds, plough'd up with neighbour's

swords;

we think the eagle-winged pride springing and ambitious thoughts, all-hating envy, set you on our peace, which in our country's cradle be sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;

to rous'd up with boisterous untun'd drums,
to rath resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,
to sing shock of wrathful iron arms,

to smother our quiet confines fright fair peace,
to set us wade even in our kindred's blood;—

to banish you our territories:—
to stain Hereford, upon pain of death, to five summers have enrich'd our fields,

to regret our fair dominions,

to bid the stranger paths of banishment.

Your will be done: This must my commit be.—

That warms you here, shall shine on me;
to give his golden beams, to you here lent,
to sit on me, and gild my banishment.

Let Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier sin,

with some unwillingness pronounce:
to low hours shall not determinate to less limit of thy dear exile;—
to less word of—never to return to I against thee, upon pain of life.

to heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
to unlook'd for from your highness' mouth:
to merit, not so deep a main to cast forth in the common air, to deserved at your highness' band.

to sage I have learn'd these forty years,
to be English, now I must forego:
to my tongue's use is to me no more,
to unstringed viol or a harp;
to cunning instrument cas'd up,
to open, put into his hands,
to was no touch to tune the harmony.

to my mouth you have engal'd my tongue,
to mortuall'd, with my teeth and lips;
to unfeeling, barren ignorance to my gaoler to attend on me.

to old to fawn upon a nurse,
to years to be a pupil now;
to thy sentence then, but speechless death,
to bes my tongue from breathing native breath?

to i. It boots thee not to be compassionate;
to sentence plaining comes too late.

to then thus I turn me from my country's light,

To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

[Retiring.]
K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.

'Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
to Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves.)

To keep the oath that he administer:— to You never shall (so help you truth and heaven!)
to Embrace each other's love in banishment;
to Nor never look upon each other's face;

to Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile to This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
to Nor never by advised purpose meet,
to To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far as to mine enemy:—
to By this time, had the king permitted us, to One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
to Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
to As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
to Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
to Since thou hast far to go, bear not along to The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor, to My name be blotted from the book of life,
to And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence!
to But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know;
to And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.— to Farewell, my liege:—Now no way can I stray;
to Save back to England; all the world's my way.

[Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes to I see thy griev'd heart: thy sad aspect to Hath from the number of his banish'd years to Pluck'd four away:—Six frozen winters spent, to Return [To Boling.] with welcome home from to banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
to Four lagging winters, and four wanton springs, to End in a word; Such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that, in regard of me, to He shortens four years of my son's exile:
to But little vantage shall I reap thereby;
to For, ere the six years, that he hath to spend,
to Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
to My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
to Shall be extinct with age, and endless night;
to My ioch of taper will be burnt and done,
to And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou can'st to give:

Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow, to And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
to Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
to But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;
to Thy word is current with him for my death;
to But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice, to Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave;
to Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lower?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste, prove in digestion to sour.

You urg'd me as a judge; but I bad rather,
to You would have bid me argue like a father:—
to O, had it been a stranger, not my child, to To smooth his fault I should have been more mild:
to A partial slander sought I to avoid,
to And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.

Alas, I look'd, when some of you should say,
to I was too strict, to make mine own away;
to But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
to Against my will, to do myself this wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell:—and, uncle, bid him so;
to Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exeunt K. Richard and Train.]

Aum. Cousin, farewell: what presence must not to know,

From where you do remain, let paper show.

Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride, to As far as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. O, to what purpose dost thou heard thy to words,

That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you, When the tongue's office should be prodigal To breathe the abundant doulour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh, when I miscall it so, Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps

Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set

The precious jewel of thy home-return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make

Will but remember me, what a deal of world

I wander from the jewels, that I love.

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship

To foreign passages; and in the end,

Having my freedom, boast of nothing else,

But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Gaunt. All places, that the eye of heaven visits,

Are to a wise man ports and happy havens;

Teach thy necessity to reason thus;

There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not, the king did banish thee;

Put thou the king: Woe doth the heavier sit,

Where it perceives it; but is faintly borne.

Go, say—I sent thee forth to purchase honour,

And not—the king exil'd thee: or suppose,

Devouring pestilence haags in our air,

And thou art flying to a fresher clime.

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it

To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st:

Suppose the singing birds, musicians;

The grass, whereon thou tread'st, the presence

strew'd;

The flowers, fair ladies; and thy steps, no more

Than a delightful measure, or a dance:

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite

The man, that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Boling. O, who can hold a fire in his hand,

By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,

By bare imagination of a feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow,

By thinking on fantastick summer's heat?

O, no! the apprehension of the good,

Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rattle more,

Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way:

Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell; sweet soil, adieu;

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!

Where-e'er I wander, boast of this I can,—

Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman.

[Ereunt.]

SCENE IV.

The same. A room in the King's castle.

Enter King RICHARD, BAGOT, and GREEN;
AUMERLE following.

K. Rich. We did observe.—Cousin Aumerle,

How far brought you high Hereford on his way?

Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,

But to the next highway, and there I left K. Rich. And, say, what store of pardons were shed?

Aum. Faith, none by me: except the no-

Awak'd the sleeping rheum; and so, by c-

K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you

with him?

Aum. Farewell:

And, for my heart disdained that my tongue

Should so profane the word, that taught

To counterfeit oppression of such grief,

That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's

Marry, would the word farewell have lea-

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick

Suddenly taken; and hath sent post-ha-

K. Rich. Now put it, heaven, in his p-

To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars:

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

London. A room in Ely-house.

GAUNT on a couch; the Duke of York, and others,
standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come? that I may breathe my last

In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth.

York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath;

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.

Gaunt. O, but they say, the tongues of Enforce attention like deep harmony:

Where words are scarce, they are seldom

For they breathe truth, that breathe their pain.

The king is come : deal mildly with his ath ;
 g hot colts, being rag'd, do rage the more.
 How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster ?
 t. What comfort, man ? How is't with d Gaunt ?
 O, how that name befits my composition !
 at, indeed ; and gaunt in being old :

ae grief hath kept a tedious fast ;
 abstains from meat, that is not gaunt ?
 ing England long time have I watch'd ;
 g breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt :
 ure, that some fathers feed upon,
 icet fast, I mean—my children's looks ;
 rein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt :
 I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
 ollow womb inherits nought but bones.
 l. Can sick men play so nicely with their es ?

No, misery makes sport to mock itself :
 a dost seek to kill my name in me,
 y name, great king, to flatter thee.
 . Should dying men flatter with those that
 ?

Gaunt. No, no ; men living flatter those that die.
 K. Rich. Thou, now a dying, say'st—thou flatter'st me.

Gaunt. Oh ! no ; thou diest, though I the sicker be.
 K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt. Now, He that made me, knows I see thee ill ;
 ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.
 Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land,
 Wherein thou liest in reputation sick :
 And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
 Commit'st thy anointed body to the cure
 Of those physicians that first wounded thee :
 A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
 Whose compass is no bigger than thy head ;
 And yet, incaged in so small a verge,
 The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.

O, had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,
 Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
 From forth thy reach he should have laid thy shame ;
 Depositing thee before thou wert possess'd,
 Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.
 Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
 It were a shame to let this land by lease :

But, for thy world, enjoying but this land,
 Is it not more than shame, to shame it so !
 Landlord of England art thou now, not king :
 Thy state of law is bondsman to the law ;
 And thou—

K. Rich. — a lunatick, lean-witted fool,
 Presuming on an age's privilege,
 Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
 Make pale our cheek ; chasing the royal blood,
 With fury, from his native residence.
 Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,
 Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
 This tongue, that runs so roundly in thy head,
 Should run thy head from thy unreverend shoulders.

Gaunt. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
 For that I was his father Edward's son ;
 That blood already, like the pelican,
 Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd :
 My brother Gloster, plain well-meaning soul,
 (Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls !)
 May be a precedent and witness good,
 That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood :

Join with the present sickness, that I have ;
 And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
 To crop at once a too-long wither'd flower.
 Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee !—
 These words hereafter thy tormentors be !—
 Convey me to my bed, then to my grave :
 Love they to live, that love and honour have.

[Exit, borne out by his Attendants.]
 K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sullens
 have ;
 For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

York. 'Beseech your majesty, impute his words
 To wayward sickness and age in him :
 He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
 As Harry duke of Hereford, were he here.

K. Rich. Right ; you say true : as Hereford's love, so his :
 As theirs, so mine ; and all be as it is.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.

K. Rich. What says he now ?
 North. Nay, nothing ; all is said :
 His tongue is now a stringless instrument ;
 Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so !
 Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he ;
 His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be :
 So much for that.—Now for our Irish wars :
 We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns ;
 Which live like venom, where no venom else,
 But only they, hath privilege to live.
 And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
 Towards our assistance, we do seize to us
 The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
 Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.
 York. How long shall I be patient ? Ah, how long Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong ?

Not Gloster's death, nor Hereford's banishment,
 Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs,
 Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke,
 About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
 Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
 Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.—
 I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
 Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first;
 In war was never lion rag'd more fierce,
 In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
 Than was that young and princely gentleman:
 His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
 Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours;
 But, when he frown'd, it was against the French,
 And not against his friends; his noble hand
 Did win what he did spend, and spent not that Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
 His hands were guilty of no kindred's blood,
 But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
 O, Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
 Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
York. O, my liege,
 Pardon me, if you please; if not, I pleas'd
 Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
 Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
 The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
 Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Hereford live?
 Was not Gaunt just? and is not Harry true?
 Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
 Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
 Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
 His charters, and his customary rights;
 Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
 Be not thyself, for how art thou a king,
 But by fair sequence and succession?
 Now, afore God (God forbid, I say true!)
 If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
 Call in the letters patent, that he hath
 By his attorneys-general to sue
 His livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
 You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
 You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
 And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
 Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will; we seize into our hands

His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by, the while: My liege, farewell:

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
 But by bad courses may be understood,
 That their events can never fall out good. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire straight;

Bid him repair to us to Ely-house,
 To see this business: To-morrow next
 We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow;
 And we create, in absence of ourself,
 Our uncle York lord governor of England,
 For he is just, and always loved us well.—
 Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
 Be merry, for our time of stay is short. [Flourish.]

[Exeunt King, Queen, Bushy, Aumerle, Green, and Bagot.]

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revenue.
North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence,

Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.
North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more,

That speaks thy words again, to do thee harm!
Will. Tends that, thou'dst speak, to the duke of Hereford?

If it be so, out with it boldly, man:
 Quick is mine ear, to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all, that I can do for him;
 Unless you call it good, to pity him,
 Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

North. Now, afore heaven, 'tis shame, such wrongs are borne,

In him a royal prince, and many more
 Of noble blood in this declining land.

The king is not himself, but basely led,
 By flatterers; and what they will inform Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
 That will the king severely prosecute

as one thing entire to many objects ;

ades me, it is otherwise : Howe'er it be,
not but be sad ; so heavy sad, though, in thinking, on no thought I think,— me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.
Ay. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

some fore-father grief ; mine is not so ;
thing hath begot my something grief ;
nothing hath the nothing that I grieve :
reversion that I do possess ;
hat it is, that is not yet known ; what

Enter GREEN.

a. God save your majesty!—and well met,
gentlemen :—

a. the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

ex. Why hop'st thou so ? 'tis better hope he is ;
is desigs crave haste, his haste good hope :

wherefore dost thou hope, he is not shipp'd ?

a. That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power,

riven into despair an enemy's hope,
strongly hath set footing in this land :

ish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself, ith uplifted arms is safe arriv'd vempurg.

Now God in heaven forbid !

a. O, madam, 'tis too true : and that is worse,— nd Northumberland, his young son Henry

Percy,
nds of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Ay. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland,

l the rest of the revolting faction,
a ?

a. We have : whereon the earl of Worcester broke his staff, resign'd his stewardship, l the household servants fled with him
lingbroke.

a. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe, olingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir :

ath my soul brought forth her prodigy ;
a gasping new-deliver'd mother,

woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.
Ay. Despair not, madam.

a. Who shall hinder me ?

despair, and be at enmity cozening Hope ; he is a flatterer, sate, a keeper-back of death,

gently would dissolve the bands of life,
a false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter YORK.

a. Here comes the duke of York.

a. With signs of war about his aged neck ;
l of careful business are his looks !—

aven's sake, speak comfortable words.

a. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts :
rt's in heaven ; and we are on the earth,

: nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief.
usband he is gone to save far off,

t others come to make him lose at home :
om I left to underprop his land ;

weak with age, cannot support myself :—

Now comes the sick hour, that his surfeit made ;
Now shall he try his friends, that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.
York. He was ?—Why, so !—go all which way it will !—

The nobles they are fled, the commons cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.—

Sirrah,
Get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster ;
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound :—

Hold, take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship :
To-day, as I came by, I called there ;—

But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is it, knave ?

Serv. An hour before I came, the duchess died.

York. God for his mercy ! what a tide of woes Comes rushing on this woeful land at once !

I know not what to do :—I would to God,
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it),
The king had cut off my head with my brother's.—

What, are there posts despatch'd for Ireland ?—
How shall we do for money for these wars ?—

Come, sister,—cousin, I would say : pray, pardon
me.—

Go, fellow, [To the Servant.] get thee home, provide some carts,

And bring away the armour, that is there.—
[Exit Servant.]

Gentlemen, will you go muster men ? if I know
How, or which way, to order these affairs,

Thus thrust disorderly into my hands,
Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen ;—

The one's my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend ; the other, again,

Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd ;
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.

Well, somewhat we must do.—Come, cousin, I'll Dispose of you :—Go, muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Berkley-castle.

I should to Plashy too ;—
But time will not permit :—All is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.

[Excunt York and Queen.]

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,
But none returns. For us to levy power, Proportionable to the enemy,
Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love,
Is near the hate of these, love not the king.

Bagot. And that's the wavering commons : for their love

Lies in their purses ; and whose empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,
Because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle ;

The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you : for little office
The hateful commons will perform for us ;
Except, like curs, to tear us all to pieces.—

Will you go along with us ?

Bagot. No ; I'll to Ireland to his majesty.
Farewell : if heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke.

Green. Alas, poor duke ! the task, he undertakes,
Is—numb'ring sands, and drinking oceans dry ;
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.

Bushy. Farewell at once ; for once, for all, and ever.

Green. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never.
[Excunt.]

SCENE III.

The Wilds in Gloucestershire.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBER-LAND, with forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley now ?
C e

North. Believe me, noble lord,
I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire.
These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,
Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome;
And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable.
But, I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspurge to Cotswood, will be found In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company;
Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd
The tediousness and process of my travel:
But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit, which I possess:
And hope to joy, is little less in joy,
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short; as mine hath done
By sight of what I have, your noble company.
Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter HARRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever.—
Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?
Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsook
the court,

Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd
The household of the king.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake together.
Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor.

But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspurge,
To offer service to the duke of Hereford;
And sent me o'er by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there;
Then with direction to repair to Ravenspurge.

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford, boy?
Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot,
Which he'er I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now; this is the duke.

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young;
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure,
I count myself in nothing else so happy,
As in a soul remembering my good friends;
And, as my fortune ripens, with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley? And what stir Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?

Percy. There stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard:
And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Seymour;
None else of name, and noble estimate.

Enter ROSS and WILLOUGHBY.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords: I wot, your love pursues

A banish'd traitor; all my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which, more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.

Will. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Boling. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor;

Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here!

Enter BERKLEY.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.

Berk. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is—to Lancaster;
And I am come to seek that name in England:
And I must find that title in your tongue

Before I make reply to aught you say.

SCENE IV.

A Camp in Wales.Enter SALISBURY, and a Captain.

My lord of Salisbury, we have staid ten days,

And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
Therefore we will disperse ourselves: farewell.
Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welsh-
man;
The king reposeth all his confidence
In thee.
Cap. 'Tis thought, the king is dead; we will not stay.
The hay-trees in our country are all wither'd,
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,—
The one, in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other, to enjoy his rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.—
Farewell; our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd, Richard their king is dead.

[Exit.

Sal. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind,
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes;
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.

ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Bolingbroke's camp at Bristol.

BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUM-LAND, PERCY, WILLOUGHBY, S: Officers behind with BUSHY and JEN, prisoners.

g. Bring forth these men.—
Green, I will not vex your souls
Presently your souls must part your bodies,
So much urging your pernicious lives,
I have no charity: yet, to wash your blood
Off my hands, here, in the view of men,
I unfold some causes of your death.
I was misled a prince, a royal king,
A gentleman in blood and lineaments,
Unhappily and disfigur'd clean.
I live, in manner, with your sinful hours,
A divorce betwixt his queen and him;
I have the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
—A prince, by fortune of my birth;
I have the king in blood; and near in love,
I have did make him misinterpret me,—
I have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
I have giv'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
I have the bitter bread of banishment:
I have you have fed upon my signiories,
I have kild my parks, and fell'd my forest woods;
I have torn my own windows, torn my household coat,
I have put out my impress, leaving me no sign,—
I have given up my opinions, and my living blood,—
I have now the world I am a gentleman.
I have said much more, much more than twice all this,
I have said unto the death:—See them deliver'd
Over
I have cut and the hand of death.
g. More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
I have Bolingbroke to England.—Lords, farewell.
g. My comfort is,—that heaven will take our souls,
I have argue injustice with the pains of hell.
g. My lord Northumberland, see them despatch'd.
[Exit Northumb. and others, with Prisoners.
I have you say, the queen is at your house;
I have for even's sake, fairly let her be entreated:
I have for, I send to her my kind commends;
I have for special care my greetings be deliver'd.
I have for A gentleman of mine I have despatch'd
I have for letters of your love to her at large.
g. Thanks, gentle uncle.—Come, lords,
I have away;

To fight with Glendower and his complices;
I have Awfully to work, and, after, holiday. [Exit.

SCENE II.

The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish: drums and trumpets. Enter King RICHARD, Bishop of CARLISLE, AU-MERLE, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call you this at hand?
Aum. Yea, my lord; how brooks your grace the air,
After late tossing on the breaking seas?
K. Rich. Needs must I like it well; I weep for joy,
To stand upon my kingdom once again.—
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs:
As a long parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears, and smiles in meeting;
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favour with my royal hands.
Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense:
But let thy spiders that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their way;
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies:
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder;
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.—
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords;
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall faultier under foul rebellious arms.
Bishop. Fear not, my lord; that Power that made you king,
Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.
The means that Heaven yields must be embrac'd,
And not neglected; else, if Heaven would,
And we will not, Heaven's offer we refuse;
The proffer'd means of succour and redress.
Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great, in substance and in friends.
K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou not,
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen
In murders, and in outrage, bloody here;
But when, from under this terrestrial ball,
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,

The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,—
Who all this while hath revell'd, in the night,
Whilst we were wand'ring with the antipodes,—
Shall see us rising in our throats the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king!
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord:
For every man, that Bolingbroke hath press'd,
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight, Weak men must fall; for heaven still guards the right.

Enter SALISBURY.

Welcome, my lord; how far off lies your power?
Sal. Nor near, nor further off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm: Discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth;
O, call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men!
To-day, to-day, unhappy day, too late,
O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, and fled.

Ann. Comfort, my liege: why looks your grace
so pale?

K. Rich. But now, the blood of twenty thousand men

Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
And, till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead;
All souls, that will be safe, fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Ann. Comfort, my liege; remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself: Am I not king?
Is not the king's name forty thousand names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory.—Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king; Are we not high?
High be our thoughts: I know, my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who Comes here?

Enter SCROOP.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my liege,
Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.

K. Rich. Mine ears is open, and my heart prepar'd;
The worst is worldly loss, thou canst unfold.

Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 'twas my care;
And what loss is it, to be rid of care?

Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be; if he serve God,

We'll serve him too, and he his fellow so;
Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend;

They break their faith to God, as well as us:
Cry, woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay;

The worst is—death, and death will have his day.

Scroop. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd
To hear the tidings of calamity.

Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears;
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalps

Against thy majesty; boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints
In stiff unyielding arms against thy crown:
Thy very headmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

K. Rich. Too well, too well, thou tell'st a tale so ill.

The news is very fair and good, my lord;
not far from hence, hath hid his head.
It would besem the lord Northumberland,
-king Richard:—Alack the heavy day,
uch a sacred king should hide his head!
Your grace mistakes me; only to be brief,

The time hath been,
you have been so brief with him, he would Enter PERCY.

The castle royally is man'd, my lord,
thy entrance.
Royally! contains no king?

Yes, my good lord,
tain a king; king Richard lies

Northumberland advances to the castle, with a trumpet.

Let's march without the noise of threat'ning drum,
That from the castle's totter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thund'ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him.
March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A parle sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the walls King RICHARD, the Bishop of CARLISLE, AU-
MERLE, SCROOP, and SALISBURY.

York. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east;
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.

Yet looks he like a king; behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth Controlling majesty; Alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!

K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood

To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,

[To Northumberland.
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship:
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the secret handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.

And though you think, that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of friends;—
Yet know,—my master, God omnipotent,
Is must'ring in his clouds, on our behalf,
Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke, (for yond', methinks, he is),
That every stride he makes upon my land,
Is dangerous treason: He is come to ope
The purple testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
Shall ill become the flower of England's face;
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastures' grass with faithful English blood.

North. The King of heaven forbid, our lord the king Should so with civil and uncivil arms
Be rush'd upon! Thy thrice-noble cousin,
Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;
And by the honourable tomb he swears,
That stands upon thy royal grandsire's bones;
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents, that spring from one most gracious head;
And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt;
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all, that may be sworn or said,—
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg Enfranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

K. Rich. Northumberland, say,—thus, the king returns;—

His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commendments.—
We do debase ourself, cousin, do we not,

[To Aumerle.

To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?

Am. No, good my lord; let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful
swords.

K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue
of mine,

That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On you proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth! O, that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name!
Or that I could forget what I have been!
Or not remember what I must be now!
Swell'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat,

Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

Am. Northumberland comes back from Boling-broke.

K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must he submit?

The king shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
The king shall be contented: Must he lose
The name of king? o' God's name, let it go:
I'll give my jewels, for a set of beads;
My gorgeous palace, for a hermitage;
My gay apparel, for an alms-man's gown;
My sceptre, for a palmer's walking-staff;
My subjects, for a pair of carved saints;
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave:—
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head:
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live;
And, buried once, why not upon my head?—
Aumerle, thou weep'st; my tender-hearted cousin!—
We'll make foul weather with despised tears;
Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the summer corn,
And make a dearth in this revolting land.

Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus;—To drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid,—*There lies
Two kinsmen, digg'd their graves with weeping eyes?*
Would not this ill do well?—Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me.—
Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says—ay.

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
To speak with you; may't please you to come down!

K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistening Phaeton,

Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

[North. retires to Boling.
In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,
To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.

In the base court? Come down? Down court! down

For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should Boling. What says his majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart Makes him speak fondly like a frantick man:
Yet he is come.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Attendants, below.

Boling. Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his majesty.—
My gracious lord,—

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee,

To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
Me rather had, my heart might feel your love,
Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.
Up, cousin, up; your heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least, [Touching his own head.] al-

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubt
As my true service shall deserve your love.

 t thou, thou little better thing than earth, is his downfall? Say, where, when, and how,
 t thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I,
 To breathe this news; yet, what I say, is true.
 King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
 Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:
 In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
 And some few vanities, that make him light;
 But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
 Besides himself, are all the English peers,
 And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.
 Post you to London, and you'll find it so;
 I speak no more than every one doth know.
 Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
 Doth not thy embassy belong to me,
 And am I last that knows it? O, thou think'st
 To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go,
 To meet at London London's king in woe.—
 What, was I born to this! that my sad look Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?—
 Gardener, for telling me this news of woe,
 I would, the plants thou graft'st, may never grow.
 [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.
 Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,
 I would my skill were subject to thy curse.—
 Here did she drop a tear; here, in this place,
 I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace:
 Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
 In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exeunt.

ACT THE FOURTH.

SCENE I.

London. Westminster Hall.

ords spiritual on the right side of the throne; the ds temporal on the left; the Commons below. Enter LINGBROKE, AUMERLE, SURREY, RTHUMBERLAND, PERCY, FITZWA-
 R, another Lord, Bishop of CARLISLE, Abbot WESTMINSTER, and Attendants. Officers nd, with BAGOT.
 ag. Call forth Bagot:— Bagot, freely speak thy mind;
 dost thou know of noble Gloster's death;
 wrought it with the king, and who perform'd loody office of his timeless end.
 w. Then set before my face the lord Aumerle.
 ag. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.
 w. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
 t to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.
 t dead time, when Gloster's death was plotted,
 d you say,—Is not my arm of length, reacheth from the restful English court as Calais, to my uncle's head?
 get much other talk, that very time, d you say, that you had rather refuse offer of an hundred thousand crowns, Bolingbroke's return to England;
 g withal, how blest this land would be,
 as your cousin's death.
 w. Princes, and noble lords, answer shall I make to this base man?
 I so much dishonour my fair stars, deal terms to give him chastisement?
 t I must, or have mine honour soil'd the attainder of his sland'rous lips.—
 t is my gage, the manual seal of death, marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest, will maintain, what thou hast said, is false,
 t heart-blood, though being all too base in the temper of my knightly sword.
 ag. Bagot, forbear, thou shalt not take it up.
 w. Excepting one, I would he were the best this presence, that hath mov'd me so.
 t. If that thy valour stand on sympathies, is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine:
 at fair sun, that shows me, where thou stand'st, rd thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
 a deny'st cause of noble Gloster's death,
 t deny'st it, twenty times thou liest;
 t will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,

Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.
 Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.
 Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.
 Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.
 Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true,
 In this appeal, as thou art all unjust:
 And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
 To prove it on thee to the extremest point
 Of mortal breathing; seize it, if thou dar'st.
 Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
 And never brandish more revengeful steel
 Over the glittering helmet of my foe!
 Lord. I take the earth to the like, forsworn Aumerle;
 And spur thee on with full as many lies
 As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
 From sun to sun: there is my honour's pawn;
 Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.
 Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all:
 I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
 To answer twenty thousand such as you.
 Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
 The very time Aumerle and you did talk.
 Fitz. My lord, 'tis true: you were in presence then;
 And you can witness with me, this is true.
 Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.
 Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.
 Surrey. Dishonourable boy!
 That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword,
 That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
 'Till thou the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
 In earth as quiet as thy father's scull.
 In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn;
 Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.
 Fitz. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!
 If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
 I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,
 And spit upon him, whilst I say, he lies,
 And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith,
 To tie thee to my strong correction.—
 As I intend to thrive in this new world,
 Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal:
 Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
 That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
 To execute the noble duke at Calais.
 Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage,
 That Norfolk lies: here do I throw down this,
 If he may be repeal'd to try his honour.
 Boling. These differences shall all rest under gage,

Till Norfolk be repeal'd : repeal'd he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his land and signories ; when he's return'd, Against Aumerle we will enforce this trial.

Car. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.—
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought For Jesu Christ ; in glorious Christian field Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross, Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens :
And, toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself
To Italy ; and there, at Venice, gave His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead ?

Car. As sure as I live, my lord.

Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham !—Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter YORK, attended.

York. Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee From plume-pluck'd Richard ; who with willing soul

Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand :
Ascend his throne, descending now from him,—
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth !

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne.

Car. Marry, God forbid !—

Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeching me to speak the truth.
Would God, that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge Of noble Richard ; then true nobleness would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king ?
And who sits here, that is not Richard's subject ?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them :
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,
And he himself not present ? O, forbid it, God,
That, in a Christian climate, souls refin'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed !
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by heaven thus boldly for his king.
My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,
Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king :
And if you crown him, let me prophesy,—
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act ;
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And, in this seat of peace, tumultuous wars
Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound ;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead men's skulls.
O, if you rear this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove,
That ever fell upon this cursed earth :
Prevent, resist it, let it not be so,
Lest child, child's children, cry against you—woe !

North. Well have you argu'd, sir ; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here :—
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.—
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit.

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender ; so we shall proceed Without suspicion.

York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.]

Boling. Lords, you that are here under our arrest, Procure your sureties for your days of answer :—
Little are we beholden to your love, [To Carlisle.]
And little look'd for at your helping hands.

Re-enter YORK, with King RICHARD, and Officers bearing the crown, &c.

K. Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a king,

Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd ? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee,
Give sorrow leave a while to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The favours of these men : Were they not men,
Did they not sometime cry, all hail ! to me ?
So Judas did to Christ : but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one ; and I, in twelve thou-

God save the king !—Will no man say amen
Am I both priest and clerk ? well then, amen
God save the king ! although I be not he ;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me.—
To do what service am I sent for hither ?

York. To do that office, of thine own good Which tired majesty did make thee offer,—
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Henry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown :—Here, crown seize the crown ;

Here, on this side, my hand ; on that side, thou
Now is this golden crown like a deep well,
That owes two buckets filling one another ;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water :
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my griefs, whilst thou mountest up on high.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to give me the crown.
K. Rich. My crown, I am ; but still my are mine :

You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs ; still I am king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with crown.

K. Rich. Your cares set up, do not pluck me down.

My care is—loss of care, by old care done ;
Your care is—gain of care, by new care won.
The cares, I give, I have, though given away
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown ?
K. Rich. Ay, no ;—no, ay :—for I must not therefore no, for I resign to thee.

Now mark me how I will undo myself :—
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart,
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duties due
All pomp and majesty I do forswear ;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forego ;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny :
God pardon all oaths, that are broke to me ;
God keep all vows unbroke, are made to me ;
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing gild ;
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achieve'd,
Long may'st thou live in Richard's seat to see
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit !
God save king Henry, unking'd Richard say
And send him many years of sunshine days :
What more remains ?

North. No more, but that you [Offering a]

These accusations, and these grievous crimes Committed by your person, and your follow
Against the state and profit of this land ;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so ? and must I ravel
My wear'd up follies ? Gentle Northumber,
If thy offences were upon record,

Would it not shame thee in so fair a troop
To read a lecture of them ? If thou would'st
There should'st thou find one heinous article
Containing the deposing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven,
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait me,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your Showing an outward pity ; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

My lord, dispatch; read o'er these articles.
 Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see:
 salt water blinds them not so much,
 I can see a sort of traitors here.
 I turn mine eyes upon myself, myself a traitor with the rest:
 I've given here my soul's consent, to ck the pompous body of a king;
 my base; and sovereignty, a slave;
 majesty, a subject; state, a peasant.

My lord:—
 No lord of thine, thou haught, insulting an,
 nan's lord; I have no name, no title,— that name was given me at the font,— usurp'd:—Alack the heavy day,
 I've worn so many winters out,
 I wot not now what name to call myself!
 I were a mockery king of snow,
 before the sun of Bolingbroke, myself away in water-drops!— go,—great king,—(and yet not greatly good,)— word be sterling yet in England, I'mm'd a mirror hither straight;
 may show me what a face I have,
 a bankrupt of his majesty.

Go some of you, and fetch a lookingglass. [Exit an Attendant.
 Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth
 me.

Fiend! thou torment'st me ere I come hell.
 Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland.
 The commons will not then be satisfied.
 They shall be satisfied; I'll read enough, do see the very book indeed
 all my sins are writ, and that's—myself.

Re-enter Attendant, with a glass.
 That glass, and therein will I read.— Wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck blows upon this face of mine, or deeper wounds?—O, flattering glass,
 thy followers in prosperity, beguile me! Was this face the face, y day under his household roof ten thousand men? Was this the face, the sun, did make beholders wink?
 the face, that fac'd so many follies,
 at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?
 glory shineth in this face:
 as the glory is the face;
 [Dashes the glass against the ground.

For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers.—
 Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport,—
 How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
 Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
 The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.
 The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see:—
 'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
 And these external manners of lament
 Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,
 That swells with silence in the tortur'd soul;
 There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,
 For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st
 Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way
 How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,
 And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
 Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.
 K. Rich. Fair cousin? Why, I am greater than a king:

For, when I was a king, my flatterers
 Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
 I have a king here to my flatterer.
 Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.
 K. Rich. And shall I have?

Boling. Yet shall.
 K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.
 Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.
 Boling. Go, some of you, convey him to the Tower.
 K. Rich. O, good! Convey?—Conveyers are you
 all,

That rise thus nimble by a true king's fall.
 [Exit K. Richard, some Lords, and a Guard.
 Boling. On Wednesday next, we solemnly set down
 Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.

[Exit all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.
 Car. The woe's to come; the children yet unborn Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy elergymen, is there no plot
 To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot. Before I freely speak my mind herein,
 You shall not only take the sacrament
 To bury mine intents, but to effect:
 Whatever I shall happen to devise:—
 I see your brows are full of discontent,
 Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears;
 Come home with me to supper; I will lay
 A plot, shall show us all a merry day. [Exit.

ACT THE FIFTH.

SCENE I.

London. A street leading to the Tower.
 Enter Queen, and Ladies.

This way the king will come; this is the Caesar's ill-erected tower, flint bosom my condemned lord

 a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke:
 as rest, if this rebellious earth resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King RICHARD, and Guards.

Not see, or rather do not see,
 see wither: Yet look up; behold;
 in pity may dissolve to dew, him fresh again with true-love tears.—
 the model where old Troy did stand;
 of honour; thou king Richard's tomb,
 ing Richard; thou most beautiful inn,
 ld hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
 mph is become an alehouse guest?
 Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
 ny end too sudden: learn, good soul,
 ur former state a happy dream;
 sh awak'd, the truth of what we are but this: I am sworn brother, sweet, necessity; and he and I

Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France,
 And cloister thee in some religious house:
 Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
 Which our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind

Transform'd, and weakened? Hath Bolingbroke Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
 The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
 And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
 To be o'erpower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,
 Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod;
 And fawn on rage with base humility,
 Which art a lion, and a king of beasts?

K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught but beasts,

I had been still a happy king of men.
 Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for France:
 Think, I am dead; and that even here thou tak'st,
 As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
 In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
 With good old folks; and let them tell thee tales
 Of woeful ages, long ago betid:
 And, ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
 Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
 And send the hearers weeping to their beds.
 For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
 The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,

And, in compassion, weep the fire out:
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd;

You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.—
And, madam, there is order ta'en for you;
With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder, wherewithal

The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,—
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head, Shall break into corruption: thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all;
And he shall think, that thou, which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear, to hate; and hate turns one or both,
To worthy danger, and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.
Take leave, and part; for you must part forthwith.

K. Rich. Doubly divorce'd!—Bad men, ye violate
A twofold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me;
And then, betwixt me and my married wife.—
Let me un-kiss the oath 'twixt thee and me;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.—
Part us, Northumberland; I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime;
My wife to France; from whence, set forth in pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas, or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?
K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.
North. That were some love, but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.
K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.

Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off, than—near, be ne'er the near'.

Go, country way with sighs; I, mine with groans.
Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,

And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus I take thy heart.

[They kiss.]
Queen. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part,

To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart,
[Kiss again.]

So, now I have mine own again, begone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay:

Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. A room in the Duke of York's palace.

Enter YORK, and his Duchess.

Duch. My lord, you told me, you would tell the rest,

When weeping made you break the story off
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
When rude misgovern'd hands, from window's tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Boling-broke,—

Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,—
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course, While all tongues cried—God save thee, Boling-
broke!

You would have thought the very window
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls,
With painted imag'ry, had said at once,—
Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!
Whilst he, from one side to the other turn'
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's
Bespake them thus,—I thank you, country;
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rides while?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him, that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even so, or with much more contempt, me
Did scowl on Richard; no man cried, God save
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome here:
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shook
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,—
That had not God, for some strong purpose
The hearts of men, they must perforce have
And barbarism itself have pitied him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events;
To whose high will we bound our calm
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter AUMERLE.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle's friend
But that is lost, for being Richard's friend
And, madam, you must call him Rutland
I am in parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Duch. Welcome, my son: Who are they

That strew the green lap of the new-comer
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly

What news from Oxford? hold those

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Windsor. A room in the Castle.

Bolingbroke as King; PERCY, and other Lords.

Can no man tell of my unthrifty son?
three months, since I did see him last:— ague hang over us, 'tis he.
to God, my lords, he might be found:
t London, 'mongst the taverns there,
they say, he daily doth frequent,
restrained loose companions;
b, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
our watch, and rob our passengers;
, young, wanton, and effeminate boy,
the point of honour, to support ute a crew.

My lord, some two days since I saw the ace;

him of these triumphs held at Oxford.
And what said the gallant?
His answer was,—he would unto the stewes;
the common'st creature pluck a glove, it as a favour; and with that I unhorse the lustiest challenger.
As dissolute, as desperate; yet, through both e sparkles of a better hope,

he matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
[Kneels.]

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.

Boling. Intended, or committed, was this fault?
If but the first, how heinous ere it be,
To win thy after-love, I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave, that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire. [Aumerle locks the door.]

York. [Within.] My liege, beware; look to thyself;
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I'll make thee safe. [Drawing.]

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand;
Thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool-hardy king:

Shall I, for love, speak treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

[Bolingbroke opens the door.]

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;
Recover breath; tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me; read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. 'Twas, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.—
I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king;

Fear, and not love, begets his penitence:
Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove

A serpent, that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O heinous, stroug, and bold conspiracy!—
O loyal father of a treacherous son!

Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream through muddy passages,
Hath held his current, and defil'd himself!

Thy overflow of good converts to bad;
And thy abundant goodness shall excuse

This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd;
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,
As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.

Mine honour lives, when his dishonour dies,
Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies:

Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What ho, my liege!—for God's sake let me in.

Boling. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; 'tis I,
Speak with me, pity me, open the door;
A beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is alter'd—from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to The Beggar and the King—

My dangerous cousin, let your mother in;
I know, she's come to pray for your foul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins, for his forgiveness, prosper may.

This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound;
This, let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter DUCHESS.

Duch. O king, believe not this hard-hearted man;
Love, loving not itself, none other can.

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?

Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear?
Duch. Sweet York, be patient: Hear me, gentle liege. [Kneels.]

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:
For ever will I kneel upon my knees,
And never see day, that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers, I bend my knee.
[Kneels.]

York. Against them both, my true joints wounded be. [Kneels.]

Ill may'st thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!

Duch. Pleads he in earnest? look upon his face;

His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:
He prays but faintly, and would be denied;
We pray with heart, and soul, and all beside:
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;
Our knees shall kneel, till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
Ours, of true zeal, and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray his; then let them have
That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch.

Nay, do not say—stand up;
But, pardon, first; and afterwards, stand up.
An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon—should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now;
Say—pardon, king, let pity teach thee how:
The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
No word like pardon, for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king; say, pardonnez moy.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?
Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That set'st the word itself against the word!—
Speak, pardon, as 'tis current in our land;
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there:
Or, in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear;
That, hearing how our complaints and prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee, pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch.

I do not sue to stand,
Pardon is all the suit, I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch.

O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again;
Twice saying pardon, doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.

Boling.

With all my heart
I pardon him.

Duch.

A god on earth thou art.—
Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law,—and the abbot,

With all the rest of that consorted crew,— Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.—
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are:
They shall not live within this world, I swear,
But I will have them, if I once know where.
Uncle, farewell,—and cousin too, adieu:
Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Duch. Come, my old son;—I pray God make thee new. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

Enter EXTON, and a Servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake?

Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?
Was it not so?

Serv.

Those were his very words.

Exton. Have I no friend? quoth he: he spake it
twice,

And urg'd it twice together; did he not?

Serv.

He did.

Exton. And speaking it, he wistfully look'd on me;
As who should say,—I would, thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart;
Meaning, the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go;
I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Pomfret. The dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. I have been studying how to compare
This prison, where I live, unto the world:
And, for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it;—Yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul, the father: and these two heget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world;

For no thought is contented. The better

Enter Keeper, with a dish.

Fellow, give place; here is no longer stay.
[To the Groom.]

Rick. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away.
sw. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.

F. My lord, will't please you to fall to!

Rick. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.

F. My lord, I dare not; sir Pierce of Exton, who came from the king, commands the contrary.

Rick. The devil take Henry of Lancaster, and

thee!

Food is stale, and I am weary of it.

F. Help, help, help!
[Beats the Keeper.]

Enter EXTON, and Servants, armed.

Rick. How now? what means death in this rude assault?

sw. Thy own hand yields thy death's instrument.

[Snatching a weapon, and killing one.]

Go on, and fill another room in hell.

He kills another, then Exton strikes him down.

His hand shall burn in never-quenching fire, staggering thus my person.—Exton, thy fierce

hand

with the king's blood stain'd the king's own land.

Mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high;

my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.

[Dies.]

sw. As full of valour, as of royal blood:

How have I spilt; O, would the deed were good!

Now the devil, that told me—I did well,

that this deed is chronicled in hell.

Lead king to the living king I'll bear;—

Attend the rest, and give them burial here.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

Windsor. A room in the Castle.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and YORK, with Lords, and Attendants.

Y. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear, is the rebels have consum'd with fire

the town of Cicester in Gloucestershire;

whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

sw. My lord: What is the news?

Y. First, to thy sacred state I wish all happiness.

The next news is,—I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper.]
Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains:
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Beunet Seely;

Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,

That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;

Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY, with the Bishop of CARLISLE.

Percy. The grand conspirator, abbot of Westminster,

With clog of conscience, and sour melancholy,

Hath yielded up his body to the grave;

But here is Carlisle living, to abide

Thy kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom:—

Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,

More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life;

So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife;

For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,

High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with Attendants bearing a coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present

Thy buried fear; herein all breathless lies

The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,

Richard of Bourdeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast

wrought

A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand,

Upon my head, and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed.

Boling. They love not poison, that do poison need.

Nor do I thee; though I did wish him dead,

I hate the murderer, love him murdered.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,

But neither my good word, nor princely favour:

With Cain go wander through the shade of night,

And never show thy head by day nor light.—

Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,

That blood should sprinkle me, to make me grow:

Come, mourn with me for what I do lament,

And put on sullen black incontinent;

I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,

To wash this blood off from my guilty hand:

March sadly after; grace my mournings here,

In weeping after his untimely bier. [Exeunt.]

ACT THE FIRST.

SCENE I.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, WESTMORELAND, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
 Find we a time for frighted peace to pant,
 And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
 To be commenc'd in stronds afar remote.
 No more the thirsty Erimnys of this soil
 Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood;
 No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
 Nor bruise her flowrets with the armed hoofs
 Of hostile paces: those opposed eyes,
 Which,—like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
 All of one nature, of one substance bred,—
 Did lately meet in the intestine shock
 And furious close of civil butchery,
 Shall now, in mutual, well-beseeming ranks,
 March all one way; and be no more oppos'd
 Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies:
 The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
 No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends,
 As far as to the sepulchre of Christ, (Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
 We are impressed and engaged to fight,)
 Forthwith a power of English shall we levy;
 Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb,
 To chase these pagans in those holy fields,
 Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
 Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
 For our advantage on the bitter cross.
 But this our purpose is a twelve-month old,
 And bootless 'tis to tell you—we will go;
 Therefore we meet not now:—Then let me hear
 Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
 What yesternight our council did decree,
 In forwarding this dear expedience.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
 And many limits of the charge set down
 But yesternight: when, all athwart there came
 A post from Wales, loaden with heavy news;
 Whose worst was,—that the noble Mortimer,
 Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
 Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
 And a thousand of his people butchered:
 Upon whose dead corps there was much misuse,
 Such beastly, shameless transformation,
 By those Welshwomen done, as may not be,

Without much shame, re-told or spoken of.
K. Hen. It seems then, that the tidings of this broil Brake off our business for the Holy land.
West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious
 lord;

For more uneven and unwelcome news
 Came from the north, and thus it did import.
 On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
 Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
 That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
 At Holmedon met,
 Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;
 As by discharge of their artillery,
 And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
 For he, that brought them, in the very heat
 And pride of their contention did take horse, Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industrious friend,
 Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
 Stain'd with the variation of each soil
 Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
 And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
 The earl of Douglas is discomfited;
 Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights, Balk'd in their own blood, did sir Walter see On Holmedon's plains: Of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake the earl of Fife, and eldest son
 To beaten Douglas; and the earls of Athol,
 Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith.
 And is not this an honourable spoil?
 A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not?
West. In faith,

It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.
K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin
 In envy, that my lord Northumberland
 Should be the father of so blest a son:
 A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue;
 Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant;
 Who is sweet fortune's minion, and her pride:
 Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,
 See riot and dishonour stain the brow
 Of my young Harry. O, that it could be prov'd,
 That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
 In cradle-clothes our children, where they lay,
 And call'd mine—Percy, his—Plantagenet!
 Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
 But let him from my thoughts:—What think you,
 coz,
 Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners

Act 2. Sc. 2.

Published by W. Pickering 57 Chancery Lane 1824.

Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester,

Malevolent to you in all aspects;
Which makes him prone himself, and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And, for this cause, awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Come, on Wednesday next our council we Will hold at Windsor, so inform the lords:
But come yourself with speed to us again;

For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The same. Another room in the palace.

Enter HENRY Prince of Wales, and FALSTAFF.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?

P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuckling thee after supper, and slouping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotton to demand that truly, which thou would'st truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of hawks, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd taffata; I see no reason, why thou should'st be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me, now, Hal: for we, that take purses, go by the moon and seven stars; and not by Phoebus,—he, that wandering light as fair. And, I pray thee, sweet wag, when thou art king,—as, God save thy grace, (majesty,
I should say; for grace thou wilt have none.)—
P. Hen. What! none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

P. Hen. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly.
Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's beauty; let us be—Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon: And let me say, we be men of good government; being governed as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress, the moon, under whose countenance we—steal.

P. Hen. Thou say'st well; and it holds well too:
for the fortune of us that are the moon's men, doth ebb and flow like the sea; being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As, for proof, now: A purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing—lay by; and spent with crying—bring in: now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder; and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench!

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of écarlate?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag? what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have
I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning, many a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that were it not here apparent, that thou art heir apparent,—But, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England, when thou art king? and resolution thus fobbed as it is, with the rusty curb of old father antick the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already; I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits: whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat, or a lugged bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion; or a lover's lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

P. Hen. What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similies; and art, indeed, the most comparative, rascalliest,— sweet young prince.—But, Hal, I pr'ythee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought: An old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about ynu, sir; but I marked him not: and yet he talked very wisely; but I regarded him not: and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too.

P. Hen. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.

Fal. O thou hast damnable iteration; and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal.—God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain; I'll be damned for never a king's son in Christendom.

P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack?

Fal. Where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one; an I do not, call me villain, and baffle me.

P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee;
from praying, to purse-taking.

Enter POINS, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Poins!—
Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match.
O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain, that ever cried, Stand, to a true man.

P. Hen. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal.—What says monsieur Remorse? What says sir John Sack-and-Sugar? Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good-friday last for a cup of Madeira, and a cold capon's leg?

P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word, the devil shall have his bargain; for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs, he will give the devil his due.

Poins. Then art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

Poins. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill: There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have visors for you all, you have horses for yourselves; Gadshill lies to night in Rochester; I have hespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap; we may do it as secure as sleep: If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Fal. Hear me, Yedward; if I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poins. You will, chops?

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one!

P. Hen. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I, by my faith.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou earnest not of the blood royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

P. Hen. Well, then once in my days I'll be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I pr'ythee, leave the prince and me alone; I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, may'st thou have the spirit of persuasion, and he the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake,) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: You shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell All-hallowen summer! [Exit Falstaff.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow; I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto, and Gadshill, shall rob those men that we have already way-laid; yourself, and I, will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves: which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Ay, but, 'tis like, that they will know us, by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see, I'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce, to immask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. But, I doubt, they will be too hard for us.

Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies, that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper: how thirty at least, he fought with; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and, in the reproof of this, lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee; provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewell.

Poins. Farewell, my lord. [Exit Poins.]

P. Hen. I know you all, and will a while uphold The unyok'd humour of your idleness: Yet herein will I imitate the sun;

Who doth permit the base contagious clouds To smother up his beauty from the world, That, when he please again to be himself, Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at, By breaking through the foul and ugly mists Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him.

If all the year were playing holidays, To sport would be as tedious as to work;

But, when they seldom come, they wish'd-for come, And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.

So, when this loose behaviour I throw off, And pay the debt I never promised,

By how much better than my word I am, By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;

And, like bright metal on a sullen ground, My reformation, glittering o'er my fault, Shall show more goodly, and attract more eyes,

Than that, which hath no foil to set it off. I'll so offend, to make offence a skill; Redeeming time, when men think least I will.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

The same. Another room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, NORTHUMBERLAND, WORCESTER, HOTSPIUR, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and to Unapt to stir at these indignities, And you have found me; for, accordingly

You tread upon my patience: but, be sure I will from henceforth rather be myself,

Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as you

And therefore lost that title of respect, Which the proud soul ne'er pays, but to the

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little The scourge of greatness to be used on it; And that same greatness too, which our eyes

Have help to make so portly.

North. My lord,—
K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone, for I see And disobedience in thine eye: O, sir, Your presence is too bold and peremptory

And majesty might never yet endure The moody frontier of a servant brow. You have good leave to leave us; when we need

Your use and counsel, we shall send for you. [Exit Worcester.]

You were about to speak.
North. Yea, my good lord, These prisoners in your highness' name

Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took Were, as he says, not with such strength

As is deliver'd to your majesty: Either envy, therefore, or misprision

Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.
Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners. But, I remember, when the fight was do

When I was dry with rage, and extreme Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword

Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly cut, Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-time. He was perfum'd like a milliner;

And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held A pouncet-box, which ever and anon

He gave his nose, and took't away again. Who, therewith angry, when it next came

Took it in snuff:—and still he smil'd, as if And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,

He call'd them:—untaught knaves, unmannerly, To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse

Betwixt the wind and his nobility. With many holiday and lady terms

He question'd me; among the rest demand My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf.

I then, all smarting, with my wounds beginning

To be so pester'd with a popinjay, Out of my grief and my impatience,

Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what He should, or he should not;—for he made

To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet, And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,

Of guns, and drums, and wounds, (God save the mark!)

And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth Was parmaceti, for an inward bruise;

And that it was great pity, so it was, That villainous salt-petre should be digg'd

Out of the bowels of the harmless earth, Which many a good tall fellow had desired

So cowardly; and, but for these vile guns, He would himself have been a soldier. This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord,

I answer'd indirectly, as I said;

And, I beseech you, let not his report

Come current for an accusation,

Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance consider'd, good my lord,

Whatever Harry Percy then had said,

To such a person, and in such a place,

At such a time, with all the rest re-told,

May reasonably die, and never rise

To do him wrong, or any way impeach

What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his part with proviso, and exception,—

 If we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer; so, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd the lives of those, that he did lead to fight against the great magician, damn'd Glendower; his daughter, as we hear, the earl of March hath lately married. Shall our coffers then be emptied, to redeem a traitor home?
 Will we buy treason? and indent with fears,
 when they have lost and forfeited themselves?
 On the barren mountains let him starve;
 I shall never hold that man my friend, whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost to ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
 never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
 by the chance of war;—To prove that true,
 I do no more but one tongue for all those wounds, whose mouthed wounds, which valiantly he took,
 were on the gentle Severn's sedgey bank,
 in single opposition, hand to hand,
 he did confound the best part of an hour changing hardiment with great Glendower:
 three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink,

an agreement, of swift Severn's flood;
 so then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
 he fearfully among the trembling reeds, hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
 red-stained with these valiant combatants.
 For did here and rotten policy render her working with such deadly wounds; never could the noble Mortimer give so many, and all willingly:
 a lie him not be slander'd with revolt.

Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him,

never did encounter with Glendower;
 all these,
 durst as well have met the devil alone,
 Owen Glendower for an enemy.
 not ashamed? But, sirrah, henceforth
 I do not hear you speak of Mortimer:
 I do me your prisoners with the speediest means,
 you shall hear in such a kind from me as will displease you.—My lord Northumberland, license your departure with your son:—
 I do us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King Henry, Blunt, and Train.]
Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them,
 I'll not send them:—I will after straight,
 I'll tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
 though it be with hazard of my head, Hot. What, drunk with choler? stay, and pause awhile;
 he comes your uncle.

Re-enter WORCESTER.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
 I will speak of him; and let my soul be merciful, if I do not join with him:
 on his part, I'll empty all these veins,
 I'll shed my dear blood drop by drop i'th' dust,
 I will lift the down-trod Mortimer high i'th' air as this unthankful king, this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.
Hot. Brother, the king hath made your nephew
 mad.

Hot. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?
 He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
 when I urg'd the ransom once again my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale;
 on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
 smiling even at the name of Mortimer.

Hot. I cannot blame him: Was he not proclaim'd Richard, that dead is, the next in blood?
Hot. He was; I heard the proclamation:
 I then it was, when the unhappy king whose wrongs in us God pardon! did set forth on his Irish expedition;
 whence he, intercepted, did return
 he depos'd, and, shortly, murdered.

Hot. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soft, I pray you; Did king Richard then proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer heir to the crown?

North. He did; myself did bear it.

Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king, that wish'd him on the barren mountains starv'd.
 But shall it be, that you,—that set the crown upon the head of this forgetful man;
 And, for his sake, wear the detested blot of murder's subornation,—shall it be,
 that you a world of curses undergo;
 Being the agents, or base second means,
 the cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?—
 O, pardon me, that I descend so low, to show the line, and the predicament, wherein you range under this subtle king.—
 Shall it for shame be spoken in these days, or fill up chronicles in time to come,
 that men of your nobility and power did gage them both in an unjust behalf,—
 As both of you, God pardon it! have done,—
 To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose, and plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke?
 And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken, that you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
 by him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
 No; yet time serves, wherein you may redeem your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves into the good thoughts of the world again:
 Revenge the jeering, and disdain'd contempt,
 of this proud king; who studies, day and night,
 to answer all the debt he owes to you,
 even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
 Therefore, I say,—

Wor. Peace, cousin, say no more:

And now I will unclasp a secret book,
 and to your quick-conceiving discontents
 I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
 As full of peril, and advent'rous spirit,
 as to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
 on the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night:—or sink or swim:
 Send danger from the east unto the west,
 so honour cross it from the north to south,
 and let them grapple; O! the blood more stirs,
 to rouse a lion, than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap, to pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon;
 or dive into the bottom of the deep,
 where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
 and pluck up drowned honour by the locks;
 so he, that doth redeem her thence, might wear,
 without corral, all her dignities:
 but out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here, but not the form of what he should attend.—
 Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots, that are your prisoners,— I'll keep them all;
 by heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
 no, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not:
 I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away, and lend no ear unto my purposes.—
 Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:—
 he said, he would not ransom Mortimer;
 forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
 but I will find him, when he lies asleep,
 and in his ear I'll holla—Mortimer!

Hot. Nay,
 I'll have a starting shall be taught to speak
 nothing but Mortimer, and give it him, to keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you,
 Cousin; a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy, save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke:
 and that same sword-and-buckler prince of Wales,— but that I think his father loves him not,
 and would be glad he met with some mischance,
 I'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman! I will talk to you, When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient fool Art thou, to break into this woman's mood; Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own?

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods, Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.

In Richard's time,—What do you call the place?— A plague upon't!—it is in Gloucestershire;—

'Twas where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept; His uncle York;—where I first bow'd my knee

Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke, When you and he came back from Ravensburg.

North. At Berkley castle. Hot. You say true:—

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!

Look,—when his infant fortune came to age, And,—gentle Harry Percy,—and, kind cousin,— O, the devil take such cozeners!—God forgive me!

Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again; We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, i'faith.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners. Deliver them up without their ransome straight, And make the Douglas' son your only mean For powers in Scotland; which,—for divers reasons, Which I shall send you written,—be assur'd, Will easily be granted.—You, my lord,—

[To Northumberland.
Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,— Shall secretly into the bosom creep Of that same noble prelate, well below'd, The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is't not?

Wor. True; who bears hard

His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scro I speak not this in estimation, As what I think might be, but what I know Is ruminated, plotted, and set down; And only stays but to behold the face Of that occasion, that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it; upon my life, it will do. North. Before the game's a-foot, thou still slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble! And then the power of Scotland, and of York To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they slip. Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us provide To save our heads by raising of a head:

For, hear ourselves as even as we can, The king will always think him in our debt And think we think ourselves unsatisfied, Till he hath found a time to pay us home. And see already, how he doth begin

To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does; we'll be reveng'd. Wor. Cousin, farewell:—No further go,

Than I by letters shall direct your course. When time is ripe, (which will be sudden)

I'll steal to Glendower, and lord Mortimer Where you and Douglas, and our powers meet, (As I will fashion it,) shall happily meet, To bear our fortunes in our own strong arm Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother: we shall I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu:—O, let the hours be Till fields, and blows, and groans approach sport!

ACT THE SECOND.

SCENE I.

Rochester. An inn yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse is not packed. What ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots: this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! never joyed, since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think, this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a tench.

1 Car. Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jorden, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach.

1 Car. What, ostler! come away and be hanged, come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 Car. 'Odsbody! the turkies in my pannier are quite starved.—What, ostler!—A plague on thee; hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain.—Come, and be hanged:—Hast no faith in thee?

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

1 Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern to my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye; I know worth two of that, i'faith.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend thy lantern, quoth a?—marry, I'll see thee first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you come to London?

2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, v up the gentlemen; they will along with c for they have great charge. [Exeunt Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-

Gads. That's even as fair as—at hand the chamberlain: for thou variest no m picking of purses, than giving direction d labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, master Gadshill. current, that I told you yesternight: T's franklin in the wild of Kent, hath brou three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard it to one of his company, last night at s kind of auditor; one that hath abundance larg too, God knows what. They are up alre call for eggs and butter: they will away p Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with s cholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, l for the hangman; for, I know, thou wip saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falseh

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the h if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows: if hang, old sir John hangs with me; an knowest, he's no starveling. Tut! there Trojans that thou drestest not of, the sport sake, are content to do the professi grace; that 'would, if matters should b into, for their own credit sake, make all and with no foot land-rakers, no long-staff, no strikers; none of these mad, mustachio-hued malt-worms: but with nobility, and dillity; bargomasters, and great oneyers; such hold in; such as will strike sooner than and speak sooner than drink, and drink than pray: And yet I lie; for they pray ally to their saint, the commonwealth; or, not pray to her, but prey on her; for they ride i down on her, and make her their boots.

u. What, the commonwealth their boots? he hold out water in foul way?

v. She will, she will; justice hath liquored We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have cept of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

w. Nay, by my faith; I think you are more as to the night, than to fern-seed, for your invisible.

x. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a in our purchase, as I am a true man.

y. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a hief.

z. Go to; Homo is a common name to all Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the Farewell, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The road by Gadshill.

Prince HENRY, and POINS; BARDOLPH and PETO, at some distance.

u. Come, shelter, shelter; I have removed B's horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet. ten. Stand close.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Points! Points, and he hanged! Points!
ten. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal; What a ag dost thou keep!

Where's Poins, Hal?
ten. He is walked up to the top of the hill; I seek him. [Pretends to seek Poins.]

I am accursed to rob in that thief's com-the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied know not where. If I travel but four foot squire further afoot, I shall break my wind. I doubt not but to die a fair death for all f I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I forsworn his company hourly any time this id-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched he rogue's company. If the rascal have not me medicines to make me love him, I'll be I; it could not be else; I have drunk medi-Points!—Hal!—a plague upon you both!—igh!—Peto!—I'll starve, ere I'll rob a foot r. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, a true man, and leave these rogues, I am the varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight of uneven ground, is threescore and ten miles with me; and the stony-hearted villains know enough: A plague upon't, when thieves cannot e to one another! [They whistle.] Whew!—ue upon you all! Give me my horse, you I; give me my horse, and be hanged.
ten. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down; lay thine se to the ground, and list if thou canst hear ad of travellers.

Have you any levers to lift me up again, down? 'Shlood, I'll not bear mine own flesh afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's uer. What a plague mean ye to colt me

ten. Thou liest, thou art not colted, thou art ed.

I pry'thee, good prince Hal, help me to my good king's son.

ten. Out, you rogue, shall I be your ostler! Go, hang thyself in thy own heir-apparent! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I not ballads made on you all, and sung to tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison; When is so forward, and afoot too,—I hate it.

Enter GADSHILL.

1. Stand.
So I do, against my will.
2. O, 'tis our setter; I know his voice.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visors; there's money of the king's coming down the hill; 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue; 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hang'd.

P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower; if they 'scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. Zounds! will they not rob us?

P. Hen. What, a coward, sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the prof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge; when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged.

P. Hen. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poins. Here, hard by; stand close.

[Exeunt P. Henry and Poins.]

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I; every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

I Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill: we'll walk afoot a while, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand.

Trav. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats: Ah! whorson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

I Trav. O, we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves; Are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I would your store were here! On, hacons, on! What, ye knaves? young men must live: You are grand-jurors are ye? We'll jure ye, i'faith.

[Exeunt Falstaff, &c. driving the Travellers out.]

Re-enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men: Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close, I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more valour in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.]

Poins. Villains.

[As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. Falstaff, after a blow or two, and the rest, run away, leaving their booty behind them.]

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse:

The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear So strongly, that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Wer't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Warkworth. A room in the castle.

Enter HOTSPUR, reading a letter.

—But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house.—He could be contented,—Why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house:—he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more. The purpose you undertake, is dangerous;—Why, that's certain; 'tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink: but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain; the time itself unsorted; and your whole plot too light, for the counterpoise of so great an opposition.—Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lack-brain is this? By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation: an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my lord of York commends the plot, and the general course of the action. 'Zounds, an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of next month? and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this? an infidel? Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action! Hang him! let him tell the king: We are prepared: I will set forward tonight.

Enter Lady PERCY.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O my good lord, why are you thus alone? For what offence have I, this fortnight, been A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? Tell me, sweet lord, what is't, that takes from thee Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep? Why dost thou bead thine eyes upon the earth; And start so often, when thou sit'st alone? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks; And given my treasures, and my rights of thee, To thick-ey'd musing, and curs'd melancholy? In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watch'd; And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars: Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed; Cry, Courage!—to the field! And thou hast talk'd Of sallies, and retires; of trenches, tents, Of palisades, frontiers, parapets; Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin; Of prisoner's ransome, and of soldiers slain, And all the 'currents of a heady fight. Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war, And thus hath so bestir'd thee in thy sleep, That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow, Like bubbles in a late-disturbed stream: And in thy face strange motions have appear'd, Such as we see, when men restrain their breath On some great sudden haste. O, what portents are these?

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand, And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho! is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Enter Servant.

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight: O esperance!— Bid Butler lead him forth into the park.

[Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. My horse.

My love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen, As you are toss'd with. In faith, I'll know your business, Harry, that I will I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir About his title; and hath sent for you, To line his enterprise: But if you go—

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love Lady. Come, come, you paraquito, answer Directly to this question, that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away, Away, you trifer!—Love?—I love thee no I care not for thee, Kate: this is no world To play with mamets, and to tilt with li We must have bloody noses, and crack'd And pass them current too.—Gods me, my l What say'st thou, Kate? what would'st th with me?

Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, Well, do not then; for, since you love me I will not love myself. Do you not love m Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride! And when I am o'horse-back, I will swear I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kat I must not have you henceforth question n Whither I go, nor reason whereabout:

Whither I must, I must; and, to conclud This evening must I leave you, gentle Kat I know you wise; but yet no further wise Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you as

But yet a woman: and for secrecy, No lady closer; for I well believe, Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not kr And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate!

Lady. How! so far? Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you Whither I go, thither shall you go too; To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.— Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. It must, of

SCENE IV.

Eastcheap. A room in the Boar's Head

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that f and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast thou been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, three or four score hogsheds. I have sou very base string of humility. Sirrah, I as brother to a leash of drawers; and can call by their Christian names, as—Tom, D Francis. They take it already upon their s that, though I be but prince of Wales, y the king of courtesy; and tell me flatly proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthia of mettle, a good boy,—by the Lord, so t me; and when I am king of England, I sh mand all the good lads in Eastcheap. The drinking deep, dying scarlet: and when you in your watering, they cry—hem! and bid i off.—To conclude, I am so good a pr one quarter of an hour, that I can drink v tinker in his own language during my life thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, t wert not with me in this action. But, swe to sweeten which name of Ned, I give t pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now in r by an under-skinker; one that never spal English in his life, than—Eight shillings e pence, and—You are welcome; with this s dition,—Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of b the Half-moon, or so. But, Ned, to drive a time till Falstaff come, I pr'ythee, do th in some by-room, while I question my puny to what end he gave me the sugar; and n never leave calling—Francis, that his tal may be nothing but—anon. Step aside, show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis!

[Exit.]

Enter FRANCIS.

1. Anon, anon, sir.—Look down into the grate, Ralph.

2. Come hither, Francis.

3. My lord.

4. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

5. Forsooth, five year, and as much as to—

6. [Within.] Francis!

7. Anon, anon, sir.

8. Five years! by'r lady, a long lease for nking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou saliant, as to play the coward with thy in- e, and to shew it a fair pair of heels, and am it?

9. O lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the in England, I could find in my heart—

10. [Within.] Francis!

11. Anon, anon, sir.

12. How old art thou, Francis?

13. Let me see,—About Michaelmas next I

14. [Within.] Francis!

15. Anon, sir.—Pray you, stay a little, my

16. Nay, but hark you, Francis: For the sugar

17. 'twas a penny-worth, was't not?

18. O lord, sir! I would it had been two.

19. I will give thee for it a thousand pound:

20. when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

21. [Within.] Francis!

22. Anon, anon.

23. Anon, Francis? No, Francis: but to- y, Francis; or, Francis, on Thursday; or, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis,—

24. My lord?

25. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jerkin, crystal- nott-pated, agate-ring, puke-stocking, cad- ter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

26. O lord, sir, who do you mean?

27. Why then, your brown bastard is your ink: for, look you, Francis, your white can- blet will sully: in Barbary, sir, it cannot

28. so much.

29. What, sir?

30. [Within.] Francis!

31. Away, you rogue: Dost thou not hear all?

Here they both call him; and the drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such g? Look to the guests within. [Exit Fran.]

1. O lord, sir John, with half a dozen more, are loor; Shall I let them in?

2. Let them alone awhile, and then open

3. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Re-enter POINS.

Anon, anon, sir.

1. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the are at the door; Shall we be merry?

2. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark at cunning match have you made with this be drawer; come, what's the issue?

3. I am now of all humours, that have themselves humours, since the old days of a Adam, to the pupil age of this present

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen!—Give me a cup of sack, boy.—Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew netherstocks, and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards!—Give me a cup of sack, rogue.—Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks.]

P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the son! If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too: There is nothing but rogery to be found in villanous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it; a villainous coward.—Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unalshed in England; and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while!

a had world, I say! I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or any thing: A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, wool-sack? what mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man! what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Poins there?

Poins. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst.

You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me.—Give me a cup of sack:—I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O, villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All's one for that. A plague of all cowards, still say I. [He drinks.]

P. Hen. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this morning.

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four, through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw, ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all cowards!—Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.

P. Hen. Speak, sirs; how was it done?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen,——

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us,——

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in toe other.

P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All? I know not what ye call, all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

Poins. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid; two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal,—if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward;—here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me,—

P. Hen. What, four? thou said'st but two, even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four, even now.

Fal. In buckram.

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else.

P. Hen. Pr'ythee let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of,—

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken,—

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground: But I followed me close, came in foot and hand; and, with a thought, seven of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two!

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves, in Kendal green, came at my back, and let drive at me;—for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts; thou knotty-pated fool; thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-keech,—

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason; What sayest thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

P. Hen. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin; by this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh;—

Fal. Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, bull's pizzle, you stock-fish,—O, for breath to utter what is like thee!—you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck;—

P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again: and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you four set on four; you bound them, and were masters of their wealth.—Mark now, how plain a tale shall put you down.—Then did we two set on you four: and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it; yea, and can show it you here in the house:—and, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done; and then say, it was in fight? What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack: What trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: Was it for me to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware instinct; the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was a coward on instinct. I shall the better of myself and thee, during my life, for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the hostess, clap to the doors; watch to-night to-morrow.—Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, the titles of good fellowship come to you! shall we be merry? shall we have a play-pore?

P. Hen. Content;—and the argument shall thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lov'st me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. My lord the prince,—

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess say'st thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman the court at door, would speak with you: he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make a royal man, and send him back again to my father.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed-night?—Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Fal. 'Faith, and I'll send him packing.

P. Hen. Now, sirs; by'r lady, you fought—so did you, Peto;—so did you, Bardoly, are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you not touch the true prince; no,—fie!

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

P. Hen. Tell me now in earnest, Hostess, Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger said, he would swear truth out of England would make you believe it was done in fig persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with grass, to make them bleed; and then to blow our garments with it, and to swear it was of true men. I did that I did not this before, I blushed to hear his monstrous device.

P. Hen. O villain, thou stolest a cup eighteen years ago, and wert taken with it, and ever since thou hast blushed except Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, thou ran'st away; What instinct hadst thou?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors you behold these exhalations?

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.

Bard. Cholour, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone now, my sweet creature of bombast? 'Tis 't' ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own Fal. My own knee? when I was about the Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the world, could have crept into any alderman's thumb. A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a like a bladder. There's villainous news here was sir John Bracy from your father must to the court in the morning. That s' fellow of the north, Percy; and he of West gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made cuckold, and swore the devil his true upon the cross of a Welsh hook,—What, call you him?

Poins. O, Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same;—and his law, Mortimer; and old Northumberland that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that o'horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He, that rides at high speed, with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, to praise him so for running.

O'horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will dge a foot.

es. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

I grant ye, upon instioct. Well, he is there d oae Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand:—judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry; whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false:—nay, I'll tinkle ye for a young prince, i'faith.

P. Hen. Swearst thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a tun of man is thy companion.

Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of headliness, that swoln parcel of dropnies, that hugh bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villany? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Fal. I would your grace would take me with you; Whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know, thou dost.

Fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, (the more the pity,) his white hairs do witness it: but that he is (saving your reverence,) a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know, is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins: but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company; banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knocking heard.]

[Exeunt Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord; the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

Fal. Out, you rogue! play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess, hastily.

Host. O Jesu, my lord, my lord!—

Fal. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick: What's the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house; Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major: if you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope, I shall as soon be strangled with a halter, as another.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras;—the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face, and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

[Exeunt all but the Prince and Poins.]

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.—

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff; what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry Hath follow'd certain men unto this house.

P. Hen. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord; A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here; For I myself at this time have employ'd him. And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, Send him to answer thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charg'd withal: And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord: There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men, He shall be answerable; and so, farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

P. Hen. I think it is good morrow; Is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

[Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.]

P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.

Poins. Falstaff!—fast asleep behind the and snoring like a horse.

P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches Search his pockets. [Poins searches.] W thou found?

Item, Sauce, 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons, 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper, 2 l.

Item, Bread, a halfpenny.

P. Hen. O monstrous! but one half-penny of bread to this intolerable deal of sack there is else, keep close; we'll read it at vantage: there let him sleep till day. ACT THE THIRD.

SCENE I.

Bangor. A room in the Archdeacon's house.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer,—and cousin Glendower,— Will you sit down?— And, uncle Worcester:—A plague upon it! I have forgot the map.

Glen. No, here it is. Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur: For by that name as oft as Lancaster Doth speak or you, his cheek looks pale; and with A rising sigh, he wisheth you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glen. I cannot blame him: at my nativity, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cressets; and, at my birth, The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done At the same season, if your mother's cat had But kitten'd, though yourself had ne'er been born.

Glen. I say, the earth did shake, when I was born. Hot. And I say, the earth was not of my mind, If you suppose, as fearing you it shook.

Glen. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

Hot. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,

And not in fear of your nativity. Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions: oft the teeming earth Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd By the imprisoning of unruly wind Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving, Shakes the old beldame earth, and topples down Steeples and moss-grown towers. At your birth, Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, In passion shook.

Glen. Cousin, of many men I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave To tell you once again,—that at my birth, The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes; The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields. These signs have mark'd me extraordinary; And all the courses of my life do show, I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living,—clipp'd in with the sea That chides the banks of England, Scotland,

Wales,—

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out, that is but woman's son,

Can trace me in the tedious ways of art, And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think, there is no man speaks Welsh:—

I will to dinner.

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy; you will mad.

Hot. Methinks, my moiety, north from B In quantity equals not one of yours: See, how this river comes me cranking cuts me, from the best of all my land,

 A huge half moon, a monstrous cantle out,
 Have the current in this place damm'd up;
 Here the smug and silver Trent shall run
 In a new channel, fair and evenly:
 Shall not wind with such a deep indent,
 Rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Lead. Not wind? it shall, it must; you see, it doth.

Hot. Yea, mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up like advantage on the other side; lying the opposed continent as much, on the other side it takes from you.
For. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here, on this north side win this cape of land; then he runs straight and even.
Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.
Lead. I will not have it alter'd.

For. Will not you?

Lead. No, nor you shall not.

For. Who shall say me nay?

Lead. Why, that will I.

For. Let me not understand you then, like it in Welsh.

Lead. I can speak English, lord, as well as you; I was train'd up in the English court:

For. being but young, I framed to the harp an English ditty, lovely well,

Lead. gave the tongue a helpful ornament; true, that was never seen in you.

For. Marry, and I'm glad of 't with all my heart;

Lead. I rather be a kitten, and cry—mew, one of these same metre ballad-mongers:

For. I rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd, dry wheel grate on an axle-tree;

Lead. that would set my teeth nothing on edge, singing so much as mincing poetry;

For. like the fore'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Lead. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

For. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much land to my well-deserving friend;

Lead. in the way of bargain, mark ye me, will on the ninth part of a hair.

For. be indentures drawn? shall we be gone!

Lead. The moon shines fair, you may away by night:

For. haste the writer, and, withal,

Lead. with your wives of your departure hence: afraid, my daughter will run mad,

For. such she doth on her Mortimer. [Exit.

For. 7. fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

Lead. I cannot choose: sometimes he angers me, telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,

For. a dreamer Merlin and his prophecies; of a dragon and a finless fish,

Lead. a wing'd griffin, and a moulted raven, a ching lion, and a ramping cat,

For. such a deal of skumble-skamble stuff to me from my faith. I tell you what,—

Lead. I'd be but last night, at least nine hours, knocking up the several devils' names,

For. were his lackeys: I cried, humph,—and well,—

Lead. go to,—

For. mark'd him not a word. O, he's as tedious as a tired horse, a railing wife;

Lead. or than a smoky house:—I had rather live, cheese and garlick, in a windmill, far,

For. feed on cates, and have him talk to me, in a summer-house in Christendom.

Lead. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman; dingly well read, and profited

For. in concealments; valiant as a lion, and rous affable; and as beautiful as the Indies.

Lead. Shall I tell you, cousin? I'ds your temper in a high respect,

For. works himself even of his natural scope, you do cross his humour; 'faith, he does:

Lead. I want you, that man is not alive, so have tempted him as you have done,

For. not at the taste of danger and reproof; not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Lead. In faith, my lord, you are too wifful-blame; need your coming hither have done enough

For. him quite beside his patience.

You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault: Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood, (And that's the dearest grace it renders you,) Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage, Defect of manners, want of government, Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain: The least of which, haunting a nobleman, Loseth men's hearts; and leaves behind a stain Upon the beauty of all parts besides, Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd; good manners be your speed! Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me.— My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part with you, She'll be a soldier too, she'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her,—that she, and my aunt Percy, Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[Glendower speaks to his daughter in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.]

Glend. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry, One no persuasion can do good upon.

[Lady M. speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.]
Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens,

I am too perfect in; and, but for shame, In such a parley would I answer thee.

[Lady M. speaks.]
 I understand thy kisses, and thou mine, And that's a feeling disputation:

But I will never be a truant love, Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd, Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower, With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

[Lady M. speaks again.]

Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this.

Glend. She bids you

Upon the wanton rushes lay you down, And rest your gentle head upon her lap, And she will sing the song, that pleaseth you, And on your eye-lids crown the god of sleep,

Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness; Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep, As is the difference betwixt day and night, The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:

By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;

And those musicians, that shall play to you, Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence; Yet straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down: Come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose.

Glendower speaks some Welsh words, and then the musick plays.

Hot. Now I perceive, the devil understands Welsh; And 'tis no marvel, he's so humorous. By'r-lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical; for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Would'st thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 'tis a woman's fault.

Lady P. Now God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.

A Welsh song sung by Lady M.

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! 'Heart, you swear like a comfit-maker's wife! Not you, in good sooth; and, As true as I live; and, As God shall mend me; and, As sure as day: And giv'st such sarcent surety for thy oaths, As if thou never walk'dst further than Finshury. Swear me, Kate, like a lady, as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth, And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, To velvet-guards, and Sunday-citizens. Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. [Exit.

Glend. Come, come, lord Mortimer, you are as slow, As hot lord Percy is on fire to go. By this our book's drawn; we'll but seal, and then To horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

London. A room in the palace.

Enter King HENRY, Prince of Wales, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I Must have some conference: But be near at hand, For we shall presently have need of you. [Exeunt Lords.
